The Market.

Slowly but surely business is improving and now that mums are upon us it looks as if things would be in a very prosperous condition from now on. All the stores report satisfactory trade. There has been a large amount of funeral work well distributed among the trade and the many Jewish holidays that come at this time of year helped things wonderfully.

Roses still continue in heavy supply; consequently the price is kept down. Beauties are in constant demand and some fine stock is being handled. They sell out clean and at prices that average about $1 per foot of stem. Carnations are coming in more heavily every day and some that are right up to winter quality can be had. Of the better grades there are still not enough to go around. Gladioli are out of it, but dahlias are still here and sell well. Cosmos is fine and moves nicely. The supply of mums is increasing every day. The top price so far has been $3 per dozen. H. Weber & Sons Co., of Oakland, Md., sent Glory of Pacific and Polly Rose which were especially fine.

Various Notes.

There will be a meeting of the board of directors of the Florists' Society this week to revise the constitution. This is needed, as the original constitution has been changed from time to time and is rather confusing. The regular meeting of the society will be held in the club rooms on Saturday at 8 p. m. A large attendance is expected, as the discussions of new flower shows will be in order.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSEYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

CARL SONDEREGGER, the Nebraska nurseryman, has returned with his family from a summer's visit at his old home in Switzerland.

CHERRY prices will hold, apparently, as long as do rates on any other item. Stocks do not increase as rapidly as might be expected.

"GET all the roots." That is the admonition kept constantly before the employees in a certain western nursery. It is worth drilling in.

J. M. LINDSAY, Turtle Creek Nursery, near Austin, Minn., is building up a very nice local business through guaranteeing his stock and replacing any plant that dies or proves not true to name.

THE Clinton Falls Nursery Co., Owatonna, Minn., is hastening the completion of a second big storage and packing house. The fall shipments will be much the heaviest on record. The packing houses have been wired for electric light so that overtime may be worked.

THE weather is altogether too summery to suit the nurserymen in many districts. With summer heat and frequent rains the stock has not yet stopped growing and the fear is expressed that winter will descend so quickly that the usual amount of work cannot be accomplished.

WINTER KILLING OF TREES.

There is a marked contrast in the extent of the winter injury on bare soils—soils given clean cultivation—and on covered soils. The bare soils freeze deeper and the injury is much greater than on soils covered with a mulch or other material. The greater depth to which bare soils freeze in winter than covered soils was brought out in an experiment made at the Ohio State Experiment Station. A plat of peaches in an exposed situation was selected and a strip of sod ten to twelve feet wide removed from one row, leaving the bare surface of the soil fully exposed to the cold. Another row alongside was left in grass which had been clipped and allowed to lie upon the ground. Where the sod was removed the ground froze to a depth of eighteen inches, while under the thin sod covering of grass and weeds in the other row the ground froze to a depth of about eight inches. The trees in the bare ground "were very slow in starting into growth the following spring of 1904. All of the trees in this row were

DENVER.

The Market.

The month of September proved to be one of the best in many years, probably owing to the large number of weddings and general trade incident to the number of tourists here during the G. A. R. encampment, who left quite a little money in the city. And October starts out very well. We have had a good frost which was perhaps welcomed by most of the growers, but higher temperature the past week somewhat checked the retail trade. The indications are, however, that fall trade will be brisk.

Outdoor stock being all in, the buyers have gone back to the old favorites, roses and carnations, both of which are now coming in large quantities, and most of which are of good quality. American Beauties, generally speaking, are especially fine. The Park Floral Co. is cutting some of the finest they have ever grown, which perhaps is true of all the other growers. Bride, Maid and Chatenay are coming in large quantities, the majority of them good in stem, size and color. The new Richmond, of which so much has been said, appears to be pretty fair, but as yet it has not beat Liberty very much. A few Rosalind Orr English are seen and look pretty good, being a fine color.

Carnations are improving in quality every day, while the quantity is increasing also, all pretty good with the exception of the reds. Enchantress, Lady Bountiful and White Lawson are the best. Fiancee also is coming in fine, the color being good, as well as the stem. It looks like a favorite.

A few chrysanthemums are now on the market, both cut and plants. As the weather gets colder some fine stock will be seen. There has been some call for violets the past week and a few not very good ones are coming in. All "greens" are plentiful.

Various Notes.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Valentine have returned from their trip to the Pacific coast.

The Florists' Bowling League has organized for the season, electing R. S. Mahan, of the Alpha Floral Co., president, and E. S. Kennedy, of the Park Floral Co., secretary and treasurer. The league will bowl every Monday evening at the Brunswick alleys. It is starting on a good foundation and promises to be a banner season for the bowlers.

J. F. Wilcox, of Council Bluffs, Ia., was in the city a few days last week. Mr. Wilcox reports a very busy season.

N. A. Benson is cutting some very fine Enchantress, Lady Bountiful and Fiancee carnations.

Miss Scott, daughter of William Scott, has returned to her home in Buffalo after a two months' visit with her brother, Phil, and his family here.

OCEANIC, N. J.

The meeting of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society was held at Red Men's Hall, October 6. President Hale presided. Mr. Turner exhibited some Cattleya gigas measuring nine inches, the most beautifully colored we ever saw, scoring 95 points; and Odontoglossum grande, four sprays of enormous size with seven to nine flowers on a spray, which received 90 points. The society decided to have the school children invited to enter the flower show free if they are escorted by their respective teachers.

VIOLETS.

An Alien's Industry.

The entire violet growing industry in the vicinity of San Francisco has within the past few years passed into the hands of the Italians, Chinamen and Japanese. The other growers no longer seem to find this branch of the business profitable. There are several reasons for this but the principal one is that whenever any of the nationalities mentioned get interested in growing anything in the flower line that does not call for any particular skill they usually squeeze the balance of the trade out of it. Another reason I might mention is the question of help. Violets, above any other article, certainly take up time with the picking of the flowers, otherwise at this season of the year there is little to do. The Italian growers first solved this problem by training their children, 6 and upward, to go into the fields and do the cutting and bunching. As children are much better adapted to this sort of labor than are grown folks and as the Italian element are far famed for their large families, it was only a short time before the question of wages was settled. With the Chinese and Japanese the same spirit prevails and the subject of picking does not cut such a figure. It is wonderful how dexterous these folks become and a white man is left far in the rear in the race.

The Princess of Wales has become of recent years practically the only variety grown here. A few growers have patches of Marie Louise and Swanley White, but there is little call for them. Some of the retailers who ship to the interior extensively handle them in considerable quantities but among nine-tenths of the laity, when violets are spoken of, the single purple Princess of Wales is meant.

Violets, although not supposed to be very heavy feeders, do not do well over one season on the same piece of land; the plants will produce a quantity of flowers, but when the blooms grown under such conditions are compared with those taken from new ground the difference is very apparent. The selection of ground has a great deal to do with the popular flower. When the sand dunes are passed and we encounter the rich, black soil as well as the heavy, sandy loam extending from Ocean View as far as San Mateo, we are in the violet belt and it is possible to grow these flowers to perfection almost anywhere in the neighborhood I have mentioned. It is not advisable to go far inland, as the red spider, practically the only foe encountered in this line, does not thrive where foggy nights and moist breezes are the rule. In some specially favored spots this pest is absolutely unknown, whereas on higher and dryer ground a few miles away, violet culture has proved a failure.

Regarding the prices obtained, the retailers are now paying the growers $1 per dozen bunches, each containing about fifty blooms, and the demand is practically unlimited from September until May.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

Mums are becoming more plentiful and the retailers are feeling easier, as flowers of all kinds have been very scarce. Carnations, too, are more plentiful and in a couple of weeks, should the weather remain good, we will have them in abundance. Valley is equal to all demands, also green stuff of all kinds. Roses continue scarce, although there are signs of big crops to come in the near future. Outdoor stock of all kinds is getting very short. Business is quiet and the weather continues warm.

BATTLE CREEK, MICH.

C. Warburton has rebuilt the greenhouse which was burned last fall. His specialties are chrysanthemums and carnations but he also grows a general line of bedding plants.

J. S. Kribs, the Coldwater street florist, makes a specialty of violets and carnations, also bedding plants.

Levant Cole has rebuilt four of his greenhouses, using Garland gutters. He is trying 7,000 square feet of furring tile for bench bottoms, made by the National Fire Proofing Co. A general line is grown here, with roses, carnations and violets leading. Mr. Cole will construct a driveway around Deep Lake on his farm, so the public can view the natural fern beds, which are worth going a long way to see. He will also plant a quantity of Wichuraiana rose hybrids and perennial plants on the steep banks adjoining the lake.

Mr. Vandervort, gardener at the sanatorium, has his houses mainly filled with chrysanthemums, which are looking well.

H. M. Burt grows carnations and a general line of bedding plants at his greenhouses adjoining Oak Hill cemetery.

AUSTIN, TEX.—The Hyde Park Floral Co. is pushing work on some new greenhouses.

VALLEY CITY, N. D.—Charles E. Moore, who was for years with Geo. C. Moore at Detroit, Minn., has just completed his greenhouse and store. He reports business starting nicely.

ABUNDANCE (White)

The phenomenal yielder, the freest, earliest bloomer in existence, the most profitable carnation ever offered to the trade, easily gives four times as many flowers as the freest bloomer already introduced; a bench planted Aug. 31 is now in full bloom to which there will be no let up until thrown out next summer; come and see it, it will pay you if you are in the market for a carnation that will give you plenty of flowers at all times and not only at certain times. A good size, long stemmed flower. You can make no mistake by stocking up with it. Price for well-rooted cuttings, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate; cuttings delivered as soon as rooted; send in your order early as orders are filled in strict rotation. Unrooted cuttings at same rates with 25 extra on each 100. Cash before delivery.

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was made a special dahlia night, thirty-seven exhibitors contributing and the rooms were crowded all evening, a most favorable augury for a successful show, November 6 and 7. J. C. Williams, the nurseryman, of Montclair, staged twenty-two varieties in sixteen vases, principally new introductions, and Popkin & Collins and H. Hornacker staged commercial varieties. The remainder were Dreer's principal varieties displayed by the private gardeners. The premiums were awarded by the judges, Arthur Caparn, Malcolm MacRorie and George Von Qualen: To President D. Kindsgrab, gardener for Wm. Runkle; George Von Qualen, gardener for A. B. Jenkins; William Read, gardener for the Colgates. Other exhibitors represented were Stewart Hartshorne, John Crosby Brown, Douglas Robinson, William Barr, Henry Graves, Charles Hathaway and E. J. Brockett. J. B. D.

Order now while the weather permits shipping. Notice—When you undertake anything, do it well or not at all. This is our motto adopted 10 years ago when we imported the first lot of this well known pot plant, the ARAUCARIA EXCELSA from Belgium. These everlasting green foliaged pot plants are growing more in favor by the tasteful plant buyers of this land from year to year. Please watch the growth of our importation during the last 10 years: first year 100, second 250, third 500, fourth 1000, fifth 2,000. This year (1905) which is the 10th anniversary of our first importation, our spring importation amounted to 5,000. All these are grown for us under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that they were never before so nice and large for the money as this year. I herewith quote you special prices on these, in or out of:

A few of many testimonials recently received:

CANON CITY, COLO., July 29, 1905.

Mr. Godfrey Aschmann, Philadelphia, Pa.

Dear Sir—My order for Araucaria Excelsa arrived in fine condition. They were all right. Accept my thanks. E. R. BESS.

Dear Sir—The araucarias recently received from you are fine and I can get a good profit handling your stock. Yours very truly, LANCASTER, PA., Sept. 23, 1905.

Dear Sir—Araucarias arrived in good shape. They are strictly first-class and I am well pleased. You may expect to hear from me again.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

The city was thronged with thousands of visitors the past week to witness the Priests of Pallas parade and other attractions of carnival week. The visitors spent their money freely and the downtown stores report a brisk cut flower business.

There seems to be a veritable epidemic of price cutting among some of the dealers who make price instead of service the drawing card. Roses have sold as low as 25 cents per dozen and carnations sell anywhere from 15 cents to 50 cents per dozen. One department store advertised palms as low as 10 cents each.

Various Notes.

W. J. Barnes decorated the big department store of the Emery-Bird-Thayer Co. for their annual millinery opening. He says that last week was one of the busiest weeks he has experienced since he has been in the business.

Samuel Murray has a display of ferns and Gloire de Lorraine begonias at his greenhouses that cannot be excelled. He will exhibit some fine specimens at the flower show.

The growers in this vicinity are having an unusual amount of trouble with stem-rot in their carnations this season. One grower has had to replant over 200 plants in the past two weeks.

A. L. Harman, of Iola, was a visitor in town this week.

The city will hereafter grow its own bedding plants for the public parks. Heretofore all the plants for the park system have been purchased from the local florists, but the park board has ordered the material and will commence the erection of a range of houses at once. In the meantime cuttings are being rooted in frames. KAY-SEE.

Thrifty plants from 3-in. pots, in white, clear light pink, blue and bright scarlet, $5.00 per 100.

Field-Grown Asparagus Sprengeri

Those who have purchased our field-grown plants in the past are convinced that they are much superior to pot-grown, both for pots and bench culture.
When housed they immediately start into active growth, throwing up numerous growths, which come to perfection much earlier than those from pots. Field culture adds to the vigor of the plants and an enormous crop of green is the result.

PYRUS JAPONICA AS A HEDGE.

It cannot be said that the ordinary method of planting this Japanese pyrus, which is that of putting a plant here and there in the shrubberies, or placing an odd one to grow against a wall, is the best method of illustrating its beauty as a flowering plant. Some years since I collected what plants there were from the shrubberies, and arranged them on each side of a path near an entrance to the kitchen garden here, intending to treat them as a hedge on each side of the path. The plants were topped occasionally during the summer, and the side-shoots were repeatedly pinched, until now the hedges are eight feet high and nearly a yard through. The growth on the top is quite vigorous, and with that it is intended to form an arch over the path connecting the two hedges together. For the last two months the hedges have been one mass of blossom, the deep scarlet color having a gorgeous effect. In no other form of training can this plant display its beauty better. It is quite optional how high such a hedge shall grow; anything between four feet and eight feet will suffice. Stout plants put out two feet apart in deeply trenched, well manured soil quickly attain to a desirable height, and should be topped occasionally to induce a thickly grown base. When the desired height is attained much summer pruning of the young growth should be done to induce the formation of spurs as quickly as possible over the whole of the hedge, as from these a yearly crop of blossom is assured. There is no reason why other varieties of pyrus, especially the white-flowered form, should not be treated in a similar way.—Gardeners' Chronicle.

The REVIEW will appreciate the courtesy of its readers if they will send us the names and addresses of those in their vicinity who are growing vegetables under glass.

STEAM OR WATER.

Please let me know how many runs of pipe I need for five houses covering 60x150, built on the Dietrich short-span principle. The walls are cement half way up, the balance glass. These are to be used for carnations and are to be warmed by hot water. Or do you think steam better? I must keep 54 degrees when it is zero outside. P. O. K.

To heat your range with hot water, using 2-inch pipe, twenty-seven lines of pipe will be required. To heat it with steam, using 1 1/4-inch pipe, twenty-four lines will be required. With runs 150 feet long steam is in general most satisfactory unless some form of circulating pump is used in the hot water system.

A steam system will entail the expense of a night fireman unless hard coal is used. This is the chief drawback to steam, while the cost of installing hot water is an item to be considered. If you contemplate enlarging the plant in the near future steam would be preferable. L. C. C.

NEW CASTLE, IND.

The stock is in fine shape with all the growers here and each one is in line for a very prosperous season.

The South Park Floral Co. is just completing two more large rose houses.

Wm. Dittman has just purchased land for an extension next spring which will practically double his glass area. He had a very good September, his cut being large at a time when Beauties were not abundant in the Chicago market, with the result that his returns for the month were larger than those for last December.

I AM well pleased with the REVIEW and think the dollar invested in my subscription is bringing me big returns.—EMIL KOEPPEN, St. Louis, Mo.

PIPE TO DWELLING.

I would like to know if I can run a 2-inch pipe from my greenhouse boiler 125 feet to my dwelling, there to heat three radiators? The dwelling is five feet above the water line in the boiler but to avoid the driveway the main would have to drop to within six inches of the water line in the boiler. Would this work, using the main to bring back the condensation to where a bleader could be taken off to return it to the boiler? H. M.

If, as you state, it is necessary to drop the main flow from the boiler to the house to within six inches of the water line of the boiler, I think it would be much safer to carry an independent return from the radiators to the boiler rather than attempt to carry return water back to the bleader through the riser. It would be well to make the bleader about 1/2-inch and run a portion of it horizontally so as to allow the use of a swing check to prevent the water backing out of the main return into the riser. Keep the main up as high as possible, give it an even grade from the off-set to the house and put the bleader in the basement of the house and make a swing joint connection between the flow and return. L. C. C.

AN ENCLOSED VERANDA.

This fall I intend to enclose the east and south sides of a veranda to be used as a conservatory. It will contain 700 square feet of glass and about 6,000 cubic feet of air-space. It is to be partitioned in two sections. What size of boiler and what size and number of pipes would you recommend to maintain a night temperature of 45 and 60 degrees in the respective sections? The temperature seldom falls below zero here. Would it be safe to use hydrocyanic acid gas for fumigating such a place. The only connection with the house is by two windows. N. L.

I cannot give size of heater, or area of pipe necessary for your conservatory without more dimensions. State the size of each compartment and the temperature wanted; then I can give an intelligent answer.

No, it will not be safe to use hydrocyanic acid gas for fumigating such a compartment unless the work is done when the adjoining residence is entirely vacant. L. C. C.

ROSES

MULCHING.

To produce those high grade blooms of good color and substance, with a wealth of well developed foliage and marketable stems, the grower must have a good knowledge of the food required by his crops at the different stages of their growth.

As the plants increase in size and the benches fill with roots, the limited amount of nutritive substances contained in the few inches of soil on the bench will naturally become exhausted and the progressive grower should make it his duty to supply the plants with the necessary food as often as required.

By a careful study of the original compost and watching how the stock progresses, he will soon arrive at a correct idea of the quality of food required to supplement the waste.

To keep up a constant supply of those elements without incurring the danger of overfeeding during the short days it will be necessary to apply light mulches from time to time, these mulches to contain as near as possible the elements wanted by the stock at time of applying it and for some weeks afterwards.

When I say a light mulch I do not mean to convey the idea that the material must be of a light nature, but that it should be spread on lightly, so as not to exclude the sun's rays from the surface of the soil.

A good and safe mulch for stock during the winter can be made from decomposed cow manure and good fibrous loam in the proportion of two parts manure to one of soil. By the addition of the soil the gases are absorbed and kept in store for future use. It also lends weight to the material and prevents it from washing all over the bench.

Where soils are particularly soft and heavy a generous sprinkling of bone meal can be added to give stiffness to the stem and substance to petal and foliage. This can be alternated by using air-slaked lime or wood ashes, which have much the same effect and also add brilliancy to the color.

If the soil is light the food should contain more nitrogen, which can be obtained in sufficient quantities in cow manure, and consequently soil of this character will require more frequent applications of mulch than if the soil is heavy.

Care in watering after mulching is necessary, as the mulch absorbs and retains the moisture, thus giving the benches the appearance of being wet when an examination of the soil may show that beneath the mulch it is thoroughly dry. A daily examination of the condition of the soil after the mulch is spread makes assurance doubly sure and is sure to repay the trouble.

RIBES.

SYRINGING.

I am instructed by my superiors to spray or syringe the roses every solitary day, providing, of course, the weather is favorable. Is it necessary to do this seven days in the week at this time of year? There are no red spider, but I see mildew coming.

A. L. H.

At this season, when with the plants in full foliage and the short dark days approaching, when syringing cannot be indulged in with frequency, and when firing will have to be resumed, it is well to keep the syringe going on every favorable occasion, prevention being so much better than cure. Especially is this the case where Meteors or Beauties are concerned.

On tea roses, owing to the form of the leaves, it is easier to reach the spider and consequently they can do with less syringing than hybrids.

It is safer to use every precaution now than to have to regret the missed opportunities when dark, short days come.

RIBES.

VIOLETS OUTDOORS.

I wish to ask as to the best method of caring for violets outdoors in Michigan. They are fine plants. Can I get flowers early next spring? I will propagate more next year and grow them in the house. When should I begin propagating?

O. H. C.

The query is very indefinite, inasmuch as it is not stated whether the violet plants are in a frame or in the open ground; neither is the variety stated. I take it for granted that the grower either has them in a cold-frame or expects to build a frame around them. If he does so and covers the sash with mats, giving the violets treatment similar to that he gives his pansies in frames, he should be able to pick flowers quite early, especially if the frames are well located. As to propagating, it may be begun as soon as the frames are opened in spring and growth has been made suitable for cuttings, or one can wait until later and divide the old clumps when it comes time to plant them out.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

EXHIBITIONS AND EXHIBITING.

The coming week will see the opening of the show season, with Islip, N. Y., on October 24 and Madison, N. J., on October 26; Lenox, Mass., on October 25, and others. From present indications there will be lots of stock on hand, even though it is a little early.

The prospective exhibitor, if he is an old hand at the business, has already got his classes planned in his mind's eye and, by an occasional visit to size up his neighbor's plants, knows pretty well where he stands. To the new man, who is entering the ring for the first time, I would say: Do not get reckless and imagine that you can capture the whole thing and enter in every class that is open to you. Such a course, from a prize winning standpoint, is foolish, since it is putting oneself against everybody else and many unexpected things happen in a lifetime. If entries are slim and your idea is to help out the show as an exhibition and you do not object to being beaten once or twice, so long as the showing as a whole is a creditable one, it is all right to fill in as many classes as possible, and shows a laudable spirit of self-sacrifice for the public good.

When one is green at the show business he is apt to start out with the idea that he can lick the earth, but he generally winds up the first year by licking a good deal less than that.

When the exhibition is any distance from home the question of packing the flowers so that they will travel safely is the chief thing to consider. In spite of every care lots of trouble invariably results from the carelessness of the express companies and the playful habit their employees get into, of standing boxes on end that are marked "Keep flat" in letters a foot high. The flowers must be cleated tight in the box, so that, no matter which way it is turned, they cannot move. Make a pillow of newspaper to set under the neck of the bottom layer of flowers and use lots of tissue paper between the flowers to keep them from rubbing against each other.

Two or three layers can be placed in each end of a box and then if the stems are cleated down properly not much harm will come to the flowers.

Some growers ship in boxes three to four feet high and have the flowers standing upright and tied to wires. They travel finely in this manner but it is a very expensive way to pack, too expensive, in fact, to be generally adopted.

Before the flowers are packed they should have had from twenty-four to thirty-six hours in water, so that the stems are full of water. Then they will carry to their destination without wilting and set up in much better shape.

Merstham Yellow.

I notice in last week's REVIEW that Mr. Teilmann is very much disappointed with the way Merstham Yellow has behaved with him. I am sorry to hear it, since my experience, and also the experience of several other growers in this vicinity, is very different. My first flowers were cut September 30 and these flowers ran $4 per dozen. The last of some 500 blooms were cut October 12 and the average price, particularly in this bad fall, from a mum grower's standpoint, was satisfactory enough. One grower of my acquaintance got $5 a dozen for his best flowers, with a net average of practically $4 a dozen.

The early buds from which the early flowers would be cut all came green and blind with Mr. Teilmann. This, of course, accounts for his poor opinion of the variety. If the bud is not taken before August 10 it always comes perfect here, and I can only account for his flowers failing to come on the ground of some climatic differences, unless he took a bud before the date indicated.

It is unquestionably true that locality or soil does make a good deal of difference in the handling of different varieties. Mr. Teilmann grows Monrovia finely and it must be a satisfactory kind with him. Very few growers here grow it in any quantity and personally I could never get any satisfaction out of it.

The variety W. Duckham is one of the very largest mums grown and as set up in the east, at the different shows, is unsurpassed in finish and color. Yet Wm. Duckham told me that in his trip through the west last year he was intensely disappointed at the very poor condition of all the flowers of this variety he saw on exhibition. So much for difference in climate.

I have always argued in these notes that when a grower has a variety that does finely with him, that is the kind for him to grow. The only fault with Merstham Yellow, as far as my experience with it this fall goes, is that the flower is soft and damped somewhat. The fact that it is the warmest fall in the history of the weather bureau may account for this; in fact, I know it does, because as soon as I shaded the bench the damping ceased.

I hope Mr. Teilmann will give the variety one more chance before he discards it, and meanwhile I would like to hear how it has behaved with other growers in that vicinity.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

RUST.

Enclosed you will find a few leaves of chrysanthemum. I am troubled with some kind of spot on the leaves. From the way it comes, and on any part of the plant, I am sure it is not caused by the sun shining too hot through the glass, and it is not caused by either mulching or using liquid manure, for otherwise the plants seem to be in A 1 condition. I have seen the same thing happen once before. It does not seem to affect the bloom much but spoils the leaves. I will be thankful to you if you can help me in any way.

C. L. T.

Although the leaves were very much wilted I have no hesitation in saying that these chrysanthemums are affected with rust. While this disease has never assumed serious proportions here, it has done a good deal of damage in Europe. Rust can be held in check by spraying the plants with sulphide of potassium, using it at the rate of one ounce to two gallons of water and making absolutely sure that the spraying is so thorough that the leaf is wet on both sides. This fall, after the plants have done flowering, I would advise C. L. T. to take a batch of cuttings from the plants and clear away the old stools. Then by watching the young plants he can start another year with perfectly clean stock. Badly affected stock has in this manner been cleared completely of rust.

Work of Committees.

The Chicago committee of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, judged seedlings, Saturday, October 14, as follows: No. 6, exhibited by H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill., pink, type of Glory of Pacific, scored 85 points commercial scale. Seedling (Opah x Monrovia) creamy white, type of Vivian-Morel, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., scored 80 points commercial scale. Seedling (Opah x Mrs. Coombes) pink, type of Vivian-Morel, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., scored 82 points, commercial scale.

Examined by the New York committee October 14, 1905: Seedling No. 12-11-03, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., lilac pink, Japanese type, scored 85 points commercial scale.

Philadelphia, Oct. 14, 1905: Seedling No. 11-27-04, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., white, Japanese reflexed, scored 84 points commercial scale. Remarks: Had the foliage been as good as the flower, variety would have scored better. Also at Philadelphia: Seedling No. 12-11-03, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., pink, Japanese reflexed, scored 85 points commercial scale.

At Cincinnati, October 14, 1905: Seedling No. 12-11-03, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., pink (magenta), outer petals shaded silver pink, Japanese reflexed, scored 85 points commercial scale. Seedling No. 11-27-04, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., white, Japanese type, scored 86 points commercial scale.

FRED H. LEMON, Sec'y.

CARRYING A SECOND YEAR.

I am growing, in Germany, some benches of American carnations, planted in September, 1904, and think of carrying them another year. Is it wise? The benches were filled last year with good sandy loam on the ground, to which was added one-third cow manure. Will you tell me how they should be handled to get a good crop in the second year? Which varieties will give the best account of themselves and what temperature do they need. Is it advisable to top-dress them with chemical or natural material and at what time of the year?

T. W.

It seems to have been the experience of growers generally who have tried to run carnations over the second year that it is not practical. In our experiments along that line we have found that a good, strong young plant will give better results than a plant that has already worked one season. I have seen a few benches of second-year plants that did remarkably well, but in every case I am sure that strong, young plants would have done just as well. Shortage of stock and the clean and thrifty appearance of a bench of plants will sometimes tempt one to run the plants another season.

Between the seasons a rank growth is made, the hot weather kills out a plant here and there, red spider gets a hold, because on account of the dense growth syringing could not be done properly, and, in fact, a hundred and one things come up which one does not encounter with the young plants. We have tried cutting them back and planting in the field during summer, the same as young plants, but they get hard and do not transplant as well as young stock.

However, if you have them in good condition at this time on the benches, so that you wish to carry them another season, it is possible that you may have good success with them. With us the damage is usually done before this time. Your climate may favor this method more than our climate does.

If you carry them another season you will find that they will need a good deal more feeding than they did last season. Not only is the soil pretty well exhausted but the plants are larger and need more nourishment to keep them going. I cannot say that any special varieties will lend themselves more readily to this treatment than others. It is simply a question of whether the plants happen to be in good condition for it. Unless you are thoroughly versed in chemical manures I would advise you to stick to the great natural manure which we get from the dairy, using in addition some bone and wood ashes. The manure can be applied both as a mulch and in liquid form, while the bone may be mixed with soil, a 5-inch pot of bone to a bushel of soil, and spread on the benches a scant half-inch thick. The wood ashes should be scattered on the soil and scratched in, after which a good watering should be given. The plants will want about the same temperature as last season.

A. F. J. BAUR.

CHILTON, WIS.—W. C. Schucht had an opening October 2 to which he invited the people by means of a handbill larger than two pages of the REVIEW. Ice cream was served and each visitor received a flower as a souvenir. It was a great success.

THE SCOTT OUTING.

The employees of the Wm. Scott Co., of Buffalo, had an outing August 25 at the firm's greenhouses in Corfu. They made the trip from the city in style, using an automobile large enough to provide seats for the entire party. It is a two hours' ride to Corfu, where dinner was provided at the hotel. After an inspection of the greenhouses there was a baseball game between the visitors and the home team, which was followed by more refreshments and then the start was made for home. One of the employees, who is an expert with the camera, took the photographs reproduced in this issue. The outing was so successful that it will be repeated each year.

MR. PETTIGREW IN EUROPE.

[A portion of a lecture on "Park and Garden Work in Europe," delivered before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, October 17, by J. A. Pettigrew.]

It may seem an easy task to relate what one has seen on a trip across the waters. So it appeared to me when I started for Europe early in July of this year. Your strenuous president took an advantage of my error when he extracted a promise from me that I would talk to you on my return about what I had seen during my rambles abroad.

After a delightful passage of seven days we entered Queenstown harbor, with its quaintly-pretty town situated on the sloping hillside. The hills enclosing the harbor are mostly owned by the British government, and are used for military purposes. Centranthus ruber, however, by right of prior occupation and nature's adaptation, greeted us with sheets of purple bloom, which many of the passengers on the tender were fain to believe was heather. Of heather there was an abundance, but its softer, hazy color was overpowered by the decided color of the centranthus.

A stroll, after dinner in the evening, revealed the mild nature of the climate in this part of Ireland. Fuchsias (Riccartoni), wallflowers, antirrhinums, sedums, ferns, etc., clothed cliffs, stone walls and slopes alike, while the cottage gardens were, as is usual in the British Isles, bowers of bloom.

At Fota, a few miles from Queenstown, is the seat of Lord Barrymore. Roughly speaking, the gardens and ornamental grounds contain about 100 acres. The entire plan of arrangement has been carefully studied. Excepting, possibly, the terrace gardens, everything speaks of nature and simplicity. The ornamental grounds abound in good things. Beautiful vistas of foliage and turf greet the eye at every turn. An island in a small lake is devoted to a collection of bamboos, the borders of the lake being planted with semi-aquatic plants. The effect is very good and the setting of the picture harmonious.

The mild and moist temperature of Fota admits of a much wider range in the selection of material for outdoor planting than obtains with us in New England. Coniferous trees do very well. A very fine plant of Pinus insignia measured four feet in diameter. Sequoia gigantea is represented by several promising specimens about thirty or forty feet high. The broad-leaved evergreens, such as laurels and hollies, simply revel in the climate of Fota. In a shady hollow a rookery has been introduced, which is planted with ferns; many of the choicest variations from the British species are to be seen. Many ferns from even more temperate climes also have been planted, among which may be noted Dicksonia antarctica, of which there were several specimens doing well.

The terrace gardens near the mansion were very gorgeous in their summer plumage of scarlets, blues, purples, yellows and whites, a very good example of the florid style of summer bedding.

Group at Outing of Wm. Scott Co. Employees, Corfu, N. Y., August 25, 1905.

One wished that the treatment had been of a softer character, more in keeping with the simple beauty and quaintness of the facade of the building and the terrace walls.

While at Queenstown and Cork I engaged, in each place, a jaunting car for a trip into the country. My object was to get such impressions of agricultural conditions as could be obtained in a run of eight or ten miles, and through conversation with a few of the farmers. My field of observation was limited, and the time at my disposal short, yet I could but come to the conclusion that the Irish farmer, or cotter, of the neighborhood makes little of his opportunities. With splendid land under his control and one of the best markets at his doors, he, by lack of thrift and by indolence, permits his advantages to be usurped by Holland and France.

In Dublin I took a jaunting car ride in Phoenix park. I had heard much of its beauty and its fine situation. I was much disappointed to find it little better than a pasture lot for cattle, at five to seven dollars per head. The park is a large one of 1,750 Irish acres, which I was told equaled 2,500 English acres. The revenue for its support, I was informed, comprised $40,000, which the government pays for the site of the viceregal palace and the barracks, and $7,000, the proceeds of the pasturage of 1,200 to 1,500 cattle. The result is that the park has a most unkempt appearance. The small trees and what have been fine hawthorns are ruined by the rubbing of the cattle. The open meadows and woodlands are tracked in every direction. No pruning of dead limbs or cutting out of dead trees seems to be done. Thus a park that might be one of the finest in the British Isles is given up to ruin and desolation.

ferns in fine condition, among which were fine specimens of the Killarney fern (Trichomanes radicans). Bougainvillea Cypheri, a semi-double, attracted my attention, as did Hæmanthus Katherine maryllidæ, Campanula isophylla, very fine blue and hardy, and Begonia Rex, varieties Ne Plus Ultra, Our Queen and His Majesty. Fine plants were also to be seen of Begonia President Carnot and B. Bowringiana. When looking over the fine begonia collection at this garden I wished that our Mr. Sander could have been with me. Lobelia tenuior as a pot plant was very attractive, as was also Trachelium cæruleum and T. cæruleum album and Campanula pyramidalis, Veitch's strain, compact and fine flowered, as a pot plant was very good. Many other old plants were grown in pots. They were well grown, too, and demonstrated their value for decorative purposes in the greenhouse or conservatory. In an aquatic house was seen a fine lot of potted cannas of the new strains. Under the indoor cultural conditions the foliage and flowers were very finely developed, both in size and color.

The garden is noted for its large and fine collection of alpine plants, which would require days to properly observe and describe. I simply had to content myself with wonder and admiration, as I hurriedly passed along, at their varied and beautiful forms.

Trinity College Botanic Garden is situated in the city of Dublin. It contains about fourteen acres. The smoke conditions are rather severe on vegetation; hollies, however, seem to find the location a congenial home, for many good specimens are to be found in the garden. Spring flowering bulbs are planted everywhere, and must produce rare effects in flowering season. This might be expected, as Mr. Burbidge, the curator, has long been a student of pointed me, as I had anticipated much pleasure in meeting him.

The country around Dublin bay is most charming. Howth, Kingston and Bray are right on the bay. From Bray Head, a hill of some 400 or 500 feet, a fine view of the bay can be had, with the Hill of Howth about six miles away in the distance, while between lies Kingston, in the hollow, with its fine old picturesque houses. Kingston is an older settlement than Dublin, from which it is distant about eight miles. The Danes held the coast at this point, a few centuries ago, and two or three of their strongholds, now in ruins, lend additional interest to the scene.

At Kingston I took the Holyhead mail boat, and in three hours I stepped on Welsh soil and boarded the train for London. The scenery between Holyhead and Chester was just such as to tempt one to don a knapsack and wander through its mountain ranges. That it is a great resort for tourists was quite evident from the large amount of passenger business at each station.

At Chester, which was reached in the afternoon, I stopped for a day or two. Chester is one of the oldest towns in England. There is good evidence that it was a town of considerable importance prior to its occupation by the Romans, in the first century of the Christian era. The town is famed in song and story, and I think one of the pleasantest memories of my trip is laid within its walls, and I wish to commend it to you as a place worthy of a visit.

Near the Bridge of Dee I took a small steamer and sailed up the river for Eaton Hall, one of the seats of the Duke of Westminster. The hall is modern and stands on ground gently rising from the Dee. Broad vistas of lawn stretch out toward the river. No trees of great size are to be found, the plantations being apparently of no greater age than fifty or sixty years. Beeches, oaks and limes predominate; a few Cedrus Libani, forty or fifty feet high, gave promise of future greatness.

The gardens were in excellent condition. They partook largely of the old-fashioned style; hedges and cozy nooks abounded. Climbing roses were everywhere, Dorothy Perkins especially. It was here that I first experienced English hospitality; the gardener, N. F. Barnes, gave me a hearty welcome, and placed himself wholly at my disposal during my visit, Mrs. Barnes being not one whit behind her husband in kindness. In the course of my conversation with Mr. Barnes I found that the English gardener, like the American park superintendent, has an unhappy time when he undertakes to do any thinning out of his trees or shrubs. I found, also, that the English gardener is very often trammelled in the matter of planting good things (in themselves) in unsuitable places, and that he cannot always plant things where, in his judgment, things should be planted. So it is not always fair to the gardener to lay upon his shoulders the blame for violations of the artistic which may be found in the place over which he has charge. I was shown the new bothy at Eaton Hall. It was a pretty two-story house, in the timbered style, of which the Cestrians seem so fond. Each gardener had a bedroom upstairs; a dining-room, kitchen and a parlor occupied the lower floor. The place had an appearance of comfort. I was glad to see this improvement in the Lath House Used in Florida for Growing Asparagus.

The Royal Botanic Gardens at Glasnevin, a suburb of Dublin, have an area of fifty-two acres, and are mostly situated on a sandy knoll, where conditions are very unsuitable for the growth of trees and shrubbery, consequently little of note in that line is to be found there. They have, however, considerable glass and a fairly good collection of plants. Especially noticeable was a lot of filmy and a writer on bulbs. A rockery with a small collection of alpine plants showed, by its condition, that this pretty and interesting class of plants has a warm place in his heart. Here I saw the beautiful rosette-like Raymondia Pyrenaica for the first time; a piece of rough wall admirably served it for a home. Mr. Burbidge, being away from home on a week-end vacation, greatly disaphome life of the gardener. I found also other estates on which the same improvement had been made. On many, however, the same old hovels existed as of yore, noticeably in the two botanic gardens of Dublin.

The English gardener labors under great disadvantage, as compared with other occupations. In the past forty years the wages in England of mechanics, masons and carpenters, for instance, have increased over seventy-five per cent, while the wages of under gardeners have increased only about thirty-five per cent; thus while a carpenter or a mason is able to earn 50 shillings per week, an under gardener can earn only 18 or 20 shillings. Again, in the hours of labor, the gardener must work an average of ten or ten and one-half hours per day, while the mechanic is required to work only nine hours per day. This state of affairs offers no inducement to bright young men to enter the gardening business; better wages and a more promising field take them elsewhere. The result of this, is, according to my observation, that in England gardening as a business is in a decadent condition. The young men engaged in it average lower in intelligence and ambition than obtained twenty-five or thirty years ago.

FORCING PEONIES.

What would be the proper time to set peonies in for Christmas forcing, also for Easter? C. D.

Wm. A. Peterson says that he does not consider it practicable to force peonies for bloom before February 1. The plants should be lifted in October and placed in a cold frame, where they will be accessible when the time arrives for forcing. After the plants are started under glass a temperature of from 55 to 60 degrees should be maintained as uniformly as possible. The plants should be fed liberally with liquid manure. It takes about eight weeks to develop flowers. To secure the best blooms remove the lateral buds as soon as they are formed. The plants must have two years' rest before they can be forced again.

ASPARAGUS IN FLORIDA.

The growing of asparagus for cutting, for plants and for seed has become a large industry at several points in Florida, where the climatic conditions seem especially suitable. The plants of Asparagus plumosus nanus are grown in lath houses, such as one shown in the accompanying illustrations reproduced from photographs taken at the Yalaha Conservatories of Gillett & James, at Yalaha. The lath structures of this firm cover three acres, 148,000 plants being cut from, one acre being devoted to growing strings for decorative purposes. They also harvest over a million seeds each year and find the demand constantly on the increase.

The other picture shows how the Sprengeri is grown, in boxes outdoors in the shade of fine old moss-covered oaks. It is not only a beautiful spot but one which seems to suit the Sprengeri "right down to the ground," as the saying is. There are 57,000 plants all in boxes set in rows, on "horses," two boxes on each pair of horses. The boxes are eight feet long, ten inches deep and fourteen inches wide. There are seven acres just like the corner of the grove shown in the picture. The boxes give fine drainage and rich soil and plenty of feeding are used with the result of a most abundant crop of sprays and seeds.

GAS PIPE FOR WATERING.

Please let me know if I can use 1-inch pipe, formerly used for gas pipe, for watering plants in the greenhouses. Will any harm come to the stock?

A. G.

I doubt if there would be any deleterious effects from using second-hand gas pipes for water mains. There is often a strong odor about such pipes when first removed but if water or a solution of potash can be allowed to run through the pipes for a few days before using them for watering plants no ill effects will result.

GARDENIAS.

What gardenia gives the best crop on benches? Please give us a few cultural instructions. Is it a profitable crop?

T. W.

The gardenia that is forced for winter flowering is a form of G. jasminoides, or G. florida, known as G. Veitchii. The method of culture is, briefly, as follows:

The cuttings are taken from the parent plants in January and rooted in a sand bed in a warm propagating house, after which they are potted off into small pots and grown on in a temperature of about 60 degrees.

The young plants are repotted as they require it, given plenty of moisture and kept free of insects, and toward midsummer should be in fit condition to be planted out on a bench containing five to six inches of rich and well-drained soil. A slight shading is usually required at this season, but should only be enough to protect the plants from the strongest rays of the sun, plenty of light being needed to secure a strong and well-ripened growth.

Much care must be given to avoid extremes of dryness or of moisture during the autumn, the object being to keep the roots in perfect working condition, either extreme being liable to cause the loss of flower buds.

During the winter a night temperature of 65 degrees seems to give the best results, and the most successful growers get their best returns from young plants each season.

As to the profits much depends upon the available market, and unless a reasonably good price is received for the crop the percentage of profit to the grower is not very large.

The soil that is most favored for bench-grown gardenias is a rather light loam, well enriched with old stable manure and bone dust.

EVERLASTING BENCHES.

The inconvenience and expense of frequently rebuilding wooden tables, and the accidents which not infrequently happen through their rotting out, has resulted in a very wide interest in permanent benches of other material. Quite small clamps driven into place in the hollow places in the slabs.

Quite a number of growers are experimenting with this bench and have found it very easy to erect. It is only necessary to level the greenhouse floor and set the parts in place, for they interlock and the bench will neither sag nor fall. The benches can be built of any width desired, a bench four feet wide requiring two rows of 24-inch slabs, or a bench five feet wide three rows of 20-inch slabs. As the standards have the same compartments as the slabs, to arrange for heating pipes under the bench, it is only necessary to insert a rod through the standards as a support on which the pipes rest. It is equally easy to hang the pipes on the side of the bench if so desired. The standards are made so that the bench is twenty-four inches high to the top of the 5-inch side board. The Bate Brothers claim for their invention that it is not only quicker to put up than wood, and indestructible, but that it does much to insure freedom from insect pests and fungous diseases. They exhibited a section of this bench at the Washington convention of the S. A. F. and were awarded a certificate of merit at that time. They have obtained a patent and expect to introduce the bench widely next season. The Cleveland Cut Flower Co., in which Bate Bros. are interested, have sold it to many growers this season. They express themselves as well pleased with it.

CARE OF CUT FLOWERS.

We are frequently asked for instructions as to the care of cut flowers. Will you kindly give a few clear and concise rules which can be given to the retail customer, telling how to care for flowers when received? F. A. S.

This is a question often asked of the sales people in cut flower stores and usually the clerk is ready with advice, giving the methods employed for the care of stock in the store. The George Wittbold Co., Chicago, has found it worth while to have a small card printed and every package of cut flowers which goes out of their three stores contains the following:

"Directions for care of long-stemmed cut flowers:

"Recut stems of flowers with sharp knife, before placing in vase, after that every day.

"Every night plunge flowers in deep jar so that the water covers the stems nearly up to the bloom. Place in a temperature from 40 to 50 degrees, with moist tissue paper over flowers. In this manner flowers will recuperate if they get wilted.

"In day-time place back in ordinary vase, and keep them out of draught."

a number of more or less indestructible beds have been devised and several of the builders have had recourse to cement, tiles, etc. One of the latest of these was originated at the establishment of Bate Bros., at Cleveland. One of the accompanying illustrations shows one of these benches in course of erection in the rose houses of the F. R. Williams Co., Cleveland. The other illustration shows Kaiserin roses growing on one of these tile benches at the same establishment.

The bench consists of two different shapes of double compartment tiles, standards and slabs, burned so as to be porous. The standards, or legs, are wider at the bottom than at the top, where they have grooves into which a projection on the slab fits and holds the bench together. The slabs, which form the bottom of the bench, are fifteen inches wide and are made in any length desired, up to twenty-six inches. The upper face is perfectly smooth and also the bottom, with the exception of the ridge on each end, to fit the groove on the supports. The side boards are held in place with

THE IDEAL SALESMAN.

[An essay by Patrick Welch, of Boston, awarded second prize in the contest originated and conducted by the Review correspondent at Philadelphia.]

Goods do not show a profit until they are sold. In the production of plants and cut flowers, as well as other classes of merchandise, the producer is always paying out up to the time his goods are ready for the market; then he comes face to face with the problem of selling his goods to advantage, so that he will not only get back what has been expended, but also a living profit.

It is a recognized fact among the producers of cut flowers that it is difficult to secure salesmen capable of successfully disposing of the goods grown in any of our large establishments.

To be a successful salesman there are certain qualifications necessary. The applicant should possess education sufficient to read and write well and speak correctly the language of the country in which he expects to sell his goods. He need not be a brilliant conversationalist, but should give his customer the credit of knowing the rudiments of his business, and hence should not waste time proving or explaining matters which are at least supposed to be known. Modern business men do not take kindly to a salesman who is not practical.

He should possess special knowledge of the care, cultivation and cost of production, etc., so that he may at all times be prepared to explain the good qualities and name correctly certain varieties of flowers or plants which he may be called upon to dispose of.

It is likewise necessary that he should have a thorough knowledge of the class of goods offered by his competitors, the price asked for the same from day to day, not for the purpose of enabling him to depreciate his competitor's goods or undersell him, but for the purpose of comparison and of counteracting any argument against his own goods.

I do not know of anything that can be done by a traveling salesman that is more dangerous to his success than to be continually depreciating the goods offered for sale by his competitors. Such a practice is mean and cowardly, proving him who is guilty of it to have no pretension whatever to the title of a gentleman. If you expect to achieve success let it be done by the use of your own energy, your own brains, your own persistence, not at the cost of the reputation of those with whom you are obliged to compete.

A salesman should never be indifferent to the interest of his employer. He should keep before his mind the necessity of selling each day all the goods he possibly can and at a price that will return a reasonable profit. In working along these lines care must be used not to attempt to extract from a purchaser any more than what is a just figure. It is as much wrong to overcharge for goods and inflict an injury on the purchaser as it is to undersell and work an injustice on your employer. "Honesty is the best policy." Work done by a man in an honest, upright and straightforward manner cannot be otherwise than appreciated and rewarded by those who employ him, as well as all others with whom he may do business.

A good, clever salesman will always keep before his mind the fact that he should make a good appearance, be tactful and agreeable. If he finds his customer busy at other work he should not force himself or demand his time. It does a man no good to have his patience worn out. When a party to whom he expects to sell goods is not prepared to purchase, he can await an opportunity when the customer is in a mood when he can be reached and a nice bill of goods sold.

Right here I might be permitted to suggest that it is well to remember that the custom in practice among the trade at present is that a sale is not made until the goods are delivered and accepted by the purchaser. This point is one that calls for a selling agent being thoroughly conversant with the nature and makeup of the goods he is offering for sale. It likewise devolves upon the house to see that all goods are shipped in strict accordance with all agreements that may be made by its representatives.

There is no time in a salesman's experience when he is called upon to exercise so much nicety and skill as when he is first introduced to a would-be purchaser. He should appear practical and marshal his thoughts. As a rule first impressions count for a great deal, and if he is clever his success at this particular time will depend on his sagacity and he may secure a customer which it may have taken years for his competitors in business to get.

A young man who expects to become a clever salesman should practice temperance. It is not absolutely necessary that he should be a total abstainer, but it is a fact beyond dispute that the drinking of intoxicating liquors can only be done at the expense of health and reason. Whatever obstacles a salesman may have to surmount or whatever difficulties he may have to conquer in the faithful performance of his duty, if he intends to be steady and constantly occupied with the work to which he is assigned, he can do all these things in a more complete and satisfactory manner if he practices temperance than he can if his intellect is darkened and confused, his sound and sterling qualities destroyed.

A salesman should be careful not to misrepresent the quality of goods offered for sale or attempt to dispose of any grade or variety he is not sure can be delivered. It is absolutely necessary that his every act should be honest, square and upright to gain the confidence of men with whom he expects to build up a permanent business.

No man can be successful as a salesman who fails to take a pride in his work, prove to his employer that he has a love for it, like that of the artist or poet. Compensation should not be the first consideration. Work because it is your great pleasure to work. Sooner or later you will become so valuable to the firm or corporation by whom you are employed that they cannot afford to dispense with your services. When that day does come, as it surely will, like the artist, you will be paid the full price for the picture you have taken years to paint.

Vegetable Forcing.

IN the New York market Boston greenhouse-grown cucumbers are $1.25 to $1.75 per dozen. Mushrooms are fetching 25 to 75 cents a pound and greenhouse tomatoes 10 to 12 cents a pound.

CAULIFLOWER.

To have a crop ready for cutting around Christmas and New Year, the plants should be planted in their maturing quarters not later than the first week of November. Some time ago I advised regarding the sowing of the seed and the after care of the plants, and if these have been properly timed and grown on, good stocky plants should now be ready for setting.

The chief point in the production of cauliflower is to keep the plants growing freely from start to finish. A check in any way, or at any time during their growth, will result in what is known as buttoning, or, in other words, the premature production of the flower before the plants are strong enough to produce a marketable article.

Besides by a check in growth, buttoning is sometimes produced by club root, which is the work of a minute maggot, but this club root is seldom very prevalent in a greenhouse crop. Sourness of the soil is one of its chief causes, and as this is easily guarded against where the moisture and its application are entirely under control, the disease is seldom present to any hurtful extent. In some soils, however, it is prevalent under any conditions and in such cases, after the grower is satisfied that it is present in the soil, the only sure method of eradicating it is to sterilize the soil, unless a different soil can be conveniently procured.

Cauliflower can be grown in raised benches, but they are much easier handled and do much better in solid beds or right on the floor of the house. Here less water is needed, as they have the natural moisture from below the surface. The time when most water is needed and when liquid manure can most advantageously be applied is from the time the heads are formed until they are nearly finished. This is allowing for a fairly rich soil, but in the case of a poor soil liquid manure can be applied almost at any stage of their growth, should the plants show signs of needing nourishment. A good fertilizer to use is nitrate of soda, its quick acting properties giving the plants a chance of deriving the full benefit of the manure during the short season of their growth. In slower acting manures a good deal would be lost to the crop in hand, though of course the crop following would get the advantage. We have seen an application of nitrate of soda prove very helpful to plants attacked by club root. If the plants are not too badly affected its action seems to check the further spread of the disease and so stimulate the plants that they are able to outgrow the harm already done.

NORTHERN TEXAS.

A Land of Contrasts.

Texas is the land where the sun shines at summer heat and the next hour sees the mercury hovering around the freezing point, where the soil more than repays one for the working, where two crops a year may easily be raised, where frost seldom comes before the middle of October and where roses are blooming outdoors today and compare very favorably, with the northern-grown article, where nature smiles continuously and where floriculture is as yet in its infancy and where the possibilities for future returns cannot be estimated. Texas is the land of diversified soil, where the soil changes its color and productiveness every few miles and where the people are always ready with open arms to welcome the stranger within their gates. Four weeks inside the borders of this great state have taught me many things. It has taught me that our profession is as yet in its infancy here and that the pioneers have had to overcome many difficulties in order to attain the present degree of success.

The cultivation of flowers in this section is of recent date, a few years at most, and the florist has had many obstacles to overcome. First was water, which pumped from driven wells was impregnated with sodium and literally burned everything which it touched. Next came the difficult task of educating the people to buy what was raised. This took several years to accomplish by painstaking efforts and at considerable loss of money, until today it is hard to find a town of any size without one or two florists' establishments doing a good business. Owing to the extreme heat of July and August there is little stock grown, with the possible exception of the periwinkle, which is the staple crop for funeral designs. Gladioli and tuberose do well, but only under shade. The cultivation of roses inside is as yet in its trial state, some florists stating that it cannot be done. This I am not yet ready to admit. Time will answer the question fully. Carnations, mums and violets thrive here famously, what I have so far seen, with one exception, being far in advance of those grown farther north. Roses out of doors are just coming in and I have seen some of the finest cut blooms it has been my good fortune to ever see.

As yet there is very little landscape work done here, the absence in some localities of professional landscape gardeners being the cause, while in other places it is uphill work to convince the average citizen of the utility and beautifying effect of plants and shrubs around his home. In most of the towns civic leagues have been organized and prizes have been given for the best gardens.

The question of city parks has been taken up and all along the line improvements are noticed. Time, I have no doubt, will work wonders here. Everything is propitious, soil and climate. What seems to be needed most is the getting together of the florists in this section once in a while to exchange views, so that each can profit in his respective locality. Prices are as yet small compared with the amount received by the northern growers, but persistent effort to excel in production will gradually bring the prices up to where the grower will receive a satisfactory remuneration.

Prices in this territory at present are: Roses, from 50 to 75 cents per dozen; carnations, 50 cents; violets 25 cents per bunch. The immense amount of roses blooming outdoors is the cause.

NARCISSUS.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

We are having ideal October weather, with bright days and very cool nights, but as yet no frost heavy enough to kill outdoor stock, and business is not as good as it might be. Naturally the market is overstocked with a lot of cheap stuff, such as dahlias, pink and white Cochet roses and Fisher carnations. Some fine American Beauty roses are coming in, but only in limited quantities. Brides, Maids and Gates are improving in flower, stem and quantity. Plenty of good white carnations can be had and are moving very satisfactorily. Most pink varieties are yet of very short stem.

Chrysanthemums are more plentiful and the best white sell well, with plenty of the smaller pink and white carried over. There are daily shipments of violets, but they are not ready sellers and yet very small. Greens are more plentiful, especially good sprays of Sprenger.

Various Notes.

George Cook has bought a large tract of land at Pimlico, Md., and is building several greenhouses.

Harry Ekas has just completed a fine house for carnations.

Henry Eberhardt is slowly recovering from his broken leg, the result of his horse running away, although it will be several months before he will be able to be about business again.

One of R. L. Graham's fine delivery horses was found dead in the stable the past week.

Mrs. George Personette has opened a flower store at West North avenue near Park.

Bolgiano & Son gave a free dahlia show at their store, which attracted many visitors.

Wm. Terry has put up a new boiler house 16x23 and has installed a new gasoline engine.

A fine bunch of Mrs. Roosevelt dahlias was shown at the last club meeting, raised from cuttings and said to be from plants from four to five feet high. They were grown by Mr. Uffler, gardener for Mrs. T. Harrison Garrett.

Fred Bauer, of Govanstown, has completed a large shed, with office and a cellar for storage purposes.

Mrs. Mary Johnson, of West Madison street, has completed renovating her store, throwing two rooms into one, the floor having been laid in tile with an attractive large bow window. She is now more able to handle her increasing trade.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Sons, of White Marsh, Md., are cutting extra fine dahlias and shipping large quantities of them to this market.

Griffith & Turner Co. report a heavy demand on all good forcing bulbs and are unable to fill further orders for some grades. They report that Kiloscale has proven a wonderful success for San Jose scale.

Every flower salable on Saturday, October 14, cleaned out. Many more carnations and chrysanthemums could have been handled to good advantage at the Exchange.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Arrivals of chrysanthemums are now increasing and with a continuance of clear, warm weather, with maximum temperatures as high as 80 degrees in the shade, the output of all seasonable flowers is getting heavier. Add to this the fact that many sections of our state still have dahlias, asters, cosmos, etc., in full bloom and it is little wonder that the market shows a drooping tendency. What is now needed is a killing frost and cooler weather to stimulate buying. Weddings are now numerous and use a good number of flowers, chrysanthemums being the favorites.

American Beauties maintain previous quotations, but other sorts are somewhat lower. The supplies, however, of these are lessening, many houses being nearly off crop. Carnations are very abundant and blooms of some varieties are of extra fine quality. While a few select flowers may reach $3 to $4, good average flowers have sold at $1.50, with common grades lower. Violets are improving in quality and bring from 30 to 50 cents for both singles and doubles. Chrysanthemums are already inclined to be druggy. A few select flowers reach $12, but $6 to $8 is a more common price. A few Ivory made their appearance this week. Quite a few outdoor flowers, such as dahlias, cosmos and gladioli, still come in. Lily of the valley is of good quality and unchanged in price. Lilliums sell quite well, being in some demand for weddings. Asparagus and adiantum are of extra fine quality, with no change in prices.

Club Meeting.

It has become something of a hackneyed phrase to term each succeeding meeting of the Boston Gardeners' and Florists' Club a record breaker, but certainly the 150 people present and enthusiasm at the meeting on October 17 surpassed anything in the previous history of the club. The members of the North Shore Horticultural Society, who were guests of the Boston Club, turned out in good numbers and seemed to thoroughly enjoy the evening. J. A. Pettigrew's lecture, "Park and Garden Work in European Cities," was most interesting. The nineteen applications read showed that the high water membership of the club has not yet been reached, for more are promised for the November meeting.

There were some very interesting exhibits, visitors from a distance, music and refreshments, but more extended notice of these must wait until our next. The effort to form a glee club is being favorably received. This should ensure good music at all succeeding meetings.

The outing at Waban Conservatories was set for October 28.

Various Notes.

William R. Nicholson, eldest son of William Nicholson, the well known Framingham florist, was married on October 18 to Miss Florence Goodell at the bride's home, Union avenue, South Framingham. Quite a number of prominent members of the craft were present and the happy couple were well remembered in the way of presents. After the honeymoon they will reside in the cozy and substantial home recently selected near the Pleasant Hill Conservatories in Framingham. We cordially extend congratulations.

Mann Bros. are sending in quantities of very fine dahlias daily to the Park street market and they sell well. While many fields have been frozen, Mann Bros. have saved theirs by lighting a number of charcoal fires on cold nights and leaving a man to care for them, the smoke being sufficient to ward off the frost.

S. J. Goddard is bringing in some splendid blooms of his new carnation, Helen Goddard, with long stems. This new variety sells on sight. He also has fine Cardinal, Prosperity, Patten, Enchantress and Fiancee. The latter shows some disease and an inclination to burst.

The product of the J. Montgomery Sears estate of Southboro, Mass., is to be disposed of commercially this season. It hardly seems fair that the produce from millionaires' greenhouses should come in direct competition with that from hard working, struggling florists.

Peirce Bros. are bringing in chrysanthemums in the same old quantities at their Park street market stands. Their carnations promise exceedingly well.

William Nicholson is marketing some splendid Fiancee, Prosperity, Patten, Enchantress and other carnations. R. Witterstaetter's new varieties are looking extra well with him.

"The best we ever had" is the report on the bulb trade from the dealers.

Tom Butterworth's greenhouses at South Framingham are at present very attractive, with a wealth of orchid bloom.

H. N. Eaton, of South Sudbury, has been forwarding extra fine consignments of early chrysanthemums to the Park street market.

McMulkin had the extensive decorations for the marriage of Miss Gladys Lawson, daughter of our well known Frenzied Finance Lawson, to E. L. Stanwood, at Dreamwold Hall, on October 10.

The gypsy moth committee of the state announces that the area affected by the moth has increased from 395 square miles last year to 2,082 square miles. As this is about one-fourth the area of Massachusetts, the extension is viewed with much apprehension. The spread of the brown tail moth has been much wider.

S. J. Goddard furnished large quantities of flowers for a wedding decoration in Maine on October 16.

Thomas Roland, of Nahant, who is going into the plant trade more heavily each year, has this season the largest and finest stock he ever had of all the best flowering plants, including Gloire de Lorraine begonias, ericas, acacias, cyclamen, primulas, poinsettias, azaleas, etc.

The annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society occurs on Saturday, November 18.

The stall holders of the Park street market are anticipating a delightful evening on the occasion of their annual meeting and dinner to be held on October 27.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—Announcement is made of the marriage of Wm. T. Buckley and Miss Margaret Dwyer.

BOWLING GREEN, O.—Mrs. Andreas has a nice show of chrysanthemums at her place on West Wooster street.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The out-of-town shipping orders have sustained the market in spite of continued heavy supplies of all kinds of flowers. The demand for Beauties and fancy chrysanthemums has been excellent. Dahlias are falling off a little with some growers, but the Atco shipments continue heavy. Prices are of course low, but as high as can be expected in the absence of frost. Carnations are a little off crop; an improvement over the low prices prevalent during the first half of October is anticipated. The poorer grades of roses, chrysanthemums and carnations find their way to the street men, and occasionally the better grades. The chrysanthemum market broke badly on Saturday, poorer flowers from the earlier houses going on the street for a song. Taken all through, conditions are fairly satisfactory.

The Flower Market.

The annual meeting of the stockholders of the Flower Market was held in the secretary's office at Horticultural hall, on Monday morning, October 16. The treasurer's report showed an excellent year, with a satisfactory balance in hand. Considerable trading in the stock was evidenced by the roll call. It was understood that the prices paid were full value. On motion the election of the directors was postponed until a special meeting, as it is desired to reduce the number from nine to five. William K. Harris presided.

Horticultural Hall.

The close of the bedding plant season makes a few notes on the planting in Fairmount park of interest. Oglesby B. Paul, the landscape gardener, has planted the parterre practically as it was last season, the most noticeable change being in the festoons, which are planted with red alternantheras, with a streak of Golden Bedder coleus in the center. This lightens the effect of the ribbon festoons. The central beds were planted with the standard varieties of geraniums, coleus and a few of them with Abutilon Duke of Malakoff and eranthemum. The crowning feature of the planting, however, is at the east or river end, where the cactus beds are most beautifully laid out. These reflect great credit on Xavier E. Schmitt, who executed the work. The usual years 1876 and the present, 1905, are laid out in Echeveria secunda glauca, with clover leaves and Maltese crosses at each side.

The Chester Valley.

Lawrence Thompson's place consists of four houses 35x125 feet, even span, and open between, built of Lord & Burnham material. Mr. Thompson was at home, and showed the visitors as pretty a lot of carnation plants as could be desired. The houses were still shaded, the plants having just been benched. His varieties were Boston Market, The Queen, Flora Hill, Enchantress, Flamingo, Joost, Dorothy and Queen Louise. The whole effect of the place was that of a thoroughly businesslike establishment, with a good grower at the helm. Mr. Thompson said that the cut flowers would go to Edward Reid. Mushrooms are also grown here.

On the way back to the main road a little greenhouse was passed that was supported by a fence on the south side.

Jonathan had often thought of utilizing the heating pipe for supporting greenhouses, but the fence idea was a novel one, requiring consideration.

Kennett was only a little further on and here the objective point was William Swayne's. Mr. Swayne welcomed his callers with a glad hand, a weed (not green) and a cordiality that was unmistakable. His stock of carnations was in the houses, looking well, Mrs. Patton being especially praised for last season's performance. Very few of the other varieties were yet in flower. Their names would simply be a repetition of those given in this column before, with the addition of the best known novelties grown for stock.

The chrysanthemums were very fine. Among the varieties noted were Glory of Pacific, Estelle, much favored by Mr. Swayne; Ivory, invaluable for side benches; Mrs. George S. Kalb, Col. Appleton, Enguehard and Mrs. Whilldin, not often seen now but found very profitable here.

William Swayne may fairly be called a great grower. He has withstood the financial strain of bad years and he has prospered. His place looks well, as it always does.

Possibly you may want to know how to tell a great grower when you see him. One way is by his plants, but it is possible for the plants of a great grower not to be in the pink of condition. In that case there are other tests. A great grower will stop you in front of a dead plant and discuss what killed it, without a shade of mortification that such a thing should be found on his place. A great grower will allow you to walk on any path you please instead of insisting taking you down certain paths. He will also narrate his troubles, battles with insects, fungus, etc., and show more pride in the victory over cut worms than in a table of absolutely perfect plants. William Swayne has all these qualities, and may fairly be termed a great grower. His clip is handled by William J. Baker.

Time unfortunately prevented visiting Hicks & Sons, so with farewells to Edward Parker, and to Morris, David and Jonathan boarded the Philadelphia train at Kennett.

Various Notes.

H. H. Battles has offered a prize in House and Garden for the best method of keeping cut flowers, the judges to be the members of the Garden Club, an organization of ladies at Chestnut Hill.

The members of the Florists' Club will go out to Strafford on the 1:15 p. m. train Thursday, October 26, to visit Edward A. Stroud and see his famous carnation plants. There are several attractive features on the program.

George Parsons, of the Henry A. Dreer Co., reports an unusually heavy demand for tulips for outdoor planting. There has been a slight shortage in supplies, but the demand for such standard varieties as Artus, Bell Alliance, Cottage Maid, Chrysolora, Yellow Prince and Keizerskroon has been unprecedented. The planting at Fairmount park has been heavier than usual. Mr. Parsons also reports a shortage in Roman hyacinths and an over-supply of Paper White narcissus. The situation generally is very satisfactory.

Paul Richter, manager of the Henry F. Michell Co., has just finished work on a new implement catalogue, designed to fill the growing demand for the best grade of tools and labor-saving contrivances of all kinds. Mr. Richter states that the company's business in these implements fully justifies the great labor involved in carrying out the details of this catalogue.

Jos. Heacock, of Wyncote, has experienced an unusual demand for his ken-tas during the past two months. His cut of Beauties has doubled that of last season.

Dumont & Co. claim to be the cosmos kings, their shipments of this fall flower being especially heavy. They have some very fine flowers of Polly Rose and other fancy chrysanthemums.

William J. Moore has advised his growers to double their planting of certain choice dahlias for next season. The varieties shall be nameless. He is receiving some choice flowers of Enchantress, Lawson, The Queen and other fine carnations.

W. E. McKissick is handling some especially nice Polly Rose. His Brides and valley are also very fine.

A. Patterson, with Geo. Craig, has returned from Dakota.

W. J. Sherry, of Johnson & Stokes, called Phil's attention to a nice lot of rubber plants grown at Mr. Stokes' Moorestown nursery.

The Henry F. Michell Co. has rented the fourth floor of 1022 Market street to use as a warehouse.

Edward Reid is working nobly to keep down the surplus of flowers.

R. C. Hayden is hard at work mapping out the winter campaign.

Samuel S. Pennock had an extra heavy shipping day last Monday. Twice he called on his Beauty growers that day; twice they responded to the call.

F. & H. Mergenthaler have their place in fine condition. Brides, Maids, Liberties, smilax, asparagus and chrysanthemums are all in good shape and a number of houses have been planted with carnations. They are very promising.

On my visit to M. Rice & Co. I found everyone from the head of the firm down to the packers as busy as they could be, more than four truck loads of goods being shipped that day to all parts of the country. They report business far ahead of last year.

The current varieties of chrysanthemums for the present week, besides those already mentioned, are Omega and October Beauty, seen at Hugh Graham's; Halliday, Premo and Monrovia, seen at the Leo Niessen Co.'s. These are all yellows.

Answers to Correspondents.

Review readers are invited to send any questions relating to culture or marketing of plants and flowers in Philadelphia to Phil, in care of the leading seed or commission houses or the Flower Market. Each question will be submitted to a competent person and answered under number. Correct name and address must always accompany inquiry, but will not be published.

42.—Suppose a grower has a house planted with, let us say, Boston ferns, for stock. Would it be better to throw these plants away after taking off at the runners, or to pot them up and sell them at a low price? We mean that selling these plants will break the market, as we have enough for ordinary demand already. Better to pot them up and sell them, if at a profit.

43.—Name the principal Bride and Maid growers who supply the Philadelphia market. I assume that this means the wholesale market only, and therefore omit those who do not make a specialty of these roses. The following list, while incomplete, will give a fair idea of where five-sixths of the stock is grown: John F. Andre, Jos. Beavis & Sons, Geo. E. Campbell, H. W. Collins, Geo. F. Christie, Henry J. Faust, the Floral Exchange, Jennings Bros., C. F. Knorr & Bro., Stephen Mortensen, Wm. Munro, John Savage, Robt. Scott & Sons, James Berner, Eugene Weiss and W. A. Leonard.

44.—We have a bed of yellow cannas bought from two different growers as Buttercup. One grows three feet high, with bright yellow flowers. The other also has yellow flowers, but is six feet high. Please name the varieties. The first is evidently Buttercup. It is difficult to tell what the other is without seeing it.

45.—Who were the judges in "The Ideal Salesman" contest? There were two judges. Their names are not announced. PHIL.

NEW ORLEANS.

State of Trade.

The florists and horticulturists of New Orleans, find the usual early fall dearth of business to contend with, but everything points to a bright and prosperous autumn season and a repetition of last winter's splendid trade.

Business of nearly every description suffered a serious set-back as a result of the yellow fever, but as the disease is now well under control, and the indication is that it will be entirely stamped out in a few weeks, the probabilities are that all branches, the florists included, will take on the activity to be expected with the advent of fall.

The greater portion of the florists' regular customers, the wealthy people—those who give lawn parties in the late summer, and cotillions and dances in the winter, are still out of the city, and owing to their absence orders hardly come in with bountiful profusion.

Flower Show Plans.

The chrysanthemum show, which the New Orleans Horticultural Society is to give during the month of November, is already attracting much attention, and every effort is being made to insure success for the affair. The horticulturists are progressive, they have an energetic president at their head, P. A. Chopin, and an able corps of officers, and are numbered among the city's foremost organizations, and once engaged on a purpose they spare no pains to attain the end they strive for.

The chrysanthemum show, as a result of the society's growth and advancement, has become an annual thing, and the people look forward to it with interest and pleasure. Competent committees have been appointed to do the preliminary work, and the premium list was issued some weeks ago.

J. A. Newsham, the chairman of the arrangement committee, spoken to several days ago, reported good progress on the work, and said that he expected an unqualified success. The hall for the show has not yet been secured, but some large building centrally located will be rented, and ample room made for a large exhibit.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

The change in the weather caused a considerable shortening of stock in the later days of last week, but the decrease in receipts was not sufficient to do more than cause a slight stiffening of price; it was still easily possible to fill orders. Business continues fair, most houses reporting total sales ahead of the same period last year, but the demand is very spasmodic.

The chrysanthemum is the predominating influence this week. The receipts are not nearly as large as they will be for the next month, but they are, nevertheless, somewhat ahead of the demand and nearly all houses are engaged in forcing the sales in this department. All colors are available and all grades of stock. The best flowers sell fairly well, but the market for the small stuff is decidedly weak, as low as $4 and $5 per hundred having been accepted for Bergmann.

The cuts of Beauty were checked up considerably by the change in temperature, but stock is still of excellent quality and all orders are being filled if received sufficiently early in the day. Brides and Maids show little change from last week. Liberty and Richmond are selling well.

Carnations are in somewhat diminished supply as compared with a week ago, but there are, nevertheless, quantities of short stock which are very hard to move, as there is enough of the better grades to go around. Some exceedingly good Enchantress are seen and in general the stock averages good flowers and long stems for the middle of October.

Hudson River violets are arriving in quantity, probably due, as usual, to the fact that this market is making better returns than New York. Harrisii are very scarce, but callas are more plentiful. Frosts have ended dahlias, cosmos, gladioli, etc., with most growers, although a few are still seen. Green goods are still abundant and steady in price.

Club Meeting.

At the club meeting October 12 over 100 were present, including a number who confessed it was the first time they had ever been inside the clubroom. It was the largest attendance in years.

The regular order of business was laid aside for a discussion of the approaching flower show. Many were called upon and each pledged support to the show. The selection of the Coliseum has served to enthuse the trade and a grand exhibition is assured. The discussion, which lasted two hours, is well summed up in Louis Wittbold's reply when called upon by President Rudd: "The Wittbolds are not all here tonight but will be all there all right at the show."

New officers were elected as follows: President, P. J. Hauswirth; vice-president, Leonard Kill; financial secretary, George Asmus; treasurer, Edgar Sanders; corresponding secretary, L. H. Winterson; trustees, F. F. Benthley, W. L. Palinsky, H. N. Bruns, John Reardon, J. F. Klimmer. It is a good list. They take hold at the next meeting.

E. S. Hauswirth and W. K. Wood were elected to membership and proposals were read from J. C. Bruecker, E. C. Benthley, Fred C. Taylor, C. Frauenfelder, Henry Klunder, Sam Graff and H. R. Hughes.

The amendment to the by-laws was adopted so that henceforth the club will meet but once a month, on the second Thursday night.

A committee was authorized to proceed with arrangements for a banquet during the flower show.

Show Notes.

A very successful "advertising show" closed yesterday at the Coliseum. Its purpose was to display the things which go to make advertising to those who buy such things. A flower show is to increase the sale of flowers. But there was this difference: The advertising show managers charged exhibitors $1 a square foot for space. The acre and a half of floor was pretty well filled. Flower show space is always free, with premiums added. There ought not to be any question of getting exhibits; the wonder is that the retailers don't howl because they can't have all the room they want.

Arrangements are progressing rapidly for the big show November 7 to 11. The use of the Coliseum has awakened public interest in a very gratifying manner. Many outsiders are sending in suggestions. James Keeley, managing editor of the Tribune, has written to say that the show should be more than a mere display of growers' skill; it should teach the people what to plant, where and when. It is not an easy suggestion to carry out in November but the idea is so good an attempt will be made. A suggestion as to guides to explain to visitors is equally good.

to make; that smoking in the exhibition be strictly prohibited. Those in the trade are the only offenders. At a meeting on Tuesday many details were completed. The poster will be out in good season and more generally distributed than usual. The show is already getting good press work and will be well advertised.

Various Notes.

The Chicago Chronicle for October 11 says: "Chicago is the greatest flower market in the world and its twenty-eight wholesale cut flower houses handle over $5,000,000 worth of cut flowers alone during the year." That is altogether too good to be true. There are just seventeen places in Chicago where cut flowers are wholesaled. One day this summer three well versed wholesalers were talking of the volume of business done the past year and each wrote down an estimate on each house. The highest total was $1,370,000, the lowest $1,258,000 at wholesale value. The average of the three totals was $1,301,000 and was probably not far wrong for the year ending July 1, 1905. Because of increased glass it should naturally be larger this year.

E. C. Amling says that it is something surprising the way the use of asparagus strings has broadened since their character and usefulness has become known through the country. Mr. Amling has had much to do with making them known, but possibly the fact that a never failing supply is offered has had as much as anything to do with it.

The Chicago Carnation Co., Joliet, has taken space with the E. F. Winterson Co. and opened last week with a large shipment of fine Estelle chrysanthemums, carnations and miscellaneous stock. It is Manager Hartshorne's intention to purchase in this market such stock as they do not grow at Joliet, to supply their shipping trade, which will be carried on from the Joliet greenhouses as heretofore. Their stock is reported as all looking very good.

L. Coatsworth, of the Benthley-Coatsworth Co., thinks they have a good thing in sight in the new pink rose, Joe Hill, plants of which were obtained last season from the E. G. Hill Co.

Mr. Coatsworth intends going to New Castle and Richmond this week.

Miss Annie K. Luffman, who was with Albert Fuchs and his successor, Henry Koropp, left last week for Spokane, Wash., where she will be with Miss Rose Wright. Miss Luffman is widely known in the trade as for several years she has been Mr. Stewart's assistant in charge of the secretary's office at the S. A. F. conventions.

Wm. T. Buckley, of Springfield, Ill., and Miss Margaret Dwyer came to Chicago October 11 and were quietly married.

Nick Miller, formerly of Wilmette, who has for some time been with John Evans, at Richmond, Ind., has returned to take up the old work.

H. Luedtke, the Maywood carnation grower, says that he is more than pleased with the way the new Fiancee-pink carnation, Wm. Penn, has acted thus far in the season; fine grower; very free bloomer.

Sam Pieser is officiating at the cashier's window during the absence of G. E. Pieser, secretary of the Kennicott Bros. Co., who is in New York for two weeks.

Wietor Bros. are cutting some very good mums. They have the largest list of varieties of any grower in these parts. Bassett & Washburn are very well pleased with the new white chrysanthemum, Mme. Clementine Touset. Mr. Washburn says he thinks it will prove to be our best commercial white.

Weiland & Risch are highly pleased with the new Wellesley rose. They are just beginning to cut good long stems in quantity. The color is fine and the flower has great substance.

W. N. Rudd is sending the Winterson Co. excellent blooms of Midoet, one of Elmer Smith's seedling chrysanthemums. It is a fine deep pink and especially valuable because so early.

W. E. Lynch, in E. H. Hunt's market report, says that although sales foot up a good total, customers buy in a "lackadaisical" manner. Good word, that. The dictionary says it means languid or listless.

Good old Mrs. Robinson is not yet out of the race. Vaughan & Sperry have had this variety this week in shape not beaten by any white chrysanthemum in the market.

The United States Express Company will begin to operate over the Pere Marquette Railroad November 1.

JACKSONVILLE, ILL.—Harry Hoffman, who has been with Joseph Heintz & Sons for several years, will open a flower department at Kuechler's drug store.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Carnations are very scarce and, while plenty of medium grade roses are on the market, good stock is hard to find, bringing from $6 to $8 per hundred. Chrysanthemums are quite plentiful but mostly white. Violets are still very poor.

Business was fairly good the past week, a number of weddings and store openings keeping every one pretty well on the move.

Various Notes.

A recent visit to a number of establishments in the eastern part of the city showed a lot of fine stock. Herman Knope, foreman at Breitmeyer's Mack avenue place, is to be congratulated on the condition of the stock, it being in tip-top shape. Their mums are looking fine, having nice clean foliage and stems of good length. Among other things they have a fine bench of Adiantum Farleyense, some nice Bostons, a good lot of Nephrolepis elegantissima and, last but not least, three benches of fine poinsettias.

George Raekham has been having his share of trouble with thrips, this miserable pest having caused him many a poor night's sleep by invading his rose houses. His carnations are in good shape, and as reported before, he has a fine bench of cyclamens. A number of cement benches are to be seen here.

G. H. Taepke's new range of houses, where carnations only are grown, is in first-class shape. They are cutting lots of fine stock for so early in the season. On their old place everything is also in good order. They have an abundance of good roses and will cut lots of mums this fall. The Foley cable ventilator in use at this place is giving entire satisfaction.

A visit was next paid to J. F. Sullivan's establishment. Here a fine house of Killarney rose is to be seen. The other stock is also looking good, including some benches of mums. The sewer draining the water from the boiler pit into Conner's creek, is being lowered several feet, necessitating the digging of a very deep trench. The last asters of the season were also seen at "Sully's."

Chas. Plumb has been very busy this summer installing two large new boilers. Among other things he has a fine lot of Jerusalem cherries and celestial pepper plants; also a fine bench of poinsettias.

J. Krumholz is very busy getting things in shape for winter. He is cutting some very fine Gov. Wolcott. A house of Kaiserin has proved a very paying investment this summer.

B. Schroeter was quite busy the latter part of last week, with a large store decoration. His stock is also looking good. He makes a specialty of plants, having a fine lot of palms, rubbers, crotons, etc. Besides a fine bench of their new pink sport of Enechantress of which S. S. Skidelsky has the sale, they have several houses of other carnations and mums, also some good Meteors and a large collection of orchids.

The florists about the city are still complaining in regard to the extreme dullness of business. The heavy receipts of stock at all the four wholesale houses adds to the embarrassment of the situation. Prices were knocked down to almost nothing on all grades except the extra fancy.

In roses there are plenty in all grades and varieties. To quote the prices of the past week would hardly look well on paper. Chrysanthemums are hardly in as yet in large quantities and the commission men are holding them at rather stiff prices, considering the dull business.

Carnations are much better. These are not nearly so plentiful as roses; still, enough of them are in for the demand, with extra fancy as low as $2 per hundred. Violets have improved greatly since the cool weather arrived. These are selling fairly well at 25 cents per hundred. The frost has put an end to the long lingering outdoor stock, such as eosimos, dahlias, asters and tuberoses.

In greens there is everything one wants, and plenty of it, at usual prices.

Quite a number of the downtown florists are displaying signs in their windows, selling roses at 15 cents per dozen.

Club Meeting.

The club held its regular monthly meeting October 12 in Odd Fellows' Hall, twenty-six members being present when Vice-president Steidel called the meeting to order. The flower show committee was making its report when President Ammann arrived and took the chair. The committee reported progress and that everything was in readiness for a successful show next month. Mr. Weber, the chairman, again stated that the premiums will be paid in full the day after the show closes and that the money is already in the hands of the committee. Programs and advertising matter will be out next week.

The "erape pulling" committee made a report condemning the practice. The press committee reported that time hung heavily on their hands. The trustees reported that they had found a meeting hall in the new Strausberger music hall at the southeast corner of Grand and Shenandoah avenues. After a vote the club decided to hold its meetings hereafter in this hall. Owing to the next meeting of the club coming in flower show week, it was decided to hold the next meeting in the afternoon of the first Thursday in November. Five applications were received, from E. Burrows, supply broker; R. J. Windler, retailer; J. M. Walther, grower; Martin Malan, clerk for Mrs. Ayers, and Henry Braun, foreman for A. Jablonsky. It was decided to continue sending printed postal card notices of each meeting.

Various Notes.

The table decorations at the Simmons Hardware Co. opening were very much admired by the great crowds who visited the china department of this firm. Three tables were first set for a golden wedding, silver wedding and a wedding breakfast. Later dinner, reception and luncheon tables were shown. On Friday and Saturday hunting club, bachelor's and Thanksgiving dinner tables were seen. Each day some 2,000 roses were given to visitors. The work on the tables was by the Ellison Floral Co. and was a credit to the firm. Mrs. Ellison reports that she has taken many orders for dinners and weddings from this display. The entire floor was beautifully decorated with wild smilax, American Beauties and cosmos.

A. C. Canfield, of Springfield, Ill., spent Saturday here, visiting the trade. Mr. Canfield reports a big week during the state fair.

Miss Belle Miller, of Springfield, Ill., is sending splendid Carnots, with faultless stems and foliage, also other fine roses.

Fred Foster put in all his spare time at the horse show the past week. He made several entries and came in for some of the prize money.

Nine cash prizes aggregating $500 are being offered by the tree planting committee of the Civic Improvement League to the pupils of the high schools and academies of this city. The committee on awards includes H. C. Irish, Frank A. Weber and William Scott Hancock, who are well known in the trade.

Henry Ostertag was also conspicuous at the horse show the past week. He reports a number of large wedding orders for the end of the month.

Dr. Heine Marks has introduced a resolution in the city council to provide for a city forester, whose duty it shall be to supervise the planting of trees and protection of same on the city streets.

President Ammann at the club meeting appointed Theo Miller and J. J. Beneke a committee to look up transportation for the members who wish to go to Kansas City during the flower show there. The chances are that the florists' bowling team will go to bring back the Kellogg cup offered for that week.

The florist bowlers were again victorious on Thursday night, winning the match from the Enterprise team by good bowling, the team making 2,600 pins, averaging 866 per game and 174 per man. Meinhardt was high, 563; Beyer, 544; Ellison, 509; Beneke, 496, and Kuehn, 486. This places the team third in the race.

KANSAS CITY PREMIUMS.

Louis W. Shouse, secretary at Kansas City, has issued a supplementary list of premiums for their third flower show, November 13 to 18. The principal additions to the preliminary list are very liberal sums for retail florists' work, including table decorations, mantels, buffet tables, bowl of roses, etc. The Foley Mfg. Co., Chicago, offers a silver cup for a sweepstakes in one specimen bush plant of chrysanthemum.

NASHVILLE, TENN.—T. C. Joy & Son had a very large wedding decoration on Wednesday, October 18, and received shipments of fancy stock from Chicago.

The Market.

Business took on a very good aspect last week and things began to move along in a manner that was very gratifying. If this state of affairs continues there will be no kick coming during this season.

The advent of the chrysanthemum was doubtless in great part the cause of the increase of trade. They are beginning to arrive in goodly numbers and they sold out fast, $3 per dozen being the top price. It looks as if there will be a large number of mums on the market this year, but with a good demand they ought to be disposed of to advantage.

Roses continue about the same. The demand is fair only and the price low for the quality. Beauties sell well, though, and the price is well held. Carnations are arriving in large quantities and the price continues low. The very best fancies bring $2 per hundred. All colors are plentiful, save good red.

Some very good lilies are coming in now. Though we have had frosts, still the outdoor stuff has not been damaged to any great extent. Some very good valley is being cut by George & Allan. There has been a lively demand for all kinds of green goods.

Various Notes.

The regular monthly meeting of the Florists' Society was held last Saturday evening. The committee on revision of the constitution reported and the changes they advised were adopted. It was decided to hold our flower show as usual. The first one, a chrysanthemum show, is to be held on the second Saturday of November. The schedule has not been approved as yet but will be about the same as last year. The other shows will be of roses in February and carnations in March, to be held on our regular meeting dates.

The committee appointed to arrange for the shows consists of R. Witterstaetter, Ben George and J. Chas. Murphy.

There were two good seedling chrysanthemums before the local committee last Saturday, from Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., one a medium dark pink, the other cream white. Both were good for so early.

C. P. Dieterich & Bro., of Maysville, Ky., have completed a new carnation house. The benches are constructed of brick. So far the plants in this house have been doing extra well.

I regret to report the death of Herman G. Haerlin which occurred October 11. Mr. Haerlin was well known in trade circles in this city. He was 73 years old.

In these days of ideal employers and salesmen the weather has decided to take a hand and the sunny south is not in it with the sunny east. But, apart from the dahlia growers, the language used to designate the character of the weather is anything but ideal. In fact, most of the wholesalers use a word of only one syllable to express their feelings and those of them who pray, which, of course, includes the majority of them, are now using their spare time supplicating the manufacturer of the weather for a bitter and a nipping, old-fashioned, far-reaching frost and until their prayers are answered there will be no market and no business worthy of the name.

Now that gladioli and asters are gone and dahlias packing up for a long journey, the chrysanthemum is coming in a steady and ever widening stream. Fully two weeks ahead of any other season in quantity, size and beauty, the inevitable drop in values has already begun and on Monday only a very few touched the high-water mark, $3 a dozen. It looks to me as if, as with the violet, there are too many of them and with such an early and beautiful start the race is likely to degenerate into a rout, and the Lord pity the "lame, the halt and the blind" among them.

Roses have all suffered this week. On Monday the best Beauties could be bought for $15 and Brides and Maids for $4 per hundred. This is bottom, though, I am sure, for this season and before long they will all begin to climb. Some splendid Killarney and Richmond are reaching the market and sell well, as do Kaiserin and Carnot. Most of the carnations are still short-stemmed and below the mark. The novelties are commencing to arrive, however, and really good stock sells readily. The best retailers are very particular, however, and are making the best of their power as arbiters of values.

Violets are on the street and as common as the sunflower in Kansas. This is due to the warm weather, doubtless, and with the breath of winter will come perfume and depth of color and association again with the diamonds upon the palpitating bosoms of society. Some arriving are still good enough for 50 cents a hundred. But the rest, well, it is another case of "buyer's option."

Strange to say orchids are over-abundant. This does not happen often. But when you find cattleyas in every retail window in the city you do not need to be told there are "enough and to spare." It would be the "irony of fate" if some day the demand for orchids should not be equal to the supply. This hardly seems possible in our generation.

Some fine dahlias, the single and cactus varieties, still maintain their popularity and grace the retailers' windows. Lilies are increasing and weddings are running light, or else orchids are the thing for brides, considering the present surplus of valley.

Various Notes.

One wedding last Saturday, the Wilson-Marten nuptials at the church of the Heavenly Rest, was an orchid dream. Over a thousand cattleyas were used, most of them cut from the great conservatories of Mr. Wilson, at Great Neck and Philadelphia. Bowe had charge of the decorations and was ably assisted by that dean among artistic artificers in flowers, Arthur Merritt. This was the first all orchid decoration ever made in this country. Bride and maid carried orchid bouquets and orchids graced the manly bosoms of the groom and his assistants. Fifth avenue looked like a moving orchid garden after the ceremony was over.

Another great wedding at Shelburne, Vt., the Webb-Pulitzer affair, which occurred on Saturday, called for quite a little stock from here.

The big automobile race on Saturday enticed many of the wholesale florists and a good many of the Long Island growers over to the course near Garden City. Prominent among the millionaire florists in his own auto was W. H. Siebrecht and family, of Astoria. Next year he will be one of the racers, if a sharp eye is not kept on him. In fact, at the present rate of growth in value of land on Long Island every florist over there will be bringing his goods to market in his automobile before the robins nest again.

J. T. Lovett's dahlias and herbaceous flowers are handled by A. J. Guttman. Inadvertently an error was made as to this in our report of the exhibits at the New York club meeting a week ago.

John J. Perkins is handling some fine cattleyas at his headquarters on west Thirtieth street.

Charles Millang received twenty large cases of evergreens and other stock from Holland on Monday, his second shipment, and will have another large importation before the season closes. The stock is excellent and is disposed of almost as rapidly as assorted. Many of the big New York stores are using these goods and one Brooklyn house took a thousand plants on Tuesday.

Starke & Kleine, of 52 West Twenty-ninth street, have leased a large greenhouse in Astoria for the care of their palms and ferns, their present quarters being limited and their business growing rapidly, so that a permanent source of supply on which to draw at short notice became a necessity.

Current Comment.

The rich shades of orange of the maple, the bronze and scarlet of the oaks falling around us, with the beautiful yellow and bronze of the mums; surely these are pleasant days for the florist.

We have had six or seven weeks of the most superb fall weather. No doubt many other sections can say the same, but that does not make ours the less beautiful. It seems our mums were a little earlier than ever before. Good Kalb were cut October 5. There are now rather more of the early varieties than can be profitably disposed of, especially as we are still having dahlias and gladioli in good condition. How well cosmos would sell! But it is not to be had in this town. Everybody likes cosmos. How easy to plant a hundred boxes say 6x12 and five inches deep and grow them all summer and remove to the houses before frost. The slightest frost kills it and, unfortunately, that frost always comes around here before the beautiful cosmos is in flower. Referring again to the chrysanthemum, it is doubtful whether you want too many of the early sorts. It takes two or three weeks to educate the flower buyers to a real fondness for the mum, but once they become the fashion they go fast enough. And after the long month of November they are scarce enough after Thanksgiving.

There has not been much doing in society to call for flowers, but the business in funeral work has kept many busy. The funeral of Wm. B. Ranken, Niagara Falls' leading citizen, was the occasion for a marvelous display of flowers. Orders as well as designs came from all over the state. The funeral of another prominent man, S. Fred Nixon, seven times speaker of the assembly at Albany, brought many orders for costly pieces. He was buried at Westfield, fifty-four miles west of Buffalo on the Lake Shore. Special trains brought prominent men from many parts of the state.

Our assistant park superintendent, Captain Braik, is rustiating for a few weeks in the quiet little city of St. Catherine, Ont. Hope he will escape his annual dose of rheumatism.

Prof. Cowell is taking a week around New York and Boston. As he is engaged for Chicago, he had to make his eastern trip first.

Alexander Scott, of Baltimore, paid a short visit of two days to his brother, William.

One of Mr. Kasting's oldest employees, C. H. Kneitsch, has opened commodious quarters on the corner of Elliott and Huron streets, a few doors below his old employer, and will do a general wholesale commission business in cut flowers.

THE REVIEW will send the Grafted Rose book on receipt of 25 cents.

SMITH's Chrysanthemum Manual sent postpaid for 25 cents.

ANTICIPATING a flower show in Buffalo this fall, we planted early in May, one house of Chrysanthemums, consisting of the following exhibition varieties: Merza, W. R. Church, Convention Hall, Wm. Duckham, White Eaton, Yellow Eaton, Leila Filkins, Nellie Pockett, Cheltoni, Col. Appleton, S. T. Wright, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Henry Barnes, Mrs. Nathan Smith, Princess, General Hutton and many of this year's introduction. From present indications we have every reason to expect a large percentage of high grade blooms and as we have an abundance of commercial stock for our own use, we shall be pleased to correspond with intending exhibitors, or retailers planning a store exhibition, with the view of disposing of these blooms.

The Market.

During the past few weeks the weather has been very warm and consequently roses and carnations have been rushed along, causing considerable over-stock in roses, while carnations have moved off fairly well; in fact, the demand for white carnations has exceeded the supply nearly all the time, and prices have been stiff. Dahlias, having recovered from the effects of the early frost, are again blooming freely. Mums are coming in good quantities, especially white. Violets are plentiful.

The retail men all claim that business is ahead of former years at this time. Of course some of this may be attributed to the very large amount of funeral work done during this month.

We expect that during the next two weeks business will be somewhat quiet, as we always find that after the first supply of mums the demand is not as keen for a couple of weeks, or in other words until the first supply is cleaned up. This may be attributed to the fact that chrysanthemums rather enjoy the atmosphere of a drawing room, in fact too well to suit the average florist.

Various Notes.

Among the growers stock is all looking fine and prospects are bright for a good winter. The bright weather has been of very material benefit to the late planted roses and carnations.

The new firm of Hughes & Jennings, of Weston, has made its first shipment of carnations. Although late getting the houses up, the stock is in very nice condition.

E. Crowhurst, of Mimico, has been sending in very nice Bergmann, which were about first on the market.

Much comment has been made of late as to whether the retailer or the grower was making the most money. That question has been settled this fall so far as Toronto florists are concerned. One of the prominent growers is now sporting an automobile, while another one has just captured a challenge cup given by the Queen City Yacht Club for his new gasoline launch. The retail men are evidently out of it, as the honors are with the grower. D. J.

Seed Trade News.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

Egg plant seed, Columbian Mammoth White asparagus seed, roots of asparagus, the two-year-old size, and the crop of seed sweet potatoes are reported very short at one of the principal centers of supply for these articles.

VISITED CHICAGO:—Frank T. Emerson, of the Western Seed and Irrigation Co., Fremont, Neb.; Chr. Hansen, secretary A. Hansen, Copenhagen, Denmark; C. W. Warner, of Ames Plow Co., Boston, Mass.; Mrs. E. J. Hoopes, Muscatine, Ia.

MUSKMELON.

C. P. Coy & Son, Waterloo, Neb., advise us as follows, under date of October 14:

"All the crops of muskmelon seed that have been delivered us by farmers have come in short of our estimates. We find a large proportion of light, unfilled seeds, and there will be a further considerable shrinkage in fanning. Only a few crops are actually in hand, but such as have been received indicate a general shortage from previous reports."

ONION SEED.

The onion seed crop is shorter in California this year than it has ever been before and it has been difficult to estimate deliveries, partly because some varieties are said to have yielded not over fifty pounds per acre and partly because of a great proportion of light seed, which made a large shrinkage in cleaning. The Braslan Seed Growers' Co., on October 9, advised one of its customers that deliveries would be the following proportion of contract orders:

STILES D. WOODRUFF.

One of the pioneers in the seed growing industry in the United States is Stiles D. Woodruff, senior member of the firm of S. D. Woodruff & Sons, whose headquarters are at Orange, Conn. Mr. Woodruff at present lies critically ill with heart trouble, but until the past few months has always been an exceedingly active man, with a very wide acquaintance in the trade.

Stiles D. Woodruff.

Mr. Woodruff began his seed growing industry in 1865, upon his return from the civil war, and some of his early experiences make interesting reading to the present-day seed grower. The first seed crops grown were turnip, beet, parsnip, cabbage and sweet corn. The ruling price for the first few years for turnip, beet and parsnip to the trade was 40 cents per pound, cabbage $3 per pound, and sweet corn $3 per bushel.

Mr. Woodruff in his early days took up market gardening and his records show some fabulous prices for vegetables. Everything was sold in a wholesale way, cabbage bringing $25 per hundred heads, sweet corn $5 per hundred ears, tomatoes $3 per bushel and Lima beans $3 per bushel.

In recent years Mr. Woodruff confined his business to growing seeds for the wholesale trade and in 1892 the present partnership was formed by taking in his two sons, Frank C. and Watson S. Woodruff. The firm has been progressive and kept pace with the remarkable strides that are general throughout the seed trade. Where pounds and quarts were handled years ago hundreds of pounds and hundreds of bushels are handled now.

The firm makes a specialty of garden seeds in variety, growing extensively on their own farms such seeds as beet, carrot, parship, turnip, onion, tomato, sweet corn, etc., and they also make a specialty of Maine seed potatoes and onion sets. Their seed potato business in particular has grown to very large proportions. They have seed potato storehouses in Aroostook county, Maine, and have recently leased a large house at Queens, Long Island, where a liberal stock will be carried in addition to their places of business at Orange, Conn., and New York city, where they have a store at 82 Dey street.

Mr. Woodruff has held many positions of trust. He has twice represented his town in the legislature. Besides the two sons associated with him in business he has another son, Robert J., lawyer, prosecuting attorney for the common pleas court of New Haven county, and one daughter, Mary.

SWEET CORN AND CUCUMBER.

Writing at Fremont, Neb., under date of October 13, Frank T. Emerson, who has recently returned from a trip to New England, says:

"In the REVIEW of October 12 we note a paragraph in reference to sweet corn and cucumber crop reports having been received to the effect that the present outlook is favorable in relation to the existing conditions and that prospects for a good harvest never were better. We think there is generally a mistaken idea in relation to sweet corn at this time.

"Leading Connecticut growers have informed the writer that the Connecticut acreage is small compared with that of previous years, and crop prospects do not indicate any excess product for this season.

"We understand that two or three western canning companies, whose crops of sweet corn were only partially harvested for canning purposes, and consequently were allowed to remain in the field, have been flooding the trade with inquiries for offers, thus giving an erroneous impression to the seed trade, for such stock should not be of any value for seed purposes.

"We have been informed that the Monroe county, N. Y., sweet corn growers held their crops last spring until too late to realize the price they aimed to receive and were consequently discouraged from planting the usual acreage this season.

"There remain but Wakeman, O., Waterloo and Fremont, Neb., to be heard from that would cut any figure in the reduction of market prices, and unquestionably the yield per acre in Nebraska will not prove as large as anticipated, on account of severe storms accompanied with high winds during the latter part of the season that broke down quite a large per cent of the stalks, allowing the ears to come in contact with the ground, which, through the effect of rains, have become damaged and to a great extent rendered unfit for seed purposes.

"So that we feel it is too early as yet to arrive at any conclusion in accordance with the suggestion contained in the article above referred to.

"In relation to cucumber we can only say that every day demonstrates the fact in this portion of Nebraska that the crop has been largely overestimated. We could name a number of instances illustrating the shortages now being realized.

"Tracts containing from fifteen to forty acres each, that, according to reports contained in field-note books made in August, anticipating at that time an average crop of at least 100 pounds per acre, are now showing a yield of about fifty pounds per acre only, and there are quite a number of large tracts that will not pay for harvesting and which have been consequently abandoned.

"We feel quite sure that the above stated conditions in Nebraska will be confirmed by other growers.

"My idea in writing you at the present time as above is to prevent erroneous reports from being circulated through the seed trade at large that would possibly occasion a depressing effect on the present market values, which in reality are at least twenty-five per cent lower than they should be to permit the growing of cucumber seed crops at even a reasonably profitable margin."

GERMAN SEED CROPS.

Writing at the end of September the Erfurt correspondent of the Horticultural Trade Journal reports as follows:

Our autumn has not kept up its reputation, having commenced in very moist fashion, but no great harm is done as yet, and we are hoping for good average settled weather in October and November.

As stated in last report, cauliflower, kale, parsley, parsnip, turnips, swedes, carrots, especially the long sorts, and mangels have given, or are giving, abundant crops, while spinach and cabbage are about up to average. Lettuces have not turned out quite as well as expected a few weeks ago, but there will be no scarcity on the whole. Radishes are thrashing out rather shorter than estimated, and sugar beets will be less plentiful than was calculated a month ago, so that prices are likely to rise about twenty-five per cent over last quotations.

Peas have turned out much as expected, an average crop of the round sorts, and an under-average one of the wrinkled, having been gathered. The crop of dwarf French beans, unless untoward weather intervenes, will be a good one, and runner beans are also likely to be plentiful, except perhaps one or two of the later kinds.

Leeks and onions are giving much trouble this season. Both are very scarce and growers are holding out in the hopes of getting long prices, so that buyers must make up their minds for a stiff rise in the quotations.

Flower seed crops are, generally speaking, good this year. Nearly all out-door annuals, chrysanthemum, dianthus, phlox, etc., having done well, though mignonette is a little disappointing and nasturtiums have yielded poorly with most growers. Sweet peas have given an excellent crop, which is already in warehouse, and large shipments are already being made to England and elsewhere. Early-flowering asters, dwarf German comet, etc., do not look as strong as could be wished, and prices are likely to be higher than last year. The later flowering classes, such as Victoria, are, on the other hand, looking well to date and give hopes of a better crop at more moderate figures than was the case last season. Pansies are, as formerly reported, only a moderate crop, but enough seed will probably be saved to supply orders in full.

Perennials have in general yielded quite a record crop, that of aquilegias and hollyhocks being especially abundant. Some biennials, however, such as sweet williams, single wallflowers and canterbury bells, have done poorly, the weather last winter having affected them unfavorably. Stocks, both annual and biennial, as also double wallflowers, promise to yield a medium crop and prices will be pretty much as usual.

Of seeds saved on the stages and in the greenhouses, petunias, gloxinias and calceolarias are doing well, while primulas and cinerarias have given much less seed, than usual, so that they will be quoted higher than last year.

The Market.

Dahlias and cosmos, cosmos and dahlias, these flowers never were so plentiful nor so fine. The markets are full of them and you can buy them at your own price. But the florists are not benefited by them; in fact, they have almost killed business as far as the other flowers are concerned. Mums are coming in strong and are feeling the effects of the outdoor flowers, as the sale is slow and prices low. The wholesalers, both religious and otherwise, are praying for a killing frost, for if the fine weather lasts a short time longer there will be a deluge of mums the like of which has never been seen. It is bad enough now and if it gets much worse the commission men will be swamped completely. Roses are feeling the effect of the summer weather and are arriving in great quantities and the man who buys in quantity makes his own price.

The horse show, which was expected to help so much, was rather a disappointment to many, as the quantity of flowers used was not up to expectations.

Various Notes.

Mrs. E. A. Williams finished a very busy week, having had a large number of decorations, many of which were quite large affairs.

A. W. Smith is making a grand display of outdoor flowers and his windows are constantly crowded with spectators, many of whom cannot resist taking a few home for the family.

CHRYSANTHEMUMS

We have an unsurpassed stock of fancy and ordinary varieties, in white, pink and yellow. No order too large to be filled from our own stock, and none too small to receive our careful attention. Our Beauties, Liberties, Brides, Maids, Valley and Carnations, were never finer. We offer Wild Smilax in quantities.

The Market.

October sunshine has not been conducive to the florists' business. In a nutshell, I can say confidently that it is quiet, much more so than was expected after such a brilliant start in September. While many nuptial knots are being tied, there are not many of the elaborate kind, as was anticipated earlier in the season. Flowers of all kinds are plentiful and a notable improvement is in evidence all around.

Beauties are used in large quantities in this market and it is surprising that some wide-awake grower has not taken advantage of this opportunity. Tea roses are "up against it," as is usual at this time, and will suffer more as the usual deluge of mums arrives.

Carnations suffer less, as the demand is greater. Improvement in this line is quite satisfactory, both in quality and quantity. Mums are coming along fast and the early varieties are at their best. Opah, Montmort and Monrovia are the best early varieties in their respective colors. Pacific, Polly Rose, Halliday, Mrs. Coombes and Ivory will soon follow. Then for the glory of the mum family in the later varieties.

Various Notes.

The principal event during the early part of October was the annual convention of the American Civic Association, held October 4 to 6 in the Chamber of Commerce. The program was interesting and typical of the organization's scope and motives. The attendance was large. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, J. Horace McFarland; treasurer, William B. Howland, New York; secretary, Clinton Rogers Woodruff, Philadelphia.

Adam Graham, one of the veteran florists of Cleveland, has recently been elected to the presidency of one of the largest trust companies of Cleveland. His numerous friends throughout this country will be pleased to hear of this good fortune. FOREST CITY.

MILWAUKEE.

The Milwaukee flower show was originally scheduled for November 6 to 10, but on account of the dates conflicting with those of Chicago, the executive committee has decided to hold the show a week later, November 14 to 18. The committee is now working on the official program and premium list and there will be quite a number of special premiums for table decorations, mantel decorations, baskets, bouquets, etc. A very successful show is in prospect. F. H. Holton is chairman of the executive committee and C. C. Pollworth, secretary.

PALMS FROM SEED.

A Crop Requiring Patience.

The growing of hardy palms from seed is one of the branches of our business that is not followed by a great portion of nurserymen, and yet to a person with patience enough it is lucrative. It is at this season of the year we get our best seeds. Palm seeds can be kept for several years and still retain their vitality if kept in a dry place, although like everything else the fresh-picked seeds will germinate much quicker.

Two years ago I planted several thousands of Brahea edulis seeds that I had kept about three years and they are at this late date still slowly coming up through the sand five years after they were picked from the tree. Under ordinary circumstances three months is about the usual time needed to get a good showing of young plants when the seed is fresh. It usually takes about the same length of time to get Brahea filamentosa, Washingtonia robusta and Phoenix Canariensis and P. tenuis to show themselves; if it takes any longer it may be depended on that the seeds were not strictly fresh when planted. Chamærops excelsa takes from four to six months and even longer and Chamærops humilis the same. Corypha Australis and Livistona Australis take from six to nine months and Erythea armata and Erythea edulis from six months to one year. These are grown, of course, without bottom heat of any kind. There are some other varieties of palms grown here for outside ornamentation, but those I have mentioned are hardy in the latitude of San Francisco and are the most popular kinds.

The fact that it takes a few years to realize anything from the raising of palms is the reason why more dealers do not grow them, but the demand is good and steadily increasing for good specimens of any of the kinds I have noted.

Both Chamærops excelsa and C. humilis are of slow growth and until six years old make very little show. About this time they begin to stretch upward and if planted in a favorable situation increase in size fairly rapidly. They are the easiest of all the palm family to transplant and stand considerable abuse. Both Brahea filifera and Washingtonia robusta will, in the open ground, make nice specimens in about four years from seed and after that are of very rapid growth. They can be easily transplanted if the leaves are cut off at any season of the year and when so treated will make a perfect crown again in a year's time. It is impossible with these sorts to save the foliage and it should invariably be removed. None of the Erytheas transplant as easily, and E. armata, being of extremely slow growth, must be very carefully treated. E. edulis is of somewhat faster growth and stands shifting better.

Phoenix Canariensis makes a salable tree in from four to five years if planted in the open. It is easily moved, provided the weather is favorable, but should it commence to wilt, the branches should be entirely cut back to save it. P. tenuis is of much slower growth and does not make a really showy specimen under eight years from seed. Corypha Australis in this latitude is of slow growth and not easy to transplant. Livistona Chinensis is also of slow growth and, like the preceding, should be handled in tubs or boxes.

It is, of course, safer to handle all varieties of hardy palms in a like manner and, were it not for the fact that it is possible to obtain fully twice the growth in the open ground, it would pay to do so, but as palms are slow-growing in any event, they cost too much to raise in this way. When transplanted every second year there is no danger in re-digging and replanting, but when a palm of any of the kinds I have mentioned has been growing in one place over that length of time, it is safer to prune the foliage well, as this keeps the trunk from being dried out too much in case the stems and leaves begin to shrivel. The chamærops are an exception to this rule and I have transplanted trees fifteen feet high that had been standing in one situation for over twenty years, with balls of earth only eighteen inches in diameter and twenty-four inches deep, without sacrificing any of the foliage.

Various Comment.

A month's rain has desolated our gardens. Asters are gone, also sweet peas, and other hardy stuff is very shabby. Flowers are consequently scarce, as the florists here do not expect much demand for indoor stock for some weeks yet.

A. J. Woodward has a fine lot of Princess of Wales violets outdoors.

The New Westminster fair held last week, this year obtained the Dominion grant of $50,000. I expected to see a good flower show in connection with it but anything more hopeless it has never been my lot to witness. According to the regulations pot plants were on exhibition ten days. They were in the darkest and draughtiest portion of the buildings. They were judged four days after staging, when the flowers had dropped from the plants and the foliage was thick with dust. The luckless plant exhibitors informed me that although the time limit for staging was 10 a. m. the benches for them were not erected until 10 p. m. On arriving with cut flowers, four days after the pot plants were up, the same delightful experience befell me. No benches. We stood guard over our exhibits, which were on the ground, while the benches were put up. I then discovered that according to the rules they were to be judged twenty-four hours later. Representation at headquarters produced prompt judges. I took over an accepted exhibit of hardy herbaceous plants, not in the schedule, and had to rustle lumber and a carpenter to put up a bench for myself at my own expense. Saturday night, when the show closed, we were informed that no exhibit could be removed until Monday morning. While I condemn the flower show I cannot speak too highly of the display of fruit. I doubt if such a magnificent lot of apples was ever before seen. Holders of good stocks of fruit trees, especially apples, would do well to turn their attention to this province. The home supply is not nearly equal to the demand.

The grounds around the exhibition building were well kept. Mr. Robinson, the gardener in charge, is to be complimented. His beds of foliage plants were gay and this is a climate where such a style is not the rule and, moreover, very difficult to manage, as we have not sufficient heat in the summer. A free use had been made of Geranium Mme. Saleroi, Iresine Lindenii and I. Herbstii, a green alternanthera and a few other kindred subjects. The list available for the purpose in this climate is so small as to deter most people from attempting the task. E. A. W.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

We have had very warm weather for the past week and flowers have kept poorly in consequence. Outdoor mums have come in with a rush and I am of the opinion that they are not quite as good as those we had a year ago. The growers have kept the prices up thus far, but they will certainly get cheaper in a few days. Indoor mums are selling at from $1 to $2.50 per dozen, with good demand.

Roses are still more plentiful than they have been, but the demand, especially for the best stock, is good. Carnations are also being brought into town in goodly quantities and are being used up clean. Valley is in good supply, also Lilium longiflorum. Smilax is more plentiful, but the majority of it is soft. Cosmos helps to fill up the windows and is about the last of the outdoor stock for this season, as the dahlias and other cheap flowers are nearly over for this year.

Although there is nothing rushing in the way of business there is a good, steady demand for all kinds of the best quality of stock.

Various Notes.

C. G. Keene has opened a floral establishment at the entrance to Mountain View cemetery, Oakland.

A visit to the nurseries of E. F. Wagner, at Elmhurst, shows a big stock of well grown ferns on hand. Mr. Wagner makes a specialty of the various kinds of nephrolepis and has some magnificent specimens, in addition to thousands of smaller plants.

F. Ludemann is expected home from his extended European trip in a few days.

D. Greuttner, of Vallejo, was in town this week.

Domoto Bros. are receiving large consignments of Japanese stock. They are the largest importers on this coast in that line.

The commission appointed by the state to select a plant and seed experimental station in southern California left for that part this week.

F. C. Jaeger, the Sutter street florist, reports a good business during the month of September. His show of flowers is one of the sights of his neighborhood.

Chas. Kruse, of Piedmont, has finished replanting his houses and has everything in ship-shape for a good season's rose cutting.

Chas. Gardiner will leave this week on a month's trip to Mexico. G.

PLANT FOR NAME.

I send a small sample of a flowering shrub. Will you be kind enough to classify it for me, as I cannot find anyone who knows what it is? J. S.

Either Bougainvillea glabra or B. Sanderiana, probably the latter, which is of a bushy, shrub-like habit. The first named is an old and popular greenhouse climber, the latter considerably used at Easter and Decoration day in the large flower centers, more especially at the former festival. W. N. C.

LARGE nurseries are beginning to find out that cheap prices are not so good a recommendation, nor so profitable, as well grown stock.

A. W. ORR, state nursery inspector for Texas, says the soil conditions around Fort Worth are unusually favorable for the nursery business.

A NUMBER of European nurserymen suffered a rude shock in the assignment of the Clucas & Boddington Co. Several claims exceeded $1,000.

THE Texas Nurserymen's Association is already at work preparing for next year's meeting of the national association at Dallas. They plan to give the visitors "the time of their lives."

SEQUOIA SEEDLINGS.

The ancient race of the sequoia seems to be in a fair way to become extinct or to be maintained only in a few protected national parks and forest reserves.

The seed of the sequoia commands a good price. It is collected and the species propagated by nurserymen both at home and abroad, but mainly as an ornamental tree. Neither sapling nor young seedling reproduction is very abundant in the big-tree groves on the Sierra slopes, and little or no attempt has been made to transplant the wild forest-grown seedlings.

An interesting experiment, however, which has proved an entire success, was started in the early spring of 1904 by Ranger L. L. Davis in charge of the General Grant national park. He has succeeded in setting out small big-tree seedlings, collected from a few localities where they had come up naturally, to various sites about the park.

The germination of the seed of the big-tree is slightly difficult—ordinarily hindered by the heavy trash and litter accumulating under the sequoia stand, but an opportune seed year allowed advantage to be quickly taken of cleared spots, and seedlings now two or three years old have started several thousand times as dense as they can live to grow up, the number of seedlings averaging on some spots over 2,500 to the square rod.

The experiments in 1904 were sufficient to indicate the exact size of plants, and the methods of transplanting which will give most assured success, and allow the reproduction in the park to be very largely extended.

Some 800 plants were transplanted. The trial was entirely satisfactory, as very few seedlings died even when set out in unfavorable conditions of soil moisture. The plantation came through a summer exceptionally hot and droughty, even at the elevation—about 6,000 to 7,000 feet, of the park, and though the watering of the transplants, carried on into midsummer, had then to be abandoned because of failing water supply.

Seedlings between one and eighteen inches high were dug up carefully to avoid injury to the long tap root, were carried in pails in a puddle to the planting sites—generally the small fire-opened spots in the forest, and set out in deep, watered holes, the whole root system being carefully spread out, and the hole filled in with fine earth.

Planting two seedlings together was at first tried, but as both seedlings always lived the practice was discontinued. No deaths resulted from a severe freeze, which occurred in April immediately following the transplanting when the soil was bare of snow.

The best of the transplanted growth occurred where there was most abundant light. Plants of six to ten inches height grew from five to eight inches in the season. Most of the plants set out were from four to eighteen inches in size—that is two to three years old. These have taproots often one to two or more feet long, and they are therefore transplanted with some difficulty, and if with proper care at some expense of time. However, some plants one to four inches high, or one year old, were set out, which did not succeed so well. Most of the ten per cent loss noted at the end of the first season was confined to this size class. It is evident, therefore, that the larger sizes must be used for transplanting, in spite of their less suitable root system, and for succeeding years 4-inch to 10-inch stock will be employed. Failures were due to the inadequate root system,—not sufficiently developed to reach moisture deeper in the soil, and so to maintain the plant against the summer's drought.

TRITOMAS.

I would like to know more about tritomas. I had a batch last year and covered them well with horse manure and dry leaves, but they were all frost-killed last spring. I do not believe tritoma is hardy in Illinois. I would like to know how best to propagate and keep over winter. L. M.

We have found the tritomas, or kniphofias, quite hardy in Massachusetts, although our minimum temperature has fallen as low as 25 degrees below zero. Everything depends, however, on the situation accorded the plants. If on level ground, where water will lie, they are very likely to rot, but on well drained land there should be no trouble in carrying them over.

Give the plants a good coating of dry leaves after the ground is frozen. Do not use any manure over them. Remember that dampness rather than cold is likely to kill them.

Propagation may be effected either by seeds or division of the roots. The seeds germinate very readily and make nice flowering plants inside of a year. There are now some extra fine forms of tritoma, much superior to the old T. grandiflora, and these are well worth the attention of florists and nurserymen.

If your land gets water logged in winter it would be well to lift the tritomas in November and pack close together in a cold-frame, covering with light, sandy soil and later with dry leaves.

EVERGREEN SEEDLINGS.

On October 10 the U. S. general appraisers at New York took up the protest of P. Ouwerkerk as to the assessment of duty on an invoice consisting of a variety of trees and shrubs, returned by the appraiser as "nursery stock," and assessed for duty by the collector at twenty-five per cent ad valorem under the last clause in paragraph 252 of the tariff act of 1897. The goods are claimed to be dutiable at $1 per 1,000 plants and fifteen per cent ad valorem, under the same paragraph, as "evergreen seedlings." The relevant provisions of paragraph 252 are as follows:

252. * * * Evergreen seedlings, one dollar per thousand plants and fifteen per centum ad valorem; * * * stocks, cuttings and seedlings of all fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen, shrubs and vines, Manetti, multiflora, and brier rose, and all trees, shrubs, plants and vines, commonly known as nursery or greenhouse stock, not specially provided for in this Act, twenty-five per centum ad valorem.

The findings of the board were:

1. "Evergreen Seedlings."—The provision for "evergreen seedlings" in paragraph 252, tariff act of 1897, is not restricted to such evergreen plants as the conifers and box, but applies to seedlings of all plants which are "evergreen"—that is, which retain their greenness or verdure throughout the year—as distinguished from those which are deciduous, or which lose their foliage every year; and it is sufficient if a plant fall within the general class of evergreens, irrespective of the question whether it is hardy in a particular locality or under given climatic conditions.

2. Rhododendrons and Laurel.—Seedlings of the plants known as Aucuba Japonica, or Japanese laurel, Rhododendron ponticum, a species of rhododendron, and Kalmia latifolia, or American laurel, all of which are shown to be evergreens, though perhaps not all hardy in every part of the United States, are dutiable as "evergreen seedlings," under said paragraph 252, and not as nursery stock.

In reviewing the reasons for the above conclusions General Appraiser Waite says in part:

The appraiser reports that most of the plants are well-known evergreen trees, of such common varieties as fir, cypress, cedar, box, etc., but that the plants of those varieties in the importation are in no sense seedlings, having been either grafted, budded, or grown from cuttings. There is direct conflict between the statements of the appraiser and the testimony of the importer, the latter declaring that the plants are evergreens grown from seed. The testimony of the importer, however, is uncorroborated, is not very full or satisfactory, and, in view of his interest in the case, can not be regarded as supplying the necessary preponderance of evidence to overcome the effect of the appraiser's reports, which are carefully drawn and presumably based upon adequate investigation of the facts. We accordingly find the facts to be as reported by the appraiser, so far as concerns the plants above referred to. In Board decision in re Rolker, G. A. 5305 (T. D. 24305), the provision for "evergreen seedlings" in said paragraph 252 was construed to apply to evergreens grown from seed, as distinguished from those propagated by cuttings, budding, or grafting, the latter class falling under the last subdivision of the paragraph. That ruling was never appealed from and will govern here.

Three other varieties of plants are involved, designated, respectively, Aucuba Japonica, Rhododendron ponticum, and Kalmia latifolia, which are conceded by the appraiser to be evergreen seedlings. As will be seen hereafter, these plants are species of rhododendrons or laurel, or similar plants. The appraiser's reasons for returning them as nursery stock rather than as evergreen seedlings are perhaps best stated in the following excerpt from his report:

"The term evergreen seedlings as employed in the tariff is believed to refer to the same kind of trees that are commonly called 'evergreens' by the public, and which include the pine, cypress, fir, cedar, and other well-known trees, and in its application is confined exclusively to the conifers and box, and the common understanding of the word evergreens has been followed by this office. Any other interpretation could not fail to result in confusion, for if the term evergreen seedlings were to apply to the seedlings of all evergreen trees and shrubs, it would cover orange and lemon trees which are truly evergreen, araucarias, a variety of plants extensively grown under glass in this country and usually attaining a height of eighteen inches, yet in its native place (Norfolk Islands) it is a ponderous evergreen tree 150 feet high and twenty feet in circumference, and many other plants."

It is believed the construction adopted by the appraiser places a narrower limitation upon the statute than the ordinary meaning of the language justifies. "Evergreen," used as an adjective, means "always green; verdant throughout the year" (Century Dictionary), or "retaining greenness or verdure throughout the year; not deciduous" (Standard Dictionary). As a noun the word is defined as "a plant that retains its verdure through all seasons, as the pine and other coniferous trees, the holly, laurel, holm-oak, ivy, rhododendron, and many others" (Century Dictionary). In the provision for "evergreen seedlings" the word is doubtless used by way of contrast with "deciduous," as indicated in the provision for "fruit and ornamental trees, deciduous and evergreen." A deciduous plant is one which loses its leaves, etc., every year, especially in the autumn.

The appraiser evidently thinks his action conforms to the trade understanding of the term. We hesitate to find, however, upon the facts reported by him, that a trade use of the term "evergreen seedlings," more restricted than its common use, existed at the time of the passage of the act, or was so well known as to impress itself upon the language adopted by Congress.

That the plants under discussion are evergreens in the commonly accepted sense of the term is apparent from standard authorities, if not from the record. Aucuba Japonica, sometimes called the Japanese laurel, is one of the best known species of aucuba, "a small genus of Asiatic evergreen shrubs of the dogwood family." (Standard and Century dictionaries.) English botanical works speak of aucuba as fine, hardy, evergreen shrubs, thriving better than any others in the smoky atmosphere of dense cities. (Paxton's Botanical Dictionary; Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening; Lindley's Treasury of Botany.)

and, again, that they "are handsome shrubs, much cultivated for their evergreen, leathery leaves," etc.; that "the Pontic rhododendron, R. ponticum, is the most common species of European gardens, hardy only as a low shrub in the northern United States." The Encyclopedia Britannica says, "the varieties grown in gardens are mostly derived from the Pontic species (R. ponticum) and the Virginian R. Catawbiense. These are mostly hardy in England. The common Pontic variety is excellent for game covert from its hardness," etc.

The genus Kalmia is said to comprise "six species of ornamental hardy evergreen shrubs," of which Kalmia latifolia is the best-known and most grown species. (Nicholson's Dictionary of Gardening.) This species is widely known in the United States as the American laurel.

The appraiser does not deny that the plants referred to are evergreens in this broad sense, but states that the Aucuba Japonica is cultivated in this country almost exclusively as a decorative shrub and grown under glass, and that if exposed to the winters of this climate it would perish. He admits that the Rhododendron ponticum is hardy in our usual winters, but maintains that neither that plant nor the Kalmia latifolia is hardy in all sections of the United States. In our judgment, however, inquiry as to whether a plant is hardy or not in a particular locality or under given climatic conditions is not the proper test to determine its tariff classification as an evergreen. It is sufficient if it fall within the general class of evergreen plants.

The protests are sustained with respect to Aucuba Japonica, Kalmia latifolia, and Rhododendron ponticum, and overruled as to all other merchandise.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business has been good the past week. There have been a large number of weddings and receptions, and these, in addition to a large amount of funeral work, have given the trade a very busy week. There is good supply of roses and carnations coming in. Carnations as yet are rather short-stemmed but the quality is good. Geo. M. Kellogg is sending in some good roses. His Carnots are especially fine. There is an abundance of dahlias, which find a ready sale at prices ranging from 50c to $1 per dozen, retail.

Various Notes.

It is rumored that the Budd Park Floral Co. will open a down town store in the near future. This company acquired the old Vesey greenhouses about three months ago, and has made a wonderful change in the appearance of the place in that time. They have already worked up a good trade. A specialty is made of ferns, of which they have a fine stock. They will do a wholesale and retail business. A large amount of credit for the success of the new firm is due to the grower, Theodore Kahma, formerly of Philadelphia, who is considered one of the best in this section.

The Alpha Floral Co. has installed a new roll-top desk and a typewriter and is remodeling the show window. This firm is rapidly coming to the front and now has one of the leading flower stores of the city.

The greenhouses of the Wm. L. Rock Flower Co. are well worth a visit now. They have one of the finest houses of mums we have seen for some time and some unusually fine specimens of Nephrolepis elegantissima. They also have a large range of houses planted in carnations which are looking fine.

Ed A. Humfeld has a new delivery wagon that is a dandy. KAY-SEE.

ABUNDANCE (White)

The phenomenal yielder, the freest, earliest bloomer in existence, the most profitable carnation ever offered to the trade, easily gives four times as many flowers as the freest bloomer already introduced; a bench planted Aug. 31 is now in full bloom to which there will be no let up until thrown out next summer; come and see it, it will pay you if you are in the market for a carnation that will give you plenty of flowers at all times and not only at certain times. A good size, long stemmed flower. You can make no mistake by stocking up with it. Price for well-rooted cuttings, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate; cuttings delivered as soon as rooted; send in your order early as orders are filled in strict rotation. GODFREY ASCHMANN

OF AMERICA

Order now while the weather permits shipping. Notice—When you undertake anything, do it well or not at all. This is our motto adopted 10 years ago when we imported the first lot of this well known pot plant, the ARAUCARIA EXCELSA from Belgium. These everlasting green foliaged pot plants are growing more in favor by the tasteful plant buyers of this land from year to year. Please watch the growth of our importation during the last 10 years: first year 100, second 250, third 500, fourth 1000, fifth 2,000. This year (1905) which is the 10th anniversary of our first importation, our spring importation amounted to 5,000. All these are grown for us under contract by an Araucaria specialist in Belgium. I must say for the benefit of my customers that they were never before so nice and large for the money as this year. I herewith quote you special prices on these, in or out of:

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

The Nassau County Horticultural Society held its monthly meeting at the Glen Cove Greenhouses October 4. President Harrison occupied the chair. The attendance was large and all seemed most enthusiastic for the welfare of this young society. Two new members were elected, Wm. Maher, of East Island, Glen Cove, and Mr. Jamkie, of Floral Park, and two others were nominated.

The exhibition table was loaded, nearly every member present contributing something toward the fine display. Dahlias were most prominent. The monthly prizes were for twelve carnations arranged for effect and for collection of dahlias. Both classes were well represented. The dahlia prize was won by Felix Mense, with a beautiful assortment of twenty-six varieties, while the one for carnations was carried off by Mr. Trepass, Glen Cove.

Two more handsome cups have been given the society for prizes at the coming flower show, also money prizes by the Stumpp & Walter, Thorburn, Vaughan, Boddington and Bonora companies. The show will be held November 1 and 2.

Thrifty plants from 3-in. pots, in white, clear light pink, blue and bright scarlet, $5.00 per 100.

Field-Grown Asparagus Sprengerii

Those who have purchased our field-grown plants in the past are convinced that they are much superior to pot-grown, both for pots and bench culture.

When housed they immediately start into active growth, throwing up numerous growths, which come to perfection much earlier than those from pots. Field culture adds to the vigor of the plants and an enormous crop of green is the result.

I HAVE not missed a single issue of the REVIEW since its first appearance and look for it with ever increasing interest and pleasure. I find it is of much value to me.—W. A. KNOTT, Cape May, N. J.

SOUTH HAVEN, MICH.—E. S. Thompson, manager of the Michigan Seed Co., has been shipping some very fine cut blooms of dahlias to Chicago the past few weeks in spite of the very dry weather, which has operated to keep down the size of the flowers. Mr. Thompson not only has all the new sorts in all types but he has raised a number of very promising seedlings, one, a very large, orange-colored flower, being especially good.

CACTUS DAHLIAS.

A number of members of the floral committee of the Royal Horticultural Society of Great Britain recently inspected the dahlia trials at Wisley and made the selection given below from the cactus varieties. The flowers were not judged from the exhibition standpoint, but simply as making the finest display as garden plants; and as many buyers look at dahlias from this point only, the list may be useful to include in catalogues:

Arab, Aunt Chloe, A. Dunbar, Dainty, Floradora, J. H. Jackson, Mavis, Mary Service, Mrs. Jno. Goddard, Mrs. McKergow, Orion, Reliable, Waterloo.

THOUSAND-LEGS.

I have had the same trouble with millepedes as has J. H. C. and was told in this paper that tobacco stems would kill them. Not having stems I used tobacco powder, dusting it over everything in the house, plants, benches, walks, etc. In the morning I would find them dead by the thousands. Lime did not hurt them at all, but they will run when the tobacco touches them, and if they get a good dose they will die inside of fifteen minutes. They have been very destructive to sweet peas, small ferns, schizanthus, etc., eating the latter around the base near the root until the plant drops over. C. F. D.

PLEASE stop my advertisement in the REVIEW, it was a winner; plants all sold. —C. C. WARBURTON, Battle Creek, Mich.

WELLINGTON, O.—T. G. Yale has had a very bad summer. He was building two new houses 20x100, to meet the demands of increasing trade, when he fell and sustained injuries which laid him up for a month. Then Mrs. Yale became ill and grew rapidly worse until she passed away.

Various Comment.

During a recent visit to W. Honberger's place in West Toledo the proprietor was not at home, but the carnation houses were looking good.

At G. A. Heint's everything looked fine, especially some houses of early planted carnations that show long stems and fine flowers for this time of the year. All the rose houses promise a good crop. Plants are healthy and breaking nicely. Mums are beginning to come in, but the best thing on the place is a long bench of poinsettias, which certainly are as nice a lot as one would wish to see for this time of the year.

John F. Gratopp is feeling a little blue about five benches of his carnations that he planted about ten days after a good soaking rain. The plants had started to make a lot of new feeding roots and were soft as they could be and did not transplant well nor take hold of the soil as they should. All the old houses that were planted before the rain are in fine shape. Mr. Gratopp put in a steam pump this summer for a double purpose. First to pump his manure water, then to force the hot water through his heating pipes during the fall and spring months, when the weather is warm enough for hot water heating.

At C. Kaminski's, on LaGrange street, we found a fine lot of carnations and a bench of cyclamens in 5-inch and 6-inch pots that are hard to beat. Mr. Kaminski makes a very good showing for the first season that he is in business. He was busy with funeral work, which shows that business is coming his way.

Wohler Bros. are bringing in some very nice mums.

E. Kuhnke is in his glory since he built a narrow gauge railroad up to the boiler shed. He can haul thirty tons of coal in half a day with one horse and two men, while a team and two men had to work a day on the same job before.

ANOTHER TALK

After all, advertising is but sitting right down and having a short talk with your friends and possible customers—a sort of commercial “heart to heart” showing up of some one of the things that a 50 years’ reputation is based on. But we are at a decided disadvantage—you often let us do all the talking! It isn’t fair to think that in one brief talk all the good there is in our greenhouses can even be enumerated, let alone expanded on. So we have printed up a lot of vital things about greenhouses, added illustrations freely and collected these loose leaves in a sort of portfolio binder which we want you to have. Now one way for you to save money on the new house you will want early next spring, is to take the matter up seriously NOW. When you give us time and the opportunity to work at it during the winter, it doesn’t cost us as much and it will affect you the same way.

MONROVIA AND MERSTHAM.

I have been requested to give a few facts, or hints, on Monrovia chrysanthemum, with which variety I have had unusual success in the last three or four years. I do not consider myself an authority on mums, or the cultivation of them, but I have had good success, especially with a few varieties and, as Mr. Totty says, these are the ones for me to grow. I made my first success and what reputation I may have as a mum grower on the good old variety, Major Bonnaillon, but now that variety will not get out of its own way for me, even after changing the stock and giving extra care, and I guess it will have to be dropped.

Since then Monrovia has been the best paying variety for me to grow, but to get good results you have to propagate early, plant early and take early buds. To give any certain dates is impossible, as it all depends on the condition of the plants and length of the growth when the first buds appear, but I know that I have at times taken the bud a month earlier than Mr. Totty advises for Merstham Yellow, August 10, and secured good flowers. A variety you cannot take a safe bud before that date will never be a strong competitor to Monrovia.

On Merstham Yellow I took some buds before and some after August 10 and even on some of those taken after that date did they turn green and it was the second crown, too, and that is as a rule considered safe on early varieties. Those that did develop about half, or a little less than that, are only small flowers and, as my commission man in Chicago says, they are too soft and flabby to sell well or to cut any figure in the market there.

Monrovia and Merstham Yellow were planted the same day and in the same benches and they had the same distance between them and received the same treatment right through and the result was that of the Monrovia I cut ninety-eight per cent good flowers and received $4 a dozen for more than half of them (510) and of the balance three-fourths fetched $3; less than 100 out of pretty near 1,000 blooms fetched less than that.

I began to cut Monrovia September 20 and finished about October 12 and cleaned the benches for another crop. At that time only the piece where the Merstham Yellow was planted had to be left, as they were not all ready to cut.

Mr. Totty is right in saying that locality, climate and treatment have a whole lot to do with it, but there are many growers out here and around Chicago, too, who do not like Monrovia because they cannot do much with it and have discarded it. I would advise them to try Merstham Yellow, or any other early variety. But for myself I do not think I shall give it much bench room another season and if I do I shall plant it with the second earlies.

Another good example of locality, as Mr. Totty mentions, is Wm. Duckham.

I was one of those who went in for this variety extensively and I am giving it a second trial this year, but it is no good here. I shall entirely discard it. Dr. Enguehard is far superior and is the best pink I have on the place. I know that Wm. Duckham is grown in great shape in the east, but I cannot do it.

I have always read Mr. Totty's notes with great interest. Every year I try many of the varieties he has recommended, but last year's are a great disappointment to me. I have other varieties which are no good here, all coming with eyes and no good in general, Emily Mileham and J. Miller. Maybe Mr. Totty has them in fine shape. Of last year's novelties Clementine Touset, Dr. Galloway and Mrs. Wm. Duckham are the best here so far and Jeannie Nonin looks very promising but is rather late.

I also notice Mr. Totty's notes about the poor market in the east for early mums this year. My experience is quite different. I have never had better prices nor had as many inquiries for early mums as this year and my benches of early mums have paid me better than anything I have ever grown.

GUNNAR TEILMANN.

SOME NOVELTIES.

The usual list of novelties are on hand for the fall shows and the pessimist who says that there has been no progress in the chrysanthemum of late years is likely to be disillusioned. The finest thing I have seen so far is Beatrice May. As set up before the New York committee last week it was grand and captivated everyone. It is hard to imagine a finer white than this for either commercial culture or exhibition. The habit is dwarf, foliage up to the flower and stem excellent. Later or terminal buds show pink shading but still the full center and splendid size.

Another white almost finished is Mrs. F. F. Thompson. This is a noble looking, massive flower with broad petals that twist and curl in a most enchanting manner. This is evidently purely an exhibition flower as it is rather "necky" but in size it will scale up with the best and in a collection it will be a most notable flower.

May Seddon, which it is claimed has been grown 11x11 inches in Australia, does not live up to its reputation for size so far but it is a beautiful pure white and next year with early propagated stock I have no doubt will make a very different showing. It is so dwarf and slow growing that it evidently needs a long season of growth.

The yellows show several notable things, chief among which are Mrs. Geo. Beech, Mme. S. Rivol, Mrs. Wm. Knox and Old Gold. The first named, I think, will make its mark as a commercial yellow, but it is quite late and needs some time yet in which to develop. It is a yellow sport from Mrs. Swinburne and those who are growing this latter variety will be able to make their own comparisons as to size, form, etc.

Rivol is also a sport, coming from Paola Radaelli. The inside of the petal is deep ochre, giving the flower the appearance of deepest orange yellow. Those who have grown the parent know that it is a particularly strong grower and of this the sport also partakes.

Mrs. Wm. Knox, heralded as the finest yellow in Australia, will not take the title away from Appleton here, unless another year, with the opportunity for a longer season of growth, puts more substance into the flower and more stiffening into the stem. Just misses being a splendid thing, but well worth a trial, is the way I figure it out so far.

Old Gold is a beautiful grower, one of the best I ever saw, and as a 6-inch pot plant will meet with a warm welcome. The flower is only medium in size but it is a beautiful color, of the shade the name implies, and the flower sets right down on the luxuriant foliage; truly the American ideal in foliage and stem.

Mrs. G. Heaume, commercially speaking, is perhaps off-color, being a salmony bronze, but its habits as to foliage, stem, size, finish, etc., leave nothing to be desired and in the exhibition classes it will be very prominent.

Viola, as a Japanese pink, and Mrs. J. Marshall, as an incurving pink, are both well worthy of a place. A few days later will see them fully developed and they both seem very good.

Mrs. John E. Dunne is one of the most striking of the new ones and one of the very best also. Stem, foliage, size and finish are all there in perfection and the reflexing petal shows the color to the best advantage. The color is a deep old rose and must be seen to be appreciated. I think Dunne will stay for years as a striking and distinct variety.

In Mrs. Henry Partridge we have a variety that will, I think, supplant Church, grand though the latter is. It gives the Church color when Church is seen at its best; that is, when the florets reflex, and has the advantage of being a kind, free, easy grower. Unlike most other reds, it shows no tendency to burn and I have flowers developing now in the open sunlight without a trace of burning, something very unusual in a red variety.

Merstham Crimson in color is simply superb. On early crowns the flower is reflexed, with a golden tip on the up-turned end of the petal; a beautiful combination, but the neck is too long. The late bud makes a very good stem, with the foliage right up to the flower, though the golden tip of the petal is missing and the flower is a solid, deep crimson.

R. E. Richardson is a very strong grower, with cabbage-like leaves, and is now building up an immense flower of blush white. Strong as an oak tree in growth, Richardson will appeal directly to those growers who want something that will grow and give good satisfaction.

Mary Ann Pockett, on the other hand, is an indifferent grower and in midsummer made very little headway, though the flower that is finishing is a great surprise in the way it is building up. The color is quite unique, being Indian red, with an old gold reverse, and it is mostly reverse that shows.

E. J. Brooks is very strong in growth, with a splendid stem and foliage. The color is rosy purple and the flower, when finished, is a perfect ball. It does not require much feeding, for it is a great grower and as a pot plant will be well liked. Everything comes good, either the early or late bud, and Brooks can be set down as one of the well liked kinds, the "easy doers."

Next week sees the big shows under way and some of these varieties will doubtless be seen and admired by many who read these notes.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The two chrysanthemum seedlings exhibited before the committees in Philadelphia, Cincinnati and Chicago Saturday, October 14, by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., under number have been named as follows: No. 11-27-04 will be called October Frost; No. 12-11-03 has been given the name of Rosiere.

Work of the Committees.

At New York, October 21, Mrs. Wm. Knox (imported) deep canary yellow, Japanese reflexed, exhibited by Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., scored 65 points exhibition scale. Beatrice May (imported) white, Japanese type, exhibited by Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., scored 95 points, both commercial and exhibition scales. Mrs. George Heaume, amber, tinted salmon, Japanese type, exhibited by Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., scored 85 points exhibition scale. No. 15, seedling, bright yellow, Japanese type, exhibited by F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y., scored 80 points commercial scale.

FRED H. LEMON, Sec'y.

rial suited for the same purpose, should now be stored in readiness for use. Shading material should be arranged and everything put in order, so that no time may be lost when propagating should be done. RIBES.

FORCING RAMBLERS.

Can Crimson Rambler and Dorothy Perkins roses which have been growing outdoors be taken up this fall and forced for Easter, or should they have been grown in pots the past season? W. A. S.

While it is the safest and most successful method to grow these rambles in pots during the summer previous to forcing, as by this treatment they make more suitable wood for forcing and usually ripen it more perfectly, still they can be grown with good results when lifted from the field and treated in the following manner:

Select strong plants as soon as they are ripe, a condition which is indicated by the shedding of the leaves. Lift them carefully, so that the roots do not get broken or torn. Pot immediately, before the roots have time to get dry, in good rose soil. Select pots of a suitable size, not too large, give plenty of drainage and pot firmly.

They should then be stored in a pit or buried in the soil beyond the danger of frost. By the middle of December they should be brought in and placed in a house with a temperature not to exceed 45 degrees and shaded during very bright weather.

As the buds begin to swell the temperature should be increased by 5 degrees per week until it reaches 62 degrees nights and 75 degrees daytime during bright weather. Syringing must be practiced every bright day, as the high temperature is very conducive to the increase of red spider and these plants seem to be its favorite haunt if left undisturbed.

The greatest care must be exercised in ventilating, so that the wood and foliage does not become too soft, as it is very apt to do, owing to the rapidity of growth. RIBES.

ROSES

SEASONABLE REMINDERS.

A neatly kept house of roses is a pleasure to the eye and at this season, after the benches have been put into condition for the winter, staking and tying done, we can afford the time to clean up and make and keep the houses neat and clean.

The walks should be kept scrupulously clear of weeds, as it is there that our insect enemies find a refuge from tobacco fumes and from the force of the syringe. The plants should be kept neatly tied up and disbudding should be practiced at least once a week. This, while adding neatness to the house, is also adding to the revenue, for if these young stems are neglected and allowed to trail on the bench they become weak and produce nothing but blind wood. While, if disbudding is neglected until the side stems are so large that they have to be removed with a knife, the size of the bud is reduced and the symmetry and gracefulness of the stem are spoiled.

The care and supervision of the night duties will now give the grower more or less worry until he gets his winter staff into full training again. This is a duty which year after year gives us a good deal of trouble and we have to exercise a great deal of patience and watchfulness until we are satisfied that each and every one of the night staff understands his duties and is trustworthy, as any laxity along these lines will nullify the efforts of the most careful grower.

By selecting intelligent, temperate men to fill these places, and paying them well for the long, cheerless hours they have to be on guard, we can remove a good part of the burden from the shoulders of the man in charge during the day, with profit to the place and pleasure to all concerned.

As the propagating season is approaching everything should be made ready for that important and interesting period. The benches should be overhauled and put into proper condition, piping inspected and repaired where necessary and a thorough cleaning given to the house to get rid of all insect pests and special pains should be taken to get rid of any appearance of bench fungus.

A good supply of a propagating medium, such as sand or any other mate-

CARNATIONS

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Watering.

The subject of watering is one upon which volumes might be written and yet not be fully covered, as among a large number of growers many different conditions are daily arising that cannot possibly be met by any arbitrary written directions.

You have probably seen plants grown by a lady customer in her dwelling that would be a credit to the profession, and under conditions considered radically wrong; for instance, a palm potted directly into a glazed jardiniere, with absolutely no drainage and growing luxuriantly. Now this to my mind is the result of a certain intuition possessed by the fair sex and which is similar to Patience is a virtue; have it if you can; Seldom in a woman, never in a man.

Pardon the digression, but I wished to emphasize the point that to be successful a grower must be half plant himself to anticipate the wants of his charges.

The first principles of watering are to apply when needed in such quantity as to thoroughly moisten the soil and no more, also at such time of day, or in such manner, as will allow the foliage to dry before night.

These would be very simple rules to follow if changes in weather, variation in soils, needs of the different varieties, aspect of houses and arrangement of benches did not have to be taken into consideration.

During the fall months we are very apt to have some quite warm days, with considerable wind, causing rapid transpiration. In this case close attention must be given to spraying, that the plants may not suffer through wilting. Dark, stormy times occur during which the foliage takes on a soft growth. If possible it is best to wait until pleasant weather before watering, but if close observation shows plants to be suffering, apply sparingly between the rows, without wetting the foliage.

The best time to water is in the early forenoon of a bright day, at which time any necessary spraying to counteract wilting or syringing to destroy spider should be done. Sometimes every indication points to a fair day, when, by eleven o'clock, the sun is obscured and plants have been wet by spraying. This is a bad position in which to be caught, but the best must be made of it. Every means must be employed to dry out the surplus moisture as soon as possible. Under no circumstances close the ventilators and raise the temperature. There must be a circulation of air and this is best accomplished by having on a crack at the ridge.

A generous dose of grape dust will materially reduce the development of fungoid germs. Knowing the nature of your soil, construction of bench, also whether raised or solid, you can determine the natural capacity of a bed to retain moisture, but let there be no guesswork. Examine the soil each day.

Never apply water in such quantity as to cause a rain storm under the bench. This is not only carelessness, but a means of carrying out valuable fertilizing elements in solution.

Frequently the plants along the side of the bench are in need of water about three o'clock on the afternoon of a bright day. A slow stream from the hose held close to the soil will remedy this, but be careful not to overdo the matter.

It is about time to get in a batch of cuttings for bloom next summer. Look over your list and select varieties that by nature are inclined to make trim, bushy plants. GEO. S. OSBORN.

LEAF-SPOT.

I am sending you some leaves from my Enchantress carnations. You will see that the foliage seems to turn dry at the tip of the leaves; the plants look healthy in every other way. The plants were grown in the field until about the first week in September, when they were carefully housed in good soil. Please tell me what you think the matter is, and the treatment. E. A. M.

The leaves you sent were spotted with what closely resembled fairy-ring, though I could not be certain, as the leaves were pretty well dried up. I feel quite safe in saying that you may treat your plants the same as you would for that disease, as all those leaf-spot diseases require much the same treatment. Pick off all the spotted leaves and burn them to prevent the spreading of the disease. If you heat with steam paint one of the pipes with a mixture of lime and sulphur in equal portions, mixed with water to make a thick paint. If your plants are blooming, don't have this too strong, as it will take the color out of the flowers. Better leave a crack of air on. Strew around the house and under the benches some air-slaked lime. You can also dust the plants with air-slaked lime and sulphur mixed in equal proportions. Take a Peerless sulphur blower or a pair of bellows and blow the house full of this. Stop syringing unless there is red spider on the plants.

One of the best remedies we have ever found is Formaline, of which we use one part to 500 of water. Spray this on the plants in the morning of a bright day. But you must choose a day that promises to be bright, so the plants will dry off well before night. These leaf-spots are more active in a damp atmosphere than in a dry one and so you want to keep the plants dry, especially at night. A. F. J. BAUR.

GOV. WOLCOTT?

I am sending a bloom of a white carnation which has appeared among my Enchantress. It has a very hardy, vigorous growth and all the traits of Enchantress. Do you think it is a sport? The plant has been grown in a night temperature of from 56 to 58 degrees and the stems are probably weak on that account. L. A. L.

The bloom you sent revived enough, when placed in water, so I could say almost positively that it is Gov. Wolcott. When you get another bloom you will notice that it has less petals than Enchantress and it also has more deeply serrated petals than Enchantress. Also the calyx is more slender and the stem and foliage more wiry. If you will grow these in a temperature of 52 degrees you will get better stems and better results in general. No carnation will grow in a temperature of 56 to 58 degrees and remain healthy very long. A. F. J. BAUR.

THE CHAMAEDOREA.

In the display made by the U. S. Department of Agriculture at the Washington convention of the S. A. F. were a number of plants of chamaedorea like the one shown in the accompanying illustration. Prof. Galloway and his assistants in the Bureau of Plant Industry think that in this they have a plant with commercial possibilities and the specimens shown were examined with much interest by the many palm growers who saw them. The exhibit as a whole received the society's certificate of merit.

George W. Oliver says that this palm was discovered in Guatemala by Prof. O. Cook, who found it growing at an elevation of 3,000 feet. Prof. Cook thinks it a new species but closely allied to Chamaedorea graminifolia. It requires the same treatment and temperature as Kentia Forsteriana and K. Belmoreana. As a house plant it is said to be very good.

The palm in question attracted some attention from those visiting the Masonic Hall, in which the exhibit of palms from the department was displayed at the S. A. F. convention, and, while the chamaedoreas generally are not looked upon as commercial palms, yet this species (possibly C. glaucifolia) looks more promising than some already in cultivation.

This palm has narrow leaflets of very dark green, and the habit of the plant is compact and well furnished. All the members of this genus are shade-loving species, and are of comparatively dwarf habit, most of them being found as undergrowth in the tropical forests of Mexico, Central America and South America. GARDEN AND WILD STUDIES.

Both garden and wild flowers afford a tempting variety in autumn. Natural arrangements in these outside flowers and foliage may serve two purposes with the decorator. They are beautiful in themselves and valuable for what they are. They also suggest like arrangements for use later in the year, when nothing but greenhouse stock is to be had.

The first of our studies today is decidedly rustic, but one which may be easily adapted to other material and seasons. Wild asters and golden-rod in a bulb basket, which has been gilded, tells the whole story. The lavender blue, with the decided yellow of the golden-rod softened by the gilding of the basket, is a rather unusual, but none the less desirable coloring. Because blue is so rare is one reason why it should be used, wherever it presents itself, in field, pasture or garden.

Upon close examination it will be observed that these two kinds of flowers are not mixed at random. A mass of the aster flowers occupies the left side, while the golden-rod sprays out over the right edge, after its own fashion. Neither are the two kinds of flowers separated stolidly. Small sprays of one mass approach the other, delicately at first and then more decidedly, till the two groups are connected. Threads of color are knit back and forth till the two wholes are united.

This arrangement is especially suitable for some of the numerous country club affairs still going on. Once in a while a florist has a call for just such a wild piece of decoration.

Half between the cultivated and the wild, or rather a touch of each, is seen in the lower study, which is a white china bowl containing scabiosa in various tints and shades of purple and pink, with its own foliage and seed pods, supplemented by a branch of half ripe hops, with a tinge of red appearing on the green.

One practice to which we do not educate ourselves and the public is that of using with the flowers for the best possible effect, all the forms which the plant produces at one stage or another of its growth. Seed pods, buds and new foliage really belong to the complete color scheme which envelops the plant life. Like the color plan of a single flower, there is in the plant as an individual, a definite color plan which can be enjoyed only as it is traced throughout the unfolding of every part of the plant. The red-green of the rose foliage is often cut off a rose when its artistic value would be much increased by retaining the attractive bit of new growth.

GERTRUDE BLAIR.

ROCKFORD, ILL.—H. W. Buckbee is making arrangements to send a full car-load of chrysanthemum plants and cut flowers to the Chicago show.

AN OPPORTUNITY.

The public interest in floriculture was never so great as at present, and, as newspapers in general are giving their readers what they want, the editors are only too glad to publish sensible matter on plants and flowers, every word of which is a direct help to our trade. Every rightly managed flower show is getting the hearty support of the newspapers of its city, and the success of this year's shows promises to be far beyond all previous records. An example of the advertising which is beyond price, and for which the trade is due to "make good" at the show, is the following editorial from the Chicago Tribune of October 19:

The Chicago public has taken too little notice of the effort of the Chicago Horticultural Society to instill a love of flowers in the hearts of the city's people. With its yearly exhibitions the society tries earnestly to impress the public with the fact that Chicago is the largest flower market in the world, and, in proportion to its size, the smallest consumer of flowers. Many have been brought to know and appreciate flowers through these exhibitions. Hitherto, however, lack of adequate space has hampered the society in its efforts to do justice to Chicago's pre-eminence in the floral world. This year the exhibition will be held in the Coliseum. That means there will be no lack of space. There will be one and a half acres of flowers, and the Chicagoan who fails to visit the Coliseum next month will deprive himself of a rare treat, besides failing to lend his encouragement to a worthy enterprise.

One new and interesting feature of this year's exhibition will be the practical demonstrations and instruction in flower culture for the city family. Object lessons in the shape of model back yards, lawns, and window boxes will be supplemented by instruction from expert gardeners, who will give the amateur accurate information on any subject within the scope of flower growing. The persons who sigh for the sight of a flower in the city need sigh no more if they will but follow the experts' instructions. No one, not even the occupant of a city flat, is so poor as to be without a window ledge.

It is to be hoped that many Chicagoans will adopt for practical use the suggestions offered at the exhibition. Also it is to be hoped that Chicago will wake up and be a better patron of its flower industry. Chicago has sore need of beauty. None of the things that men may make to beautify the city can be compared with the flowers that are grown here, and which are shipped away. The "city beautiful" is, of course, a pleasant dream for the present, but a spread of flower love will mean that the dream is one step nearer its realization. Chicago should use more of its flowers.

MR. PETTIGREW IN EUROPE.

[The conclusion of a lecture on "Park and Garden Work in Europe," delivered before the Gardeners' and Florists' Club of Boston, October 17, by J. A. Pettigrew, the major portion of which appeared in last week's Review.]

George Nicholson wrote me, at Queens-town, to delay making any plans until my arrival in London, when he would be glad to assist in mapping out a route, and, what was better, offered to accompany me. This was beyond my expectation, and I gladly changed the plans I had made and posted to London. He appeared bright and early at my hotel, the morning after my arrival. You will be glad to hear that Mr. Nicholson is looking remarkably well, and I can vouch for his physical endurance, remembering how he tested mine. What more could I desire than Mr. Nicholson's congenial companionship? Who could know the places, the men and the things I wanted to see better than he?

While in London I called upon William Robinson, to whom I had a letter of introduction from Professor Sargent. He kindly invited me to visit him at Gravetye Manor, located in Surrey, about thirty miles from London. Gravetye is an old Saxon word meaning a house in the hollow. The name, however, does not designate correctly the position of Gravetye Manor, which is placed on a gently sloping hillside overlooking the course of a stream, which has been dammed lower down, thus forming a very pretty sheet of water in the valley, to which the long reach of lawn slopes in pleasing undulations. Wooded hills rise on the opposite side of the water, while to the left a pretty view of valley is obtained. Behind the house the ground rises and is covered with plantations of pine.

Mr. Robinson would have done much for gardening had he written nothing more than The English Garden and Wild Gardening. He has, however, done much more, and, what is better, has put into practice at Gravetye the principles he has so earnestly taught in his writings. In the construction of a terrace garden old weathered flags were obtained with which to pave the walks. The beds are arranged in an old-fashioned style and planted with old-fashioned flowers. Roses predominate, of which Mr. Robinson has a large collection. A pretty feature of the garden is Tropæolum speciosum, blooming freely in gorgeous clusters, as are also wall plants, which are encouraged to colonize. Beyond the terrace garden is a cozy ramble, the borders of which abound in good shrubs, herbaceous plants and bulbs. Beyond is situated the walled vegetable and fruit garden. The sheet of water in the valley is bordered by a walk, along which the planting of shrubs and herbaceous plants has been done in a manner to give a very natural effect. The same may be said of the shoro line, at which have been planted water lilies and other aquatic and semi-aquatic plants. The atmosphere of the entire place is restful, quaint and beautiful, on natural lines. The absence of variegated and other abnormal forms of vegetation was conspicuous, as might be expected. The estate comprises about 400 acres, some of which is old woodland. A large area has been planted by Mr. Robinson with pines (Pinus sylvestris and Pinus Laricio) which show excellent growth, some of them being twenty or more feet in height. Our white pine (Pinus strobus) proved a failure, which Mr. Robinson regretted very much. Many grew well at first, then suddenly died off.

At the close of a very enjoyable day my host drove with me to the station. On the way he pointed out a railroad bank, on which he had scattered the seed of Spanish broom a few years ago, now a sheet of yellow bloom as a reward for the forethought and public spirit of the planter.

The love of flowers is innate in the heart of an Englishman. The same may be said, only in a lesser degree, of the Irishman, the Scotchman and the Frenchman. There are few who have not a garden, or at least a window-box, along the roadside, or in country towns and villages where the houses are often built on the line of the road, a narrow strip of space will be stolen from the sidewalk and planted with climbers to cover the cottage walls. This love for flowers by all classes contributes in a great degree to the charm and beauty of English homes. In most parts of England trees are encouraged to grow in the meadows and hedge rows. Even farmers will call your attention to their trees, to their fine size or appearance, and to how much they add to the beauty of the landscape. When such a spirit as this is abroad in a land, what wonder that it calls for the admiration of travelers!

I saw a goodly number of fine trees. At Lannercost Priory, Cumberland, are the finest sycamore trees I ever beheld, many measuring four to five feet in diameter. This tree behaves badly in the States and gives no intimation of its qualities. The long walk at Windsor Castle is shaded by handsome English elms. At Ravensworth Castle, Durham, are good beeches; one I measured has a spread of ninety-five feet. At Naworth Castle, Cumberland, are grand oaks, which must have been old when belted Will Howard was warden of the marches.

At Brinkburn Priory in Northumberland a lot of silvery-leaved firs, three to three and one-half feet in diameter, rear their heads to a height of ninety or 100 feet. A plant of Clematis montana on the priory walls measures fifty-four inches around the stem. It might have been planted by the Cistercian monks who founded the monastery.

In Anthony Waterer's nursery I saw a magnificent specimen of the weeping beech, at least sixty feet in diameter of spread of branches. I ought not to stop at this single reference when so many good things are to be found there.

The forest of Fontainebleau, thirty miles from Paris, has an area of 42,000 acres, in which fine oaks and beeches abound. Of course, everybody knows of the Burnham beeches. There are still many well-shaped specimens to be found back in the woods that will well repay the trouble of hunting them up. The old pollarded and decaying trunks are magnificent even in their ruins, and recall a long distant past.

I will close with a reference to the white willows of Warwickshire, called Salix regalis in the catalogues, but which Professor Sargent says is the typical Salix alba. How beautifully their silver foliage lightens and softens the landscape! When once seen they are not apt to be forgotten.

THE CHICAGO POST-OFFICE.

The Chicago post-office will move into its new building on Saturday of this week. It is almost eleven years since the old building was vacated and considerably more than that since the original plans were drawn for the new structure, which is without doubt the handsomest post-office in the United States. But conditions change in a dozen years and it was more than a year ago recognized that the new building, especially in certain features, had been outgrown long before it was ready for occupancy. In no respect were the facilities more inadequate than for handling second class (newspaper) mail. Certain expensive changes were made but the arrangements are still incomplete, for the postmaster has announced that while, beginning next Monday, all other mail will be handled through the new building, a part of the outgoing newspaper mail will continue to be handled through the eleven-year-old "temporary" building on the lake front.

What effect this will have on outgoing papers remains to be seen. We hope it will not have any effect. But if delay is occasioned the REVIEW would like to know it. If your paper in any week fails to reach you at the usual time we shall be glad to have you send us a postal card. Simply say: "My REVIEW of such and such a date, which should have reached me so and so, did not arrive until today." Date it and sign your name. The REVIEW is printed Wednesday night and mailed regularly every Thursday.

Vegetable Forcing.

THE Hatch Experiment Station, Amherst, Mass., has issued a valuable bulletin of forty pages devoted to the growing of tomatoes under glass.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

BOSTON, Oct. 24.—Cucumbers, No. 1, $7 to $8.50 box; No. 2, $2.50 to $5 box. Tomatoes, 12½c to 15c pound. Outdoor lettuce still abundant.

NEW YORK, Oct. 23.—Cucumbers $1.25 to $1.50 doz. Head lettuce, 10c to 50c doz. Mushrooms, 20 to 40 cents pound. Tomatoes, 4 to 10 cents pound. Outdoor stock still plentiful.

CHICAGO, Oct. 25.—Head lettuce 50 to 80 cents box; leaf lettuce, 10 to 20 cents case. Outdoor vegetables still in large supply.

TOMATOES.

At this season of the year, on account of changes in the weather, the plants are inclined to become drawn and it calls for pretty close watching of the airing to keep them in a good, stocky condition. The sun being still bright and the air often cold, it is hard to reduce the temperature of the house as far as desired without causing cold draughts. It is necessary to shut the ventilators rather early in the afternoon, as the air gets cold as soon as the sun begins to get low in the west.

The drawing influence may be somewhat counteracted by using as little fire heat as possible, but of course a chill must be avoided. It would hardly be good policy to let the temperature run below 60 degrees. Keeping the plants rather on the dry side also helps to maintain a firm growth.

The further advanced plants will need attention in regard to pollinating the flowers. At this season there is usually enough sun heat to mature the pollen and keep it dry enough so that it is easily spread around by simply shaking the vines in the warmer part of the day. Close attention should be paid, however, that the fruit does set, and if not it is better to spend a short time every bright day pollinating by hand, as it is always better to make sure. The first trusses of flowers are important ones, as they will be the first ones to ripen and it always looks much nicer to see the vines fruited from the bottom up, rather than have them with two or three feet of the bottom part of the vines minus fruit.

Training will also claim attention as the plants quickly become crooked if not kept tied to the trellises or stakes, but tight tying should be avoided, as the stems swell quickly and unless plenty of room is left they will soon become girdled to the extent of stopping the flow of sap to an injurious extent.

Pinching must go on more or less all the time, so as not to allow superfluous growth to run away with the energy of the plant. Just as soon as the lateral growths are long enough so that they can be pinched out without leaving an eye is the time to remove them. There is no need to let them run until they are several inches long before taking them off. The more the energy of the plant is concentrated in the main shoot the better will be the results. Growing shoots sometimes appear on the ends of the flower trusses. These, too, should be removed as soon as possible, for if allowed to run there will be a very slim chance of getting fruit set upon the trusses thus handicapped.

W. S. CROYDON.

HEATING APPARATUS.

I wonder if you have been over the heating apparatus in the violet houses yet this fall to see that it is in perfect running order. Do not give the pipes a glance and a look and say you "guess they are all right; they were in the spring." The only thing to do is to go over the whole plant carefully and thoroughly, looking at every joint, repacking all valve stems, looking at all piers, wall hooks or other supports to see that they are not loosened or otherwise out of place. Also see that there are no sags in the lines of pipe, as there is always the liability that the house, or bench, or something has settled and so made a pocket in your pipes where you will collect either condensation if you use steam, or air if you heat with water, either being disastrous to successful heating.

After looking everything over and getting the plant in shape, draw off all the water in the system, washing out the boiler, and fill full of fresh water. Then go over the plant carefully again and see that everything is in the perfect shape that you thought it to be. If you have no leaks with cold water pressure, you are safe in calling it all right.

Ventilating.

We have been having very bright, sunny, hot days so far this month and care must be used to keep the houses as cool as possible. Be sure to have all your ventilators wide open, doors, etc. This does not mean that you want to let a heavy shower drive in upon the plants, for you want to keep the soil in a good, healthy condition, which you can never do if you have ventilators which, when wide open, throw the water on the borders; but be sure to open them again as soon as the shower is over.

Holding Trade.

As was mentioned in a recent number of the REVIEW, competition is becoming so keen on violets that you will probably have to be more liberal in count this season than ever, keeping the bunches up to standard in size as well as in neat and artistic arrangement.

If you live in a comparatively small place, do not fail to use the latest accessories that your nearest city competitor uses to acquire your trade, be it bows, tassels, lace or what-not, including the proper violet box for packing them in. Slackness in any of these seemingly minor details is often the turning point in influencing your trade and frequently it is when you least expect it. You want to make a reputation, and once made do not rely on that, but keep on trying to improve it.

Again, with all your care dissatisfaction will occasionally arise from some cause or other, frequently through no fault of your own; yet, however it comes, if it comes to your knowledge, make it good, even to the point of losing the price of the whole order, unless you are dead sure it is a "fake kick." Even then time will generally cause such a customer to feel remorse.

Charles A. Shaeffer.

A KANSAS CITY PROJECT.

We are ever mindful of Horace Greeley's advice to young men, but to George E. Plumbe, grizzled veteran of many years' experience in the compilation of that greatest of encyclopedias of present-day industrial, commercial and political history, the Chicago Daily News Almanac, we must give credit for an equally wise direction with the added merit of definiteness. Few men in Chicago have for an equal period been so well qualified as Mr. Plumbe to advise as to the trend in the developments of Greeley's "west." The west embraces a very considerable part of our country and there are places in it where no one could be advised to go—except away from.

But George E. Plumbe localized his advice: He said, "Young man, go to Kansas City." More than a dozen years ago he told a youth, who sought to profit by his opportunity for wide observation, that Kansas City offered better business prospects than any other city in the country; not better chances for any individual to become wealthy, but the surest indication of prosperity for all its people. And a few short years have served to show the accuracy of the statement.

Located at the gateway to the great southwest, Kansas City is one of the busiest cities in the country. From a florists' standpoint Kansas City is one of the biggest towns on the map. Floriculturally Kansas City is different from Chicago: Chicago consumes but a small part of the flowers it produces, while Kansas City produces but a small part of the flowers it consumes. Pity 'tis, Chicago thinks, that it is certain to some day be otherwise as far as Kansas City is concerned.

Charles A. Shaeffer was a stockman. He had a cattle ranch of 7,000 acres and it made him independent. He removed to Kansas City. Being of the temperament which leads to restlessness in inactivity he was soon open to any legitimate business proposition. It did not take long to convince him that the retail florists' business was prospering at least in proportion to the general prosperity of the community, and perhaps a little better, because of several local influences making for the wider use of flowers. He decided to back the Kansas City Floral Co., a retail venture. Soon he gave to it his personal attention and as the business grew he became more than ever satisfied that the pursuit of floriculture leads to a pleasant and profitable business. A new store soon became a necessity and the advantages afforded by a greenhouse adjunct were shortly apparent. Early in the past season land was bought for a range of houses to grow palms, bedding stock, lilies and all the miscellaneous plants so necessary to a large business. The plans prepared at that time called for 23,000 feet of glass.

Mr. Shaeffer is prosecuting his plans for becoming a factor in the legitimate retail flower trade of Kansas City, but he has grasped another point of far greater importance to the business. He has seen that Kansas City is, perhaps more than any other large city of the north, compelled to send away for its cut flowers. With a retail demand of splendid proportions, the local supply of cut flowers is very inadequate and every day large quantities of material are shipped in from St. Louis and Chicago. Others have recognized that Kansas City affords a splendid field for a large wholesale cut flower producing establishment. To Mr. Shaeffer the realization has come in the few months of his connection with the trade. With realization in this case came determination and action will not long be delayed. Unless Mr. Shaeffer changes his plans, which is not likely, except it be to broaden them, he will early next spring erect a range of 200,000 feet of glass for roses and carnations, the nucleus for a plant which will have all the backing necessary to meet the needs of Kansas City's growing demand. During a recent period Mr. Shaeffer has been visiting large growers around Chicago and in the east, familiarizing himself with methods of construction, etc. In the meantime he has formed a partnership with James Bigham and Theo. Kahma to open a wholesale supply store, which is to be developed as the business grows.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

"The prayers of the righteous avail much" and the long delayed frost has come to gladden the hearts of the growers, wholesalers and retailers and set the market's wheels in motion for the long journey that will not end until after April 15, when Easter comes again.

Saturday was quite encouraging, the demand depleting the ice-boxes and better prices prevailing than for weeks. Monday kept up the good work and, although prices improved slowly, everything of good quality was taken and a general spirit of cheerfulness prevailed.

Chrysanthemums are asserting themselves, almost flooding the market, even at this early date. Mrs. Robinson and Wm. Duekham are bringing good prices. There is an abundance of fine stock. Top prices seem to be $3 a dozen for the best, while the small and ordinary varieties already have fallen to as low as $1 per hundred. Beautiful blooms of the popular varieties sold Monday evening at $12 per hundred.

All roses are advancing slowly but surely and not to retrograde again this year, we hope. Carnations are improving in color, stem and numbers daily. Some of the novelties command good prices. The frost has not yet got down to the dahlia farms and shipments continue. A wonderful rise in popularity is the record of this fine old garden flower this season. Never have they been grown so perfectly and the new varieties of single and cactus types have surely come to stay. Cosmos is everywhere and never so popular and beautiful.

The rotund and genial G. H. Pieser, of Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, has been visiting New York and also made his presence felt at Rhinebeck. This may account for light shipments and higher prices for violets, good stock going up to 75 cents a hundred on Monday evening and occasionally touching $1, if reports were correct concerning them. The bulk of the shipments, however, did not bring over 50 cents. Nevertheless the big horse show in the west and the visit of the big "promoter" certainly was a factor in the New York market in its violet department.

Cattleyas and other orchids are still abundant. Every retail window that amounts to anything utilized them in decoration. Siebrecht & Son's big store was crowded with them from their own conservatories. Plants as well as flowers were everywhere. The effect was very beautiful. McManus has an excellent assortment of dendrobiums, vandas and oncidiums. White orchids, so popular this season for wedding bouquets, are apparently at all times sufficient for the demand.

Fifty per cent of the wholesale stores are handling mum plants. Some fine stock is seen. Ficus, palms and ferns are also abundant. A retailer can get about anything he wants between Twenty-fifth street and Thirtieth, including all the latest novelties and inventions in the supply line. New York is growing wonderfully convenient. "If you don't see what you want ask for it" and you will get it.

Various Notes.

The exhibitions will soon be "too numerous to mention" or to see, for unfortunately many of them have chosen the same days. The big show in New York, whose store on Broadway has been occupied by him for a generation, passed away last week at the age of 81 years. His widow is still hale and hearty and has been the active buyer and manager of the store as long as most of us can remember.

Mr. Parsons has been appointed park commissioner by the mayor, John J. Pallas, the former commissioner, having died suddenly on October 16 at the early age of 43.

November 8 at Bronx park the New York Horticultural Society will have an exhibition of fruits, nuts and plants and Dr. Britton will lecture with stereopticon illustrations.

November 13 the last of the chrysanthemum exhibits for the year will be seen at the regular monthly meeting of the New York Florists' Club. This will be mum night and is expected to be the largest meeting of the year to date. The nominating committee will announce the candidates for the club's offices for 1906 and special features will make the evening one of general interest. It is none too early now for exhibitors to begin to prepare for it.

Those who desire membership in the new bowling club are requested to send their names to President Traendly. If a sufficient number respond, the first meeting and practice will take place on the afternoon of November 13.

The Rosary decorations are now complete. White bark covers every part of the big store outside and in. Anything more unique or artistic in flower stores would be difficult to conceive. It is worth a visit from every dealer in the metropolis and any florist visiting New York. There is nothing just like it. All the retail stores have completed their burnishing and decorating and have made an early start in brilliant window effects, so that one can hardly realize the winter season has not fully arrived.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

THE COAL MARKET.

Of the coal situation the Black Diamond says: "Transportation is the predominant factor in the coal trade, conditions, if anything, as to movement of tonnage from all the bituminous fields being slightly worse than they were a week ago. Prices are holding steady on all descriptions of domestic coal for western shipment, while the steam coals, with the exception of the poorer grades of screenings, are slightly firmer. There have been no further price advances, but the indications are that some coals will be higher with the advent of November than they are at present. Most of the large shipping companies are running behind with their orders, owing to inability to secure cars at the mines, production being at the minimum point so far this year."

BLOOMINGTON, IND.—J. H. Cain and Miss Helen Gray were married here October 4, at St. Charles Catholic church, which was handsomely decorated for the occasion. Their wedding trip was to Indianapolis and other points in the state.

DENVER, COLO.—The Park Floral Co. is installing a Morehead trap to take care of the condensation in the steam heating pipes. Mr. Valentine stopped in Detroit, where the trap is made, while on his way home from the S. A. F. convention, and visited the maker.

York begins October 31 and lasts until November 3. This is already an assured success. About all the space is taken and it will surely draw immense crowds in addition to the 20,000 complimentary tickets that are to be distributed.

Right around us the other exhibitions proceed with independent spirit. This week Bay Shore celebrates and the tenth annual at Madison takes place. Tarrytown clashes with the New York show, more's the pity, for the Tarrytownites put up a show that is worth going more than twenty-five miles to see. Glen Cove, down on Long Island, chose November 1 and 2 and Red Bank thought the same dates would be about right, while Tuxedo, with good forethought, waited for every place else to finish and November 3 to 5 will doubtless make as good an exhibition as any of its brethren.

CHICAGO.

The Market.

Business continued to accelerate through last week and by Saturday things were going with an old-fashioned swing. Weather cooler than normal checked receipts and the increased demand caused a stiffening of prices all along the line, but especially pronounced on carnations. Monday saw the opening of the horse show and the market conditions were well summarized by E. E. Pieser's terse remark: "Christmas in the flower business today." Tuesday also saw supplies under the demand and orders had to be cut.

Each year the horse show is of increasing social importance. Everybody who is anybody gets back to Chicago for the horse show and the Vanderbilts and other eastern money-spenders come to town for this event. The opening night called for more flowers than any similar event has ever done before. Violets, valley, Beauties, orchids and gardenias, were the principal flowers used and supplies were not to be had on Monday afternoon. The evening saw many dinners and each evening during the week will be enlivened by social activity. At the end of the week the All Saints' day shipments to New Orleans go out and the inquiry for stock is strong, so strong that the wholesalers are afraid to quote on large lots in the face of the present shortage.

Beauties are quickly taken up. The supply of small roses is not heavy and the demand is nearly always for the best grade of goods, with the result that the fancy stock is selling over the counter at prices above quotations. Red roses seem to be as abundant as anything in the market. Carnations have shortened up more than any other item. The quality of the stock is excellent with nearly all the houses.

Chrysanthemums have come in heavily this week but there were not, on Monday or Tuesday, enough of them to fill all orders, particularly for yellow and pink of the better grades. A good demand is looked for throughout the week.

It is said that on Monday more violets were handled in this market than were disposed of the day before Christmas. The New York stock had the preference and prices advanced materially. Singles sold only after Marie Louise was out of the market. It looks like a good week for the violet growers. Valley is also short this week.

Orchids were never so abundant as at the present time. All wholesale houses are showing nice cattleyas. Gardenias were in demand for the opening of the horse show. Moderate supplies were received from Philadelphia.

The many decorations have called for considerable quantities of greens but these are always available in this market.

The Price of Mums.

Some of the wholesalers and more of the growers are dissatisfied with the prices made by early chrysanthemums, characterizing the returns as below those of last year. If they will stop a moment to recall that last year's early varieties were of much better quality than this season, due to weather conditions, they will see a reason why the early blooms may have brought a little better average last year; the best stock certainly brought no higher prices than this year. Last year the second earlies came in a perfect deluge and brought very low prices. Thus far this season mums have moved well; the expected glut has not yet developed and there is every reason to be pleased with the prices now being realized. The shipping demand for mums has been especially good.

Various Notes.

At a meeting of chairmen of all the committees at the office of the Bentley-Coatsworth Co., October 25, flower show matters were canvassed. Everything is progressing satisfactorily. A big show is assured and liberal provisions are made for advertising. The judges selected were J. T. Temple, Davenport, Ia.; J. F. Cowell, Buffalo, N. Y., and Alois Frey, Lincoln park.

One of P. J. Hauswirth's annual orders is for the decoration of the Auditorium Annex dining-room and office for the opening night of the horse show, when the patronage at the hotel exceeds the capacity of the dining-room and tables are set in the office. This year he used large quantities of handsomely colored oak foliage and large yellow chrysanthemums.

Albert Amling, at Maywood, has discontinued growing roses for winter cutting. He will grow summer roses and green goods exclusively.

The E. F. Winterson Co. has a new specialty, boxwood, from West Virginia. It is exceptionally good quality and is selling well. The price is by the pound. They are also handling oak leaves in quantity.

Mums ! Mums !

The season is now on. We can furnish the best stock in the market in great variety. Our roses were never better. RICHMOND and KILLARNEY, our novelties, are especially fine. Give us a trial order for these. Carnations, Violets, Orchids, Valley and everything in season at lowest market rates.

A party of growers went to Rockford on Wednesday to inspect the new range of H. W. Buckbee and to see the stock they will exhibit at the Chicago show. Among those who went are James Hartsorne, August Pochlmann and J. S. Wilson.

Fred Hinks is the city salesman for the Chicago Carnation Co.

Superintendent Jensen, of the west parks, is preparing for a "before and after" demonstration of what the new west park board is accomplishing. A short time ago he had photographs taken of more than 100 of the bad places in the park system. A little later he will have them transformed into good places and photographed again.

L. Baumann & Co. report a very good business these days. They are busy shipping Christmas goods.

C. M. Dickinson, of E. H. Hunt's, went to New York Sunday on the Lake Shore Limited.

C. L. Washburn was at Madison Saturday to see the Chicago-Wisconsin football game with his son, who is in college at the Badger capital.

The daily papers have given considerable space the past week to the elopement of Emma Landahl and her return home. She is the daughter of a florist at 810 Hamilton court.

C. W. McKellar sold 300 cattleyas on Monday.

Stollery Bros. report mums very late. They have some fine Duckham but say it is not a good grower. For Christmas they have a splendid batch of cyclamen. On Tuesday they received an importation of seven cases of azaleas.

W. W. Barnard Co. reports the arrival of bouquet green.

Wietor Bros. cut the first Robinson, Bonnafon and Appleton chrysanthemums the same day, October 23. They are cutting some splendid Beauties.

Killarney rose is steadily improving with Weiland & Risch and the Benthley-Coatsworth Co. and they are receiving many inquiries as to supplying stock to other growers who want to plant it next season.

E. C. Amling says that he notes one very decided and welcome change in the demand, a call for better and ever better goods. Customers who a year or two ago bought carnations at $1 a hundred only in limited quantities, now pay $2 per hundred (for two-dollar goods) and buy more of them. To Mr. Amling it indicates that all classes of people are in easier circumstances, with money to spend, and that the public is learning

NEW ORLEANS.

The Society Meets.

The New Orleans Horticultural Society had a well-attended meeting last week. The chrysanthemum show will take place November 10 to 13. By special request to the mayor, Lafayette Square, in front of the city hall, was secured. A tent measuring 75x200 feet will be erected. The help of the Sunshiners' Association is assured and also some side attractions will be secured. The Jackson avenue high school children will present an Indian play and Miss Mollie Blanchard, daughter of the governor of Louisiana, will sing during the exhibition. The school cadets will also have a drill. James Newsham, chairman of the committee of arrangements, resigned and E. Baker accepted his place. For floral designs the judges will be selected by the Sunshiners from among society ladies. For the plants the following have been elected by the society: George Thomas, C. Willor, John Eblen.

The idea of a Southern Interstate Horticultural Society was taken up and a letter by Paul Abele, to be sent to all the societies of the south, was read and endorsed by the members of the society.

Various Notes.

The chrysanthemum crop in New Orleans, as far as All Saints' day is concerned, is going to be poor this year. For some unaccountable reason the plants did not make a good growth at the proper time and they are now too far back to be in perfect shape for November 1, which is the only time we need them in abundance.

Going among the principal growers we found M. Cook & Son with flowers raised under glass, Mrs. Robinson fairly open, other varieties behind. Their roses are budded stock and they are not satisfied with it.

H. Papworth, of Metairie Ridge Nurseries, is also behind, having been extra busy all the summer with the erection of his range of new houses. His roses look healthy, Bride and Maid being the best. Chatenay and American Beauties are good. He is not ready to say anything so far of Richmond. His early planted carnations did not turn out any too well.

There is a Difference

Many a florist has lost splendid opportunities to increase his trade and profits by thinking there isn't any difference between what he is getting and what he might get.

There is a difference: a trial shipment from us would convince you of that quicker than ten pages of talk. Even if there shouldn't be any difference, you wouldn't be out anything, would you?

His stock of pandanus and Ficus elastica is large.

E. Baker, superintendent at Audubon park, says his mums will make a fairly good showing, but has had too much moisture for the best results. He is preparing for winter flowering annuals in open ground and expects to show a succession of blooming plants in Horticultural hall during the winter. His perfect growing of geraniums was the talk of the town last year.

R. E. Simons, the Magazine street florist, reports chrysanthemums very scarce around his way, being pretty well drowned out. Business has been very dull with him during the summer, but is now improving.

P. A. Chopin is as bright as ever with his specimen mums in fine shape and also his crop of cut mums for All Saints' day. He reports a rush of work for weddings, having at present an order for fourteen bridal bouquets to be made.

V. Anseman's Son, a large dahlia grower, has lost his white flowers. The yellow and red varieties are good.

M. M. L.

ADRIAN, MICH.—Nathan Smith & Son are preparing to make greater effort than ever at the fall shows. Exhibits will be made at Chicago, Kansas City, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Philadelphia, Boston and New York, and Elmer D. Smith will attend as many of the shows as possible.

INDIANAPOLIS.

Miscellaneous Notes.

The State Florists' Association of Indiana will, at its next meeting, November 7, take up several matters which are still to be finished before flower show time. Among these is the matter of the entertainment for November 16. The committee is F. B. Alley, Sidney Smith and Wm. Billingsley.

The decorators at Tomlinson hall are preparing a large pagoda sheltering a base which is to be filled with a large orchid display, and studded with electric lights as a centerpiece. This will be in entire harmony with the rest of the decorations, which are to be a special feature.

Clarence Green, formerly with E. A. Nelson, has taken a position with W. J. Smyth, Chicago.

J. A. E. Haugh, of Anderson, was in town last week, looking after business matters. A few plants on their place were injured by using White river water, which contains refuse from strawboard works. A new pumping plant has been installed, so that the damage will not be great.

Adolph Baur was in Richmond last week, resting up after several months of hard work superintending the construction of the large greenhouse at Baur & Smith's establishment.

The Cincinnati boys have signified their intention of attending the Indianapolis show in a body. The florists at Louisville are also coming to Indianapolis at one time.

John Grande has returned from a visit to Muncie.

Tomlinson hall market is well filled with chrysanthemum blooms and plants these days. Business there is reported as being extremely good. An unusually large quantity of chrysanthemums are being raised in this section this year, but no trouble is anticipated in moving them along, as flower show years always stimulate trade in that direction.

ST. LOUIS.

The Market.

Business has improved a little but only in spots, some of the florists being very busy, while others wish they were. There seems to be a good bit of funeral work going on, and a few weddings, but that seems to be about all. The weather is much cooler than a week ago and stock of all kinds shows much improvement as to quality but has shortened up in supply.

The demand is for the better quality of stock. This can be seen at the different wholesale houses. Chrysanthemums are coming in freely but are cleaning up each day, especially white and yellow. Extra fancy are up to $4 per dozen; others from $3 down. First-class Beauties are selling well and the market is well supplied with them. Other roses, such as Brides, Maids, Perles, Golden Gate, Chatenay and Richmond are more than the demand calls for. Carnations have gone up in price. Fancies are now $3 per hundred. These are all selling up clean.

Violets are much larger and of better color since the cold weather set in. A few dahlias, cosmos and callas make up the daily supply. There is plenty of good smilax to be had, also fine asparagus, adiantum, galax and ferns.

Some extra good chrysanthemum plants are seen which sell well.

Various Notes.

Flower show matters are progressing most satisfactorily. The program, which is very handsome, is out. The show is only two weeks off. Fred H. Meinhardt, who is superintendent, reports that everything looks favorable for a big show and it should be a financial success. The executive board meets weekly and nothing will be left undone to make this the best and largest show the club has ever held.

The members of the Florists' Club should not fail to attend the meeting next Thursday afternoon, November 2, in the new hall, southeast corner of Grand and Shenandoah avenues, at 2 p. m. This is a week in advance of the regular meeting, owing to the flower show. President Ammann states that a meeting of the guarantors of the show will also be held after the meeting and all the guarantors are requested to be present. This and the first meeting in the new hall, with other important matters, should bring out a banner attendance.

Frank K. Balthis, formerly with the Missouri Botanic Garden, also member of the club, is reporter for Bradstreet's this city. His friends in the trade wish him well.

Invitations are out from the Missouri Botanic Garden for the sixteenth annual banquet to florists, nurserymen and market gardeners, to be held at the Mercantile Club, Wednesday night, November 8, at 7 p. m.

Fred Foster and wife left for Chicago Monday night to attend the horse show there this week.

Vincent Gorley, of Grim & Gorley, on Cass avenue, was lucky in having returned to him a hundred-dollar pair of diamond ear-rings belonging to his wife, which were lost some two weeks ago, having been placed in an old vest which was sold to a second-hand dealer.

Frank Fillmore's big rose house is in fine shape for a heavy cut of Bride, Maid, Perle and Wootton, which he calls his "big four." The carnation houses, too, are looking fine, especially Enchantress. A fine lot of chrysanthemum plants in pots were also seen. The twelve geraniums which he will show at the exhibition look good for first. A visit to the store a few blocks west, where young Frank and his wife are in charge, prove this to be a handsomely fitted retail store, where business should be good all the year around.

Bowling.

The florists' league team met defeat at the hands of the jewelers' team. The boys were clearly out of form and especially the captain, who only made 411 in the three games; Meinhardt, 451; Kuehn, 473; Ellison, 487, and Beneke, 498; average per man, 154. The standing of the team is as follows:

Meinhardt	15	2,483	166

DENVER.

The Market.

Business the past week was very gratifying and, if this keeps up, there will be no kick coming this season. General business also appears to be good, so when the other trades are doing well the florists get their share, most houses reporting total sales ahead of the same period last year.

The receipts of flowers were perhaps not as large as the previous week. American Beauties are arriving in somewhat limited quantities but the quality is still good and they are selling well, the supply hardly equaling the demand. Brides and Maids show little change from last report and some good stock is to be had. There has been a good supply of red roses, the Richmond now being received in fairly large quantities, and Liberty is sending in a generous cut.

Carnations are coming in more heavily. While some are still short of stem they are good of bloom. Some fine Enchantress are seen and in general the stock averages good flowers and medium long stems for the season. Fiancee is good; in fact, there is enough of the better grades of all kinds to go around, with the exception of the red.

The chrysanthemum is now seen in all the shops. While the receipts are not nearly as large as they will be next month, not all colors being yet available, the white and yellow being the best just at present, the best grade brings $3 per

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

There has been some complaint that trade has not been all that it should have been the past week, but at last we have had the killing frost which has put most of the outdoor flowers to the bad, and that will help some. Beauties, lilies, chrysanthemums, cosmos, gladioli and dahlias have been an awful glut the past week. Good carnations have been good sale, but the poorer ones would not move.

Various Notes.

Warrick Bros., of Washington, Pa., sent the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., a consignment of the finest mums seen this year. To call attention to their quality the grower tied a small piece of red ribbon to each flower and they were offered as red ribbon stock.

Miss Clara B. Forbes, of the Wheeling Greenhouse Co., Wheeling, W. Va., was in the city Saturday, and when we are talking about the enthusiastic, energetic and up-to-date people in this business we must always include Miss Forbes.

Arthur Langhans, of Wheeling, W. Va., was also visiting relatives here last week.

Judge and Mrs. Vesey, of Fort Wayne, Ind., visited Pittsburg and called on the various wholesalers to see what the trade were doing. Mrs. Vesey claims the flower growing establishment, but the judge is right up-to-date in everything pertaining to the business. Again we would remark that the women in our craft are all much above the average in intelligence, energy and business ability, and to meet them is inspiring.

J. W. Elliott, president of the Elliott

Nursery Co., gave the writer a spin one day last week in his new auto car, and while we passed most of the fine east end places, one cannot tell much about them; we were too busy holding on our hair. I can recommend this style auto if you have the price; I am not buying this season myself.

A. M. Murdoch, who has been on an extended trip, taking his vacation in the late summer, is again at his place of business.

Last Sunday the B. R. & P. ran what they advertised as a chrysanthemum excursion. Tickets were sold from Mt. Jewett, Clearfield and intermediate points at exceptionally low rates. This is the first of many excursions that will run into Pittsburg on the several railroads to see the Schenley park display of mums. Supt. Geo. Burke, and Foreman John Jones will not disappoint them, as the show will be well worth the trip.

Frank Faulk and T. P. Langhans spent one day last week in the woods. It would have been a sad day for the birds if it hadn't rained.

In a letter from Los Angeles, Cal., our old friend B. L. Elliott says the climate is great, but California is not Pittsburg by a great sight. Hoo-Hoo.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been rather dull, with a little spurt toward the end of last week. Chrysanthemums are not selling very readily. Good roses are scarce, especially pink.

Club Meeting.

A very well attended meeting of the Detroit Florists' Club was held Wednesday, October 18. Thanks to Aug. Von Boeselager, the cigars were again passed around, a young florist being the reason. This seems to be a regular feature at the club meetings lately. Who's next?

The question box brought out a number of interesting discussions. "Is it advisable to solicit orders by postal cards, from funeral houses?" was very openly debated, with the result that most of the members thought it not only a very improper practice, but one that would do more harm than good, a number of instances being mentioned of bereft families who had received such postals and who felt very keenly about it.

The meeting was made exceptionally interesting by a few exhibits. Nathan Smith & Son sent some fine blooms of their beautiful pink seedling mum, Rosiere. Although the first flowers were cut October 10, it is a fine deep pink, with long stiff stems and good foliage and evidently a good keeper. Henry Fruck showed two new nephrolepis, each having a growth somewhat similar to Wittboldii, but of a much more graceful habit. B. Schroeter showed a vase of pink Enchantress.

Various Notes.

Painters and decorators were busy in Sullivan's and Schroeter's stores the past week.

Walter Taepke recently had a customer who demanded a female Boston fern, saying the male ones are not so hardy.

Breitmeyer's executed a very elaborate decoration at the Detroit Club for a dinner tendered Truman H. Newberry, assistant secretary of the navy. A miniature man-of-war made of chenille and cape flowers and used as a center-piece attracted much attention.

A new publication made its appearance in Detroit last week. The Detroit Florists' Club Rambler. This is without doubt the first publication ever issued for private circulation among the members of a trade organization. The honorable secretary, J. F. Sullivan, was the originator. A publication staff is to be appointed, as it is hoped to make the Rambler a permanent club paper.

A Club is Organized.

On the evening of October 20 the following florists, florists' employees and ornamental horticulturists met at the Iowa Seed Company's store for the purpose of organization: Peter Lambert, Chas. McAnniff, Julius Ledig, Wm. Trillow, J. D. Lambert, Chas. Simons, M. J. Wragg, Chas. Gay, G. J. Bennett, Frank Stevens, J. B. O'Neill, J. F. Marshall, Chas. N. Page, H. J. Lozier, F. L. Harter, D. O. Finch and Robt. Newcomb. Chas. N. Page was chosen temporary chairman and J. F. Marshall secretary. On Mr. Trillow's motion those present voted to consider themselves organized under the title of the Des Moines Florists' Club. The object of organization as outlined by Messrs. Page, Trillow, Wragg and others, is the promotion of good fellowship, social enjoyment and the financial betterment of the members. Mr. O'Neill, Mr. Trillow and Mr. Page spoke in favor of inviting several gentlemen from Chicago to assist in getting the club in first-class working order and to infuse enthusiasm into the members. On Mr. Marshall's motion the chair appointed the following committee to draft a constitution and by-laws, select new members and report at the next meeting: J. B. O'Neill, Wm. Trillow and H. J. Lozier. On Mr. Gay's motion the club proceeded to elect permanent officers on ballot. J. D. Lambert was elected president, Wm. Trillow secretary and Chas. N. Page treasurer. On Mr. Gay's motion the club voted to admit to membership on equal terms all persons interested in commercial floriculture and ornamental horticulture without regard to sex.

The Market.

Business continues first-class. The rush of chrysanthemums is on. There are very few large mums coming in now but the quantity of smaller ones is large, and, while the price obtained for them has dropped considerably, the total sales are much higher. All orders are being filled and all colors can be had.

Roses are very plentiful and the price remains the same. Some first-class stock is coming in. Beauties are scarcely equal to the demand. Other red roses are also scarce. Carnations are in short supply and the price has risen to $3 per hundred for the best. It is hard to figure out why carnations should be so scarce, but there are not nearly enough to go around.

Sunday night brought a pretty heavy frost and it looks as if dahlias and cos-mos have been killed. Green goods are selling nicely.

Various Notes.

The schedule committee of the Florists' Society has made its report and the first show of the season, held in our club-rooms, as usual, will take place on Saturday, November 11. It will be devoted to chrysanthemums exclusively. The following prizes are offered: Best twelve blooms white, first, $6; second, $4; third, $3. Best twelve pink and yellow, the same. Best twenty-five Bonnaffon, first, $10; second, $8; third, $6. Best general display, $10. The printed schedule for all three shows will be out in a week and can be had by addressing C. J. Ohmer, secretary. Everyone is invited to compete and all those having seedlings are requested to enter their blooms for a certificate of merit, which will be given to all seedlings judged worthy of same.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The frost of last week has ended the dahlias and some of the other tender flowers. Cosmos is still in its glory, great quantities of every shade being seen in the stores and on the streets. Despite the absence of dahlias, the market conditions have not improved. The demand is only fair and the supply far exceeds it. There are too many medium and poor grades of chrysanthemums, but hardly enough of the choicer sorts. The Leo Niessen Co. has a novelty in the shape of Easter lilies of excellent quality. They expect to have them steadily throughout the winter.

The Plender Co.

John C. Gracey has completed his improvements in the Plender Co.'s nurseries at 1230 N. Twenty-sixth street. Two buildings and an alleyway have been thrown into one large store about 40x50 feet, with a greenhouse about 30x125 feet in the rear. A covered way admits wagons to the rear of this house. The store contains a rockery, with fountain and pool and a number of aquariums, a specialty with the proprietor. A very pretty display of jardinières is made on one side. The greenhouse is filled with decorative plants and ferns, with aquariums scattered about, adding variety and needed moisture. The whole effect is very fine and reflects great credit on the enterprise of the moving spirit in the company.

Ficus Pandurata.

One of our brightest retailers experimented with the Ficus pandurata last winter, subjecting it to drought, gases and other ill-treatment in his store. It behaved so well that he felt it was at least the equal of the aspidistra in durability. The result of this little experiment is that he bought the entire stock of Ficus pandurata at one of the largest growers in this city, where the plant has been made a little specialty. A leading New York retailer has evidently arrived at the same results, only a little too late, his order arriving just after the entire stock had been safely corralled.

Various Notes.

G. H. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., Chicago, spent Monday and Tuesday in this city. Mr. Pieser is just ending a three weeks' business trip which has included the violet district in New York state, New York city and parts of New Jersey. He called at the supply houses and several of the commission houses while in Philadelphia and expressed his confidence in the outlook for the winter season.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., states that his firm has experienced a remarkable run on Pompeian ware; their fourth shipment is now on the way, the others having practically sold out. This new pottery is greatly appreciated by all the best buyers, especially in and near Chicago. Mr. Berkowitz showed some new styles of this ware, the smaller sizes being especially adapted for violets or "cyps" and might be used for favors on the dinner-table.

Robert Craig has two novelties in chrysanthemums, one the Baby chrysanthemum grown in fan-shaped plants, the other the hardy pompon variety, grown in 6-inch pots, covered with buds.

Philip Freud has another clever idea in the shape of a Hallow-eve window at Michell's. He has covered the floor of the window with popcorn, a Jap is standing by preparing to roast some of the grains in a charcoal fire, arranged with electric lights for flames. Above are corn stalks with the grain just ready to drop. The effect is very pleasing.

It is remarkable the large quantity of baskets of different styles that are being shipped by M. Rice & Co., to all parts of the country. They report that the demand for baskets is constantly on the increase. They carry an endless variety.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons have arranged an effective Hallow-eve decoration at the Bellevue-Stratford.

Frank Aicher, of Clifton, has his violet houses, seven or eight in number, planted with fine stock.

Charles H. Fox opened his new store and conservatory, Broad street below Walnut, on Tuesday.

Eugene Bernheimer, one of our enterprising wholesalers, has added orchids to his regular line of stock. Mr. Bernheimer is the first wholesaler to take up the handling of mushrooms as a side issue.

The Philadelphia Carnation Co. has its plant at Secane in excellent condition for the winter campaign. Carnations are the principal crop. Mushrooms and sweet peas are also largely grown.

John McIntyre personally marketed a big wagon-load of fine cosmos grown by himself at Thornhedge. "J. M." is a good seller, a good buyer and a good grower.

Paul J. Klinghorn, manager for Dumont & Co., is hustling out mums at a lively rate these days.

Charles E. Meehan states that the Flower Market is a growing factor in carnations, the best Enchantress, and in double violets.

Edward Reid had a heavy shipping day on Monday.

The first Paper White narcissi appeared at W. J. Baker's on October 23.

Mrs. S. I. Smith has completed her new house at Secane.

Good judges say that the losses on nearly all kinds of indoor stock, especially on early chrysanthemums, have been very heavy.

Club Meeting.

Our last Florists' Club meeting was a huge success. A number of visitors were present and before the end of the meeting the club secured three new members. John Gratopp brought a bunch of fine carnations, to show what is doing at his place. G. W. Haebich, florist at the State Hospital for the Insane, brought Glory of Pacific mums cut from pot-grown plants. The stems were rather short, but the flowers were very good. G. A. Heinel, being out of town, sent his foreman, John Helmer, down with a bunch of Estelle and Glory of Pacific with both stems and flowers fine. Wm. F. Kasting, Buffalo, sent a bunch of Adiantum Croweanum and also a bunch of A. hybridum; both were fine.

Elmer D. Smith, of Adrian, Mich., in company with his foreman, honored us with a visit and at the same time showed us a few of his early mum seedlings, one of them being October Frost, which, as its name indicates, is a pure, snowy white, very large, fine stem, good foliage and in fact everything that one can desire in an early white. Another white of still larger size but a little weak in stem made a lot of friends, but will not be sent out on account of the stem. But everybody went wild over a bunch of six Rosiere, which will be sent out this season. The color is deeper than Glory of Pacific and does not fade. The stem is about two and one-half feet long and strong, with foliage well up to the flower and of a size that a young man weakened from heart disease had better turn the flower over to the cause of his trouble.

Mr. Smith gave us an interesting talk on the growing of mums and answered questions by the members. We were very sorry to see him leave early, but in company with Mr. Cushman he had to catch the last car.

Our president, George Bayer, says he is short on parliamentary rules, but he knows enough when E. Kuhnke makes a motion to have Mr. Bayer lay a box of ten-cent cigars on the table to rule that the motion be laid on the table instead. But John Gratopp took the hint and in honor of his coming fiftieth birthday the boys took care of the box.

At our next meeting we will have a cyclamen show. We will be glad to receive samples of stock from out of town. At the close of the meeting the plants will be sold to the highest bidder and the money sent to the shipper. The club is invited by the Detroit Florists' Club to come to that suburb of Toledo and take a trip to Mount Clemens on November 2. Quite a number of the boys are going.

H. A. Mills was present the first time since his return from Washington, when he got in a wreck and lost a number of teeth. He seems to be all right again and feels good because his store teeth are nearly ready to use.

BOSTON.

The Market.

Conditions are not at all satisfactory in the flower market at present. The long spell of abnormally warm weather brought things along with a rush, and, while cooler conditions now prevail, the frosts have not been sufficiently severe to kill off all tender outdoor flowers. The chrysanthemum season must prove an unremunerative one to growers, for prices rule extremely low. Quite a number of the midseason sorts are now in. Among others we have noted A. J. Balfour, Ivory, Bonnaffon, Kate Broomhead, Mrs. Coombes, Wm. Duckham, Cheltoni and a few Merstham Yellow. The foliage on the latter is its greatest drawback and we think Halliday will be preferred commercially.

Roses are getting decidedly druggy, especially the small sizes. The prices they bring can scarcely pay for sending them to market. Beauties constantly improve and the same holds true of Brides and Maids. Wellesley is very popular. Some extra fine blooms of these are now coming in. Liberty from several growers is also good. Carnations are suffering from the overabundance of other stock and prices have softened. Some have sold as low as 75 cents, but these were not good flowers. Very nice flowers, however, have gone for $1 and only extra fine flowers of standard sorts or novelties have realized $2 to $3. Violets are abundant and are coming of a much better color and fine size. The top price on these has been 50 cents, many going at half that price. No special change on other flowers or green goods.

Club Meeting.

As briefly announced in the REVIEW of last week, over 150 were present at the club meeting on October 17. At the October meeting in 1904 there were forty-two present, which was counted exceedingly good. In 1900 the club was in such a condition that only one meeting was held. Recent attendances cheer the hearts of the old members, some of whom felt, less than three years ago, that it would be hard to resuscitate the club. The presidencies of Messrs. Pettigrew and Wheeler have, however, accomplished wonders and the end is not yet.

The interesting lecture by J. A. Pettigrew, most of which appeared in last week's REVIEW, caused an animated discussion. E. O. Orpet spoke of a similar trip he had taken. In regard to parks in Great Britain as compared with America he thinks the former have a great advantage in the wealth of broad-leaved evergreens which are not hardy here.

President Wheeler appointed the following committees: Nomination, Charles Sander, W. E. Fischer, W. H. Elliott; reports, Robert Cameron, J. A. Pettigrew, Peter Fisher, A. H. Fewkes, W. N. Craig; awards (for the evening), E. O. Orpet, M. A. Patten, W. Davis. At the next meeting in addition to the election of officers there will be a lecture by Prof. B. M. Watson, of the Bussey Institution.

There were numerous interesting exhibits. W. A. Riggs had splendid specimen blooms of F. A. Cobbold, H. J. Jones, Mrs. S. T. Wright, Wm. Knox, a fine new yellow variety; F. S. Vallis, Lord Hopetoun and Mrs. H. A. Miller. Waban Conservatories showed a fine vase of Wellesley rose. Mr. Montgomery stated that this new variety has more than exceeded expectations. It is a good grower and splendid keeper, as well as a prolific bloomer. He said it sells better today than any other rose in the Boston market, with the exception of Beauty and Liberty. Duncan Finlayson found it a fine bedding rose outside, his employers being very fond of it. William Sim had a fine bunch of Governor Herriek violet. The color was deep and Mr. Sim said its only fault so far was a rather short stem. H. A. Stevens Co. had a fine flesh-colored Lawson sport, also a promising clear yellow seedling. Peter Fisher contributed a vase of his new salmon-flesh carnation, of which he is now growing 3,000 plants and which promises to be one of the standard varieties of the future. It was shown as No. 10, not being yet named. R. T. McGorum had a good vase of Mrs. Pierpont Morgan rose, but the natural modesty of the exhibitor would not permit him to speak of its culture. Mr. Montgomery, however, paid him a glowing and well earned tribute. W. N. Craig showed some interesting cattleyas. Superintendent Doogue, of the public gardens, showed plants of Sea Island and upland cotton which have been used in some of the flower beds this season. George Barker had a vase of cosmos.

Speeches from Messrs. Shaw, Porter, Clark and others of the visiting Manchester Club were made. Thanks were tendered Messrs. Wheeler and Heurlin for a gift of twelve dozen cups for the club's use. The solo by F. B. Cannell and selections by the glee club were finely rendered and vociferously applauded. The nineteen new members elected, with others promised, should make the club's membership to 250 ere the end of the year.

The field day at the Waban Rose Conservatories on October 28 will undoubtedly draw a big delegation. Members will take the Framingham car and get off at Oak street, Natick.

Various Notes.

Galvin had the decorations at the Wilson-Purdon wedding in Trinity church on October 18. White chrysanthemums and white roses were largely used.

Six of the big new houses being erected by A. C. Burrage, the Boston copper magnate, in Halifax, Mass., are nearing completion. Work is commencing on two more. The dimensions are 40x300. Violets, cucumbers, lettuce and a few other vegetables will be grown. A battery of three powerful steam boilers will furnish heat. Mr. Burrage has purchased 3,000 acres of land in Halifax and will later develop a fine country estate there.

Peter Fisher's new salmon-pink carnation, No. 10, is taking remarkably well. It has held its color well during the recent long spell of clear, warm weather, while Enchantress has faded out considerably.

Quite a number of entries have been received for the coming chrysanthemum show, some from new exhibitors. There is a marked decrease in the production of big specimen blooms on private estates this season, medium-size flowers being preferred. This will affect the cut bloom department considerably.

A delegation from the plant committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society visited the Plant estate, Groton, Conn., on October 25 to inspect houses of single-stemmed chrysanthemums. All the best standard varieties and a number of newer sorts were seen and the quality was even better than in 1904. T. W. Head, the superintendent, will exhibit largely at the coming New York and Boston shows.

Nicotiana Sanderæ, which was not by any means a success during the hot weather in July and August, has more than redeemed itself by the splendid show it has made during September and October. A bed we looked at on October 23 was still a blaze of bloom. While the colors were not particularly pleasing, the wonderful wealth of flowers produced for four or five months should commend it to many. Under artificial light it is quite pleasing and lasts well in a cut state. Planted on the edge of shrubberies, or in partially shaded beds, it has been a great success in Massachusetts.

Sullivan & McGrath, at the L. H. Foster stand, in Dorchester, have a fine stock of nephrolepis, dracenas, rubbers and other foliage plants. Their new sport from the Anna Foster fern, named Dorchester, keeps true and is a very graceful fern, likely to take when put on the market.

VALUE OF TRADE SHOWS.

The first "advertising show" ever held, at Chicago, October 11 to 18, was an unqualified success, especially in point of attendance. In reviewing the affair Charles H. Jones, president of the National Federation of Advertising Clubs, said:

But the show accomplished much more than bringing the crowds to see the exhibits. Above all, it accomplished this: It advertised advertising with unprecedented force. It did much for the advertising profession. At the same time it popularized and elevated advertising. It showed what advertising really was doing and what it was accomplishing in the business world.

Just that does every successful flower show do for the florists in the community in which it is held.

THE ST. LOUIS SHOW.

Profiting by the experience and the prestige of the World's Fair flower show, the St. Louis Florists' Club has shuffled the cards to deal out the biggest local exhibition the town has ever had. The committee has been at work for months and every detail has been attended to in good season. The program was out last week and in sending a copy to a friend Manager Otto G. Koenig wrote: "The hall, with its accessories, will be a thing of beauty, and I know will be long remembered by all who will come and visit us. Our visitors will be courteously received, the exhibitors will get full justice and the winners cash for every premium they take." Indeed, a glance at the program would lead to the belief that the boys have "rustled up" enough advertising to insure the discharge of all liabilities, without recourse to the pleasant published list of guarantors and donors of premiums. As with so many other shows, the St. Louis managers are this year offering more liberal premiums than ever before. Best 100 mums get $100, $75 and $50; fifty Beauties, $50 and $35; 100 Beauties, $100, $75, $50; table decoration, $75, $50, $35; group of palms, $75, $50, $25, and many others equally liberal. Besides, there are Shaw and S. A. F. medals for new plants. St. Louis certainly ought to do well this year.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

UP AGAINST IT.

If buggies break when horses shy,
You settle at the livery;
If prices rise and others buy,
Your grower cuts delivery.

REPORTS indicate that peas are still an uncertain quantity.

NEW YORK.—Henry Nungesser & Co. had 100 bags of grass seeds on the Hudson from Havre October 21.

It is expected that this year's catalogues will have onion seed listed at double the prices of last year.

THE picking of bouquet green in Wisconsin woods began last week. Each year it is necessary to go farther afield for supplies.

S. B. BARNES, Malvern, Ia., is going into the farm and garden seed business, paying particular attention to seed corn.

VISITED Chicago: P. H. Gage, of S. M. Isbell & Co., Jackson, Mich.; Morris L. Smith, of the Madson Seed Co., Manitowoc, Wis.

WAX beans have been reported short and, what's more, they are short. Every delivery from the farmers makes the shortage more apparent.

ONION sets in the vicinity of Chicago are going into winter quarters in good shape. A dry rot in the whites may cause trouble and seems to be the only thing that worries, as prospects for the future are for high prices.

THE Globe varieties of onions, which are the sorts in greatest demand by all up-to-date onion growers, are reported very short. The flat varieties of all colors are not as plentiful as they should be either, although there is likely to be about enough of them to go around.

BEAN samples so far received bear out the prediction made in the REVIEW some time ago that the coloring of this year's crop would be excellent as a rule.

SOME large dealings in Rocky Ford melon seed are reported this week at low figures, viewed in the light of recent reports from the growing stations.

THE demand for cabbage seed and onion seed is likely to be heavy the coming spring, as all the principal markets of the country show a sharp advance in the prices of onions and cabbage, with conditions pointing to a continued advance throughout the winter and spring.

CONSIDERABLE dissatisfaction is expressed by firms having contract orders with growers of onion seed at the very small percentage of a delivery they are to receive of several important varieties. There is the old story going around that the grower cuts the delivery down in order to realize an advanced price for open orders.

Crop 1905. RAWSON'S ROYAL STRAIN CYCLAMEN is ready for delivery.

This strain has no equal or better. Perfect flowers of giant type are borne on long, erect stems in such profusion that they almost hide the foliage and pot. We can offer the following colors: Pure White, Deep Red, Delicate Pink, Christmas Red, White with Claret Base, Mauve, Salmon, Pink and a mixture of unsurpassable variety at $1.00 per 100 seeds; $9.00 per 1000 seeds.

planted late, and these will turn out about eighty per cent. The quality of the seed is the best for years and a large surplus is in the hands of the growers. Jefferson county, Florida, no doubt produces more than one-half the watermelon seed of the United States, the soil and climatic conditions producing the crop to perfection."

THE cucumber crop from the Michigan section this year will make heavy plump seed. The deliveries so far made are better in this respect than they have been in several years.

THE position of California Lima beans in the New York market is very unsettled, prices having declined so rapidly that no one knows just where the market is. The latest quotations were $2.85 to $2.90.

The United States Seed Co., St. Louis, has been incorporated with $2,000 capital stock, fully paid. The incorporators are Everett Davis, forty shares; John H. Elton, thirty-nine shares; T. W. Davis, one share.

SPEAKING of advertising in general publications, the Ford Seed Co., Ravenna, O., say that they believe they will concentrate their efforts on a smaller list of papers the coming year. They are convinced that it will pay them better than to spread out so much. They will not materially change their appropriation but use a greater number of issues, thus keeping before the readers for a longer time.

WATKINS & SIMPSON, the London seedsmen, have prepared a large and handsomely printed catalogue of electrotypes suitable for illustrating seed catalogues. They are also sending the American trade a catalogue of seed novelties mostly of their own raising, including a new runner bean, the Marvel, named because of its prolificness; a rich orange salmon sweet pea named Evelyn Byatt, which created a sensation at the London shows, and many others. They say that they consider it the strongest list of novelties they have ever issued.

CORN IN OHIO.

C. S. Clark, Wakeman, O., writing under date of October 19, says: "I am pleased to report a well matured crop of sweet corn, field corn and pop corn for seed purposes. But on account of continued heavy rains in the spring, at planting time, our acreage was cut down so that we shall have no surplus to speak of, if any. In fact, we can now see some shortage and, as

So far as the seed trade is concerned the "noncontiguous" possessions of the United States are of very small importance. The U. S. Department of Agriculture has just issued a volume of statistics showing that in the years men-

Medal for School Gardens.

The bronze medal of the society which was placed at the disposal of Miss Susan B. Sipe for award at her discretion to the public school children of Washington, D. C., has been won by the Dennison school for superior work in gardening. Miss Sipe, in reporting on this award, states that a year ago the children at this school had nothing but a gravel yard. They now have a magnificent display of asters, zinnias, cannas, a fine lawn and a vegetable garden that is furnishing the nature study material for the schools of the building. This has been entirely the work of the children, every grade taking its share. Most of the soil has been brought in by toy express wagons from vacant lots.

THE READERS' CORNER.

Cyanide of Potassium.

The suggestions given in the REVIEW from issue to issue, if heeded and sifted, will cause the average florist to wear diamonds some day. I learned the use of hydrocyanic acid gas from the REVIEW and must say its use has been worth a great deal to me. I was getting gray-headed fighting white fly and other greenhouse pests, but since I learned this method of fumigating and commenced to use it my temper has improved and my hair is regaining its natural color. I buy my cyanide in the granulated form and find it gives better results and is easier to handle.

The Prize Essays.

Enclosed find another dollar for the REVIEW another year. We find your paper covers the field of floriculture about as fully as seems possible. We hope a great deal of good will result from the essays printed in your paper on "The Ideal Employer" and "The Ideal Salesman." Having been both salesman and employer I fully appreciate the largeness of the subject. Anything which will promote a better understanding between the employer and employee is worthy of high praise. To know one's fault is the first step toward mending and I think these essays will do a great deal of good.

ASPARAGUS.

Growing in Lath Houses.

To a florist who uses a great deal of green stuff in connection with cut flowers and designs the difficulty of getting Asparagus plumosus stems in sufficient quantity is often a serious consideration. This is especially felt in our smaller towns, where large establishments for the growing of ferns, etc., are not located and often the retailer has to fall back on some other sort of trimming that is not as desirable.

Very few retailers having establishments devoted to growing plants and flowers have sufficient room to devote to asparagus, and as this is now an indispensable adjunct to the business I can offer my experience in handling asparagus in lath houses.

I have found that the asparagus will grow and thrive anywhere smilax can be grown successfully. It is equally as hardy in this locality and, although it only sends out one strong crop each year, it in the meanwhile furnishes a good quantity of short stems, which are really more desirable for bouquets or designs than the longer ones.

Three years ago I built a lath house 20x75 feet. I put the laths closer together than on the smilax house; that is, the space between each lath was about two-thirds the width of the lath with which it was built. I excavated to a depth of eight inches and filled about half the depth with rotten manure. I then put back all the soil, which raised the beds several inches above the surroundings. I dug it up well and planted the asparagus about one foot apart in the rows, running them crosswise. I put fifty rows in the house, which gave eighteen inches between each row. In this way I used up about 1,000 plants from 4-inch pots.

I planted them in the month of April and did not get much of a crop until September, when they commenced to make tremendous shoots. I gave them plenty of strings to climb on and from these plants I cut over 1,500 strings each from six to eight feet long. All the following spring and summer I cut quantities of short stems and in July I again gave them about the same quantity of strings, with the same good results.

This year I gave them a good mulching, in July, of well rotted manure, and they have made a tremendous growth since then. The beds are still considerably higher than the walks and I have found that in a couple of low spots they do not grow as well as in the other places, probably because too much water collects there.

The cold weather has not hurt the leaves, although it checks the growth and turns the stems a very dark green. The only difficulty I have found has been in places where the moisture collected and the stems have turned yellow. The texture is not quite as fine as of the asparagus grown under glass, but it answers for all purposes and, as the house requires hardly any attention, I consider it one of the best paying propositions in the business. How long the clumps will continue to produce so abundantly I do not know, but this is the third season and I am of the opinion that if they are not too closely cut during their growing season they will continue to produce indefinitely. PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Business.

The business activity which asserted itself all summer continued until the closing days of the fair. The entertaining of officials who so ably conducted this memorable undertaking called for the best in the market, but there was none too much stock, weather conditions being responsible. Sunshine is now at a premium and the Oregon mists, which generally prevail from early October until July 4, seem to have begun in earnest.

The supply of outdoor flowers came to an abrupt termination and the greenhouse output, though good, is limited. Roses never were finer at this season and we are glad to note that local growers are beginning to realize the necessity of an early fall crop. Never was the demand so great as now. Home-grown chrysanthemums have made their debut in a modest way. The finest seen here were shipped in from California and retailed at $5 per dozen. A look into the numerous growing establishments convinced us of much activity there and that we may expect some fine stock for the next few weeks at least.

Recent visitors were R. C. Eisele, Baker City, and A. McLaren, Salem.

Exposition Awards.

The great Lewis and Clark fair is now a matter of history, having closed auspiciously October 14. It has been a huge success from every point of view. Surely the florists do not regret its existence, for it proved an impetus to what otherwise might have been a dull summer. The absence of a trade display was not due to a lack of interest on the part of the florists, the management offering no inducements therefor. The landscaping and horticultural features showed artistic ability and were classed with the principal attractions. Its value to the trade cannot be overestimated. The visitors from rural districts evinced great enthusiasm, it being an education to them from which we shall expect later results.

Awards for permanent exhibits were as follows:

Gold medal to W. Atlee Burpee & Co., Philadelphia, for lawn grass seed.

Gold medal to Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago, for bedding plants.

Gold medal to George Otten, Portland, for tuberous begonias.

Gold medal to J. J. Butzer, Portland, for sweet peas. H. J. M.

The bright, warm weather during the past week has had the effect of bringing out quantities of good stock. ception of American Beauty, are in sufficient supply to meet requirements. Mums are the flower in most demand. The outdoor stock, although not quite as plentiful as a year ago, is handled by the thousands daily. The stems do not seem to be as good as we are accustomed to see, but the prices are a shade better. Sweet peas hold their own very well and still cost the stores $1 per dozen bunches. Violets are only in fair supply and will not be more plentiful until we have some rain. Valley and Liliun longiflorum are limited, but as long as mums remain plentiful the retailers will not worry much.

Various Notes.

Eugene Hoffman, of Palo Alto, is at present laying out a park for the town of Redwood.

Chas. Wiedersheim, for many years proprietor of a floral establishment in Oakland, but now a resident of Sonoma county, is in town on a short visit.

John Young, of the Dwight Way Nurseries, Berkeley, has a splendid crop of Maids and Brides at this writing.

The Holland Nursery Co., of Elmhurst, has an extra fine cut of early mums. They have made a specialty of valley heretofore, but will in future grow carnations and mums as well.

Mrs. M. Powell, wife of A. Powell, one of Oakland's pioneer landscape gardeners, died on October 17.

The Society of Hortensia, at its regular bi-monthly meeting, discussed a spring bulb exhibition, but no definite action was taken.

THE OKLAHOMA LAW.

According to a report from Guthrie, O. T., James M. T. Wright and David R. Wright, of Hartford City, Ind., doing business as the Wright Nursery Co., on October 19, filed suit against C. A. McNabb, secretary of the Oklahoma board of agriculture, and his bondsmen, O. A. Mischer and J. H. Wheeler. They also ask a writ of mandamus to compel McNabb to issue a license to them to sell nursery stock in Oklahoma. They allege that on October 13 they deposited the required fee to obtain a license, that a receipt for the money was given, but that McNabb refused to issue a permit until they agreed not to sell to certain parties in Oklahoma; that these certain parties were heavy buyers, whose business McNabb was trying to corner for a concern in which he was interested. Various other allegations of misconduct in office are made.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

At Rochester, a city which now boasts a population of 200,000, there are some fine florists' stores, those of Keller, Wilson and Salter Bros. being especially worthy of notice because of their enterprise, growth and ability. The new store of Salter Bros. has a frontage of nearly 100 feet. The opportunity for display is taken advantage of to the limit. Fortunately for the firm, they have an extensive plant to draw upon for the daily supply required.

The great reputation Rochester has achieved as a nursery center is illustrated at this season by the enormous shipments of trees for the fall deliveries. It would take many pages to list even the firms that work from this center, sending their agents, numbering many thousands, to every part of the United States and Canada.

ARSENICAL INSECTICIDES.

The Fruit World, an English publication, says that Kedsie's compound is rapidly superseding Paris green as a cure for leaf-eating insects; the recipe for mixing is as follows: White arsenic, one pound; washing soda, four pounds; water, one gallon. The materials are boiled until dissolved, which takes only a few minutes.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade has been quiet around town during the past week and stock seems to have accumulated in all quarters. Mums are plentiful, with the exception, perhaps, of good yellow. There is an over-supply of carnations and roses of all kinds, with the possible exception of American Beauties, which are always in good demand. Dahlias are still coming in good quantities, but at time of writing probabilities are favorable for some sharp frosts and colder weather; this will, we anticipate, make a keener demand for greenhouse flowers. Our Thanksgiving this year is rather early to have much effect on business from the florists' standpoint and, while the average florist is a fairly thankful chap at all times, he could be more thankful if Thanksgiving day were set for November instead of October.

Various Notes.

This week has seen a new flower store opened up at 92 Queen street, East Toronto, a branch of the People's Florist, 336 Queen street West, of which A. E. Moore is proprietor. The People's Florist has a big trade in the west end, handling a medium class of stock. This class of trade they expect to establish in the east end, where there seems to be a good opening for such a store.

D. J. Sinclair has just taken into stock his import orders of German baskets. Up to date this is the largest importation of flower baskets handled by a Canadian firm. D. J.

ABUNDANCE (White)

The phenomenal yielder, the freest, earliest bloomer in existence, the most profitable carnation ever offered to the trade, easily gives four times as many flowers as the freest bloomer already introduced; a bench planted Aug. 31 is now in full bloom to which there will be no let up until thrown out next summer; come and see it. It will pay you if you are in the market for a carnation that will give you plenty of flowers at all times and not only at certain times. A good size, long stemmed flower. You can make no mistake by stocking up with it. Price for well-rooted cuttings, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate; cuttings delivered as soon as rooted; send in your order early as orders are filled in strict rotation. Our stock is grown from the best selected European strain, which has given satisfaction wherever grown. Fine plants, from 2¼-inch pots, ready for immediate shift, in blue and bright scarlet, $3.00 per 100.
Thrifty plants from 3-in. pots, in white, clear light pink, blue and bright scarlet, $5.00 per 100.

Field-Grown Asparagus Sprengerii

Those who have purchased our field-grown plants in the past are convinced that they are much superior to pot-grown, both for pots and bench culture.
When housed they immediately start into active growth, throwing up numerous growths, which come to perfection much earlier than those from pots. Field culture adds to the vigor of the plants and an enormous crop of green is the result.

From G. A. G., florist, Beverly, Mass.: "The pansies I got from you are now in bloom, and are the finest thoroughbred flowers I have seen, or any one else in this neighborhood, which is somewhat noted for good flowers on private places, being the famous 'North Shore.'"

From J. S., florist, Lynn, Mass.: "The Pansy Park Perfection pansies I got from you last year are the most beautiful I ever raised, for size, substance and color."

The above are samples of hundreds of unsolicited reports I have received.

BUFFALO.

Buffalo, when I visited it recently, was well worthy of the title "the windy city." Chicago will have to look to its laurels. A breeze close to eighty miles an hour made one accustomed to the zephyrs of New York unsteady. It was quite a transition from the summer temperature of Manhattan to the first snow of the season, but the warm welcome of the president-elect of the S. A. F. banished quickly all evidence of the chill without. Mr. Kasting is a busy man these days. Chairman of the committee which is raising $50,000 for the German Hospital in Buffalo, he has nearly $40,000 already assured. Realizing his coming responsibilities as head of the S. A. F., he has laid politics on the shelf and is planning to give all his time to the interests of the national society. His place of business is one of the largest supply houses in the country, with a ground floor of 7,500 square feet, an immense cellar and gallery, the whole building having been used as the theater before Mr. Kasting secured it. It seems none too large for the multiplicity of branches to his supply trade and four large greenhouses filled with plants indicate further the completeness of his conveniences. Mr. Kasting is very enthusiastic as to the success of the Dayton convention and will spare neither time nor effort to make it the banner convention of the society.

A call on William Scott found that storehouse of horticultural information convalescing rapidly from a severe sickness which he has had to combat since the convention. Still he carries his sixty-one strenuous years lightly and bids fair to renew his old time vigor. If the universal desire of the florists of this country could be gratified he would carry through his cultural directions until he reached the century. He is planning now for a trip to the Chicago exhibition. The Wm. Scott Co. is doing a very fine business. Its retail store is one of the best in the city and its Corfu and other enterprises are booming. The genial hospitality dispensed by Mr. Scott's charming wife and daughter make a visit to the veteran one long and pleasant to be remembered.

A New Yorker is made to feel quite at home in some of the Buffalo retail stores by the presence of familiar faces. In fact, the New York ideas predominate in decoration at both Palmer's and Anderson's, where the windows, the disposition of the counters and the general style of window effect all combine to illustrate the magic touch of competent hands that have catered to the artistic eyes of the metropolis.

At Palmer's lower store Ed. Slattery, formerly of Thorley's, is very much in evidence. He has as a lieutenant another New Yorker, Miss McNiece, while the up-town store is under the management of A. E. Beyer, ten years an employee of Mr. Palmer. The whole store has been changed to conform to modern ideas and requirements.

At Anderson's another of the Thorley experts, C. A. Schnell, is very much at home, and with a window of our hampers filled with chrysanthemums and decorated with ribbons one must rub his eyes to realize he is not gazing into the big window on Broadway, where the cibotiums and the novelties and the big Angora cat and the choice flowers appear. Here the woodwork of the new store is all of antique oak, very rich and stately, in harmony with the suave politician, Andy Adams. Mr. Anderson has a fine assortment of lieutenants and with his new conservatory and the great greenhouses of his uncle, A. N. Pierson, of Cromwell, to draw upon, there is little wonder his progress is rapid and his standing high. His home-grown Lorraine begonias, poinsettias and mums are his special pride.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

THE KANSAS CITY SHOW.

Kansas City makes it a rule never to do things by halves, and the coming flower show in the big Convention hall will be no exception to the practice. No effort is being spared to make this the finest exhibition of its kind ever held. There is a long list of premiums and the amounts offered are liberal, while the Kansas city flower show is noted for its prompt payment of all premiums on the closing day. The interest in the show is not confined to the florist but the entire city is interested and the indications are that there will be a record breaking attendance this year. Geo. E. Kessler, the city landscape gardener, who was appointed director of the show, is in Europe and L. A. Goodman will carry on the work in his absence. Mr. Goodman is president of the American Pomological Society and is an indefatigable worker and the arrangements for the show are in good hands in Mr. Kessler's absence.

Convention hall, in which the show is to be held, is one of the largest buildings of its kind in the west. It has a seating capacity of over 15,000. It has 30,000 square feet of floor space that can be used for the exhibits. The arrangements of the hall and the staging of the exhibits will be something unique in this line. It is the intention to have this show entirely different from anything ever held before. An Italian villa with a staircase, terrace, fountain and statuary will be built in the north end of the hall. This Italian effect will be carried out in all the arrangements and will form a most effective background for the exhibits. The paid attendance at each of the former shows was between 50,000 and 60,000 for the week and, as there is a greater and more widespread interest than ever before, it is safe to predict that the attendance will exceed all former records.

Secretary Louis W. Shouse says that the prospects were never brighter for a successful show. He believes from present indications that this show will be the best one that has ever been held. He has already received assurances from a large number of the leading growers of the country that they will send large displays. Among those he mentioned were such well known growers as Nathan Smith & Son, Chicago Carnation Co., H. W. Buckbee, and the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. Mr. Shouse is very enthusiastic and is working with untiring energy to make everything a success. The florists advisory committee, composed of W. L. Rock, W. J. Barnes and Samuel Murray, is working in hearty co-operation with the flower show management. It is an assured fact that the great Kansas City flower show will again be second to none.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

This locality was visited by a killing frost this week, that destroyed most of the outdoor flowers, which will make a better demand for cut flowers and incidentally boost prices a little. There was a shortage of white flowers the first of the week, the demand for white roses and carnations being much greater than the supply. The early chrysanthemums are coming in, and some very good stock is being cut, which is finding a ready sale at fair prices. The horse show had no perceptible effect on the trade.

Various Notes.

James Bigham has returned from a business trip to Chicago and Milwaukee.

Miss J. E. Murray says that she had a very good business this week.

A. F. Barbe has a range of the finest roses we have seen this season. He has a house that he is carrying over the second year that are fine. Mr. Barbe sells all his stock at the greenhouse to his retail trade.

Kansas City is to have a new florist establishment. C. A. Shaeffer, the proprietor of the Kansas City Floral Co., has formed a partnership with Theodore Kahma and James Bigham. They have leased a large store and basement on Walnut street, where they will do a wholesale and retail business. The ground floor will be devoted to the retail business and the wholesale department will occupy the basement. A general line of florists' supplies as well as cut flowers will be handled. Mr. Bigham, who is to be the manager of the new concern, has just returned from Chicago, where he let the contract for the installment of a large refrigerator, 9x17 feet. The retail room will be handsomely decorated and they will cater to the best trade. The firm will open for business about the twelfth of next month and will be the largest concern in the city in this line. Mr. Shaeffer is now in New York ordering stock.

Lawrence Swayger is absent from his store on account of sickness.

WITH COIL BOILER.

I have a greenhouse for bedding plants, 18x60, ten and one-half feet to the ridge, side walls four feet glass, gables glass above three feet. The house is exposed and the temperature sometimes goes down to 40 degrees below zero. I want to make a coil boiler of 1-inch pipe, as I have all the fittings and grates 24x36 inches. Kindly tell me how much pipe to use in the boiler, also how to pipe the greenhouse.

J. C. T.

Your house 18x60 should be provided with 500 feet of radiation. To supply this with 2-inch pipe will require fourteen runs of pipe the length of the house. I do not think it would be wise to attempt to construct a water heater with 1-inch pipe; 1 1/4-inch or 1 1/2-inch is small enough for this purpose. If 1-inch is to be tried, 200 lineal feet of it should be used in making the boiler to supply heat for the above house.

L. C. C.

UPRIGHT BOILER.

I have an upright steam boiler supposed to be of twenty horse-power. It is eight feet high, thirty-six inches in diameter and has eighty-five submerged 2-inch flues. I have two houses 22x100, sides five feet, ridge eleven and a half feet. Will the boiler heat these two houses where the outdoor temperature sometimes falls to zero? How low in the ground should this boiler be set to give satisfaction? If I am compelled to set the boiler nearly on the ground level will a trap return the water to the boiler? Would the boiler heat any more space than the above?

E. P. H.

The boiler in question, if worked with five pounds steam pressure, should have capacity to heat three greenhouses of the dimensions noted. Steam-traps are used only when other means fail. Use the gravity system if possible. To do this the water line of the boiler should be at least two feet below the lowest point in the radiating pipes in the greenhouses. If the main-flow pipes are carried under the ridge of the houses the water line can be worked higher than when there is less difference between the level of the supply and returns.

UP CHIMNEY MONEY

Ever had occasion to be near the top of a chimney and feel the heat going off into the air absolutely useless? Made you wonder how much of your money was going that way, didn't it?

The Burnham Boiler has a fire travel three times the boiler's length, then on this travel it comes in contact with flues so constructed as to harness all possible heat.

The deep fire pot and the extra large combustion chamber consume all available gases.

Finally—but really to start with—the Burnham is designed especially to meet greenhouse demands—and meets them.

It isn't the name on the boiler that makes the boiler good. It is the boiler that makes the name good!

THE EXHIBITIONS

NEW YORK.

The annual autumn show of the American Institute opened Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, at the Macy exhibition hall. The attendance at the opening was only fair, but enthusiastic, the entire floor space of the great hall being occupied by exhibits of uniformly high class. There were many visitors from Boston, Detroit and nearby cities and the universal verdict was that it is the best show ever seen in New York. No such collection of orchids has ever been staged in this country. The exhibitors include Lager & Hurrell, Julius Roehrs Company, Siebrecht & Son and others and the combined value of the exhibits runs into many thousands of dollars.

Some twenty leading private estates are represented by specimen plants, cut chrysanthemum blooms, etc. The chrysanthemum cut blooms are up to the usual standard, but the interest centers in the novelties exhibited by Totty, Duckham, Herrington, Pierson and others.

The chrysanthemum plants are of superb quality. They have never been shown in better form in New York. Roehrs, Siebrecht and Childs have splendid groups of palms. The F. R. Pierson Co., Bobbink & Atkins, the Cottage Gardens, Roehrs and Siebrecht show evergreens in upwards of fifty varieties. Childs has a fine group of seedling caladiums. Roehrs and Bobbink & Atkins show dracaenas and bay trees and Roehrs also has orange trees. R. Vincent, Jr., & Son, White Marsh, Md., send their usual collection of pompon chrysanthemums.

There is a small exhibit of roses, but a grand display of carnations. Guttman & Weber show Victory in fine form and Cottage Gardens stages Robert Craig. Fiancee shows up well. The Pierson Co. has Carnation Winsor in fine form.

Devoy & Son and Geo. T. Schuneman are the violet exhibitors. Weinberg has his usual group of cacti.

Of the seedsmen, A. T. Boddington, Thorburn & Co. and Marshall have extensive exhibits. There is a large display of farm products, fertilizers, nature books, etc. Harrison & Sons, Berlin, Md., have a large exhibit of fruit.

The gathering of so great an exhibit and its successful arrangement is another triumph of Dr. Hexamer's management. The advertising, however, has been weak, but it is expected that the word will go out that the show is a triumph and that the attendance will be good in the later days of the week. The awards will be announced on Thursday.

MADISON, N. J.

The tenth annual show of the Morris County Gardeners' and Florists' Society was held October 26 and 27 and from every standpoint was a great success. The attendance was better than ever before and the quality of the exhibits was superlatively high.

The premier class called for thirty-six flowers in six varieties and here the old time rivals, Wm. Duckham and A. Herrington fought it out as usual, the first prize falling to Mr. Duckham, who staged Merza, Mrs. W. Duckham, Donald McLeod, Nellie Pockett, F. S. Vallis and a new pink seedling of which more will be heard later. Mr. Herrington's exhibit, which it seemed could hardly be beat, included splendid vases of Mrs. H. Robinson, Mrs. W. Duckham, W. Duckham and Nellie Pockett.

Eighteen flowers in three varieties was won by R. Vince, gardener to R. D. Foote, with James Fraser, gardener to O. H. Kahn, second. There were magnificent flowers staged in this class also, Lady Hopetoun and W. Duckham being especially fine.

For twelve flowers in four varieties conditions were reversed and Mr. Fraser ran first, with Mr. Vince second. There were six other entries in this class.

Ten white was won by A. Herrington with Mrs. Robinson, W. McMichael, gardener for C. A. Work, being second.

Ten yellow was won by W. Duckham with Mrs. W. Duckham, A. Herrington being a very close second with a fine lot of Cheltoni.

A special prize for ten pink brought out three vases of W. Duckham that were a sight to look at. If the people who say this variety is no good could only have seen that exhibit they would have been convinced against their will. These flowers stood erect on 5-foot stems and the flowers by actual measurement were thirty inches in circumference and full to the center. The first prize went to A. Herrington, with James Fraser second.

Twelve flowers in twelve varieties was won by Mr. Fraser, as was also the vase arranged for effect, Edward Reagan coming second in the latter class.

Six flowers in six varieties was won by H. L. Hand, gardener to C. P. Chris-holm, with John Heeremans second. Mr. Hand also got first for six pinks, six white and ten flowers in five varieties, R. Halliday, John Fraser and John Heeremans running second respectively.

For six yellow, John Fraser, gardener to G. E. Kissel, Morristown, was first, with H. L. Hand second. Both these exhibitors put up F. S. Vallis and the flowers were immense.

For six flowers 1904 introduction, A. Herrington was first, with R. Vince second. Six flowers 1905 introduction, W. Duckham was first, R. Vince second. Best display of pompons, W. Duckham was first with a fine lot, M. McMullen coming second.

In the classes for commercial growers only Robert M. Schultz was first in twelve white with White Coombes, Henry Hentz first on twelve yellow with Apple-ton.

Twenty-four flowers in twenty-four varieties was a great competition, W. Duckham, A. Herrington and R. Vince running first, second and third respectively. This class, shown singly in glasses, was the most popular class in the hall and should be taken up more by other societies, as it forms a very welcome change from the long-stemmed classes. Mr. Duckham in his exhibit showed many of the novelties, Merstham Crimson, T.

Richardson, Old Gold, Dolly Glide, Mrs. H. Partridge and others, which helped him very much.

In roses, while the quantity was not extensive, the quality was very high. Eighteen Beauties was won by L. A. Noe, with L. M. Noe the winner for twelve Beauties. In twenty-five Bridesmaids, David Falconer was first, L. A. Noe second, L. B. Coddington third. In twenty-five Brides, C. M. Wagner was first, D. Falconer second and L. A. Noe third. For twelve Maids, C. Badgley was first, with L. M. Noe second, and in twelve Brides conditions were reversed. Six Maids went to H. L. Hand, John Heeremans second, and six Brides to Mr. Heeremans. For six Beauties, Mr. Duckham was first and Mr. Hand for six teas any variety, with Killarney.

Carnation classes were excellently filled this year and the quality was unsurpassed. Three kinds, twelve flowers of each, was won by R. Vince, with H. L. Hand second. Mr. Vince also won for eighteen flowers, any variety, with grand Fiancee, Cottage Gardens coming second with Robert Craig. There were twelve other entries in this class, all fine. The Farquhar silver cup for twenty-five flowers each of two varieties was won by W. Duckham, with Fiancee and White Lawson. The way Fiancee was set up proves that this variety is still peerless when properly handled.

In violets, James Fraser was first and A. Laub second on the doubles and Peter Duff first, with R. Vince second, on the singles.

Groups were a fine feature, four entries materializing. John Fraser was awarded first, John Heeremans second and R. Vince third, the chrysanthemum plants that were set up in these groups being especially noteworthy.

For three specimen plants, 12-inch pots, A. Herrington was first with a very fine lot, Mrs. Coombes being particularly good. One plant, 12-inch pot, was won by Peter Duff, with a beautiful white called Lady Lydia. Twelve 6-inch pots was won by R. Vince, with Peter Duff second. Quality here was superb. For six plants in flower, G. Reagan scored first.

In vegetables the quantity and quality were both very high, the Henderson specials being won by W. Duckham, James Fraser and John Heeremans. The Weeber & Don specials were won by John Fraser and H. L. Hand, the Thorburn special by W. Duckham.

Certificates were awarded to the following, which did not figure in the competing classes: Guttman & Weber, for Victory carnation; Charles H. Totty, for twenty varieties new chrysanthemums and Richmond rose; R. Vince and John Heeremans for hothouse grapes; F. R. Pierson Co., for cactus dahlias; Lager & Hurrell, for an orchid group; John N. May, for pompons; C. A. Work, for a Boston fern, and Dr. Ward, for a very fine davallia.

The hall was beautifully decorated, many fine palms from A. Herrington and W. Duckham being artistically arranged. Visitors included as usual the bulk of the New York wholesale section and the different representatives of the seed houses and other interests. We were also fortunate in having with us Joe Hill, of Richmond, Ind., on his wedding trip, who was greatly interested and to whom I would like to refer some of our western friends who do not think much of Duckham as a pink. Mr. Hill was "shown."

The judges were William Turner, of Oceanic, N. J.; Thomas W. Head, Groton, Conn., and Jas. Blair, Staatsburg, N. Y.
CHARLES H. TOTTY.

LENOX, MASS.

The fall show of the Lenox Horticultural Society occurred October 25 and 26 and is generally conceded to have been the best this energetic society has yet held. Competition was keen throughout and the arrangements were exceedingly well carried out.

Groups occupied the center of the hall. These are always a feature in Lenox. First prize was won by J. Heeremans, gardener to W. D. Sloane, whose arrangement reminded one of the famous groups staged at the big English shows by Cypher, of Cheltenham. Every plant seemed to be set in its right place and showed to the best advantage. The center was built up with cork bark filled with moss. A perfect Kentia Australis eight feet high formed the apex and below it quite a variety of plants were used. Close to the edge of the group were five cork stands with crotons and arecas on the tops and tradescantia and small begonias growing from each stand, W. D. Sloane had the best kentia. John Sloane won for nephrolepis and James Lanier for any other fern. For twelve flowering plants other than chrysanthemums, Girand Foster was in the lead, Mrs. R. Winthrop second. For twelve foliage plants in 6-inch pots, W. D. Sloane, Girand Foster and John Sloane won in order named. For six Begonia Lorraine, G. Foster was first and John Shields second.

There was a grand show of orchids. For a 50-foot group, W. D. Sloane won. For twelve Cattleya labiata, there were some grand specimens shown, John Sloane, Girand Foster and R. W. Patterson being the winners. For six C. labiata, W. D. Sloane was first and Charles Lanier second. John Sloane won for twelve cypripediums, J. D. Choate second. For twelve Oncidium varicosum Rogersii, J. Woodward was first with some superb plants, Girand Foster taking the lead for six plants.

Roses were very well shown, Liberty and Beauty being especially good. The prizes went to W. D. Sloane, John Sloane and Girand Foster.

THE LARGEST GREENHOUSE.

At Bedford, thirty-five miles from New York, the John Young Co. has built what is believed to be the largest single-span greenhouse in the world. The house is used exclusively for growing roses and is 54x701 feet. The actual floor space is 37,126 square feet, there are 46,808 square feet of glass in the roof, 5,049 square feet of glass and equivalent in the sides, and the gables contain 1,417 square feet of glass and equivalent, making a total of glass and equivalent exposed surface of 5,273 square feet. The cubical contents of the house amount to 569,913 cubic feet. The house is designed so as to obtain a temperature of 55 to 60 degrees inside, with an outside temperature of zero.

The house lies east and west and has two exposed gables. It is what is commonly known as three-quarter span; the eave plates on each side are about six feet high. The long span of the roof faces the south and has a pitch of 30 degrees to the horizontal. The short, or north, span has a pitch of 42 degrees.

Cissus discolor winding around it. Between these stands were banks of moss. These were covered with valley, Gypsophila elegans, Adiantum Farleyense and orchids. The gypsophila gave a very delicate touch. The edge was Farleyense fern and pandanus beautifully colored in 4-inch pots some six inches high. Not a pot could be seen in the group. All were covered with moss and appeared as if naturally growing. The arrangement was carried out in a most masterly manner and its extreme beauty arrested the immediate attention of every visitor. The second prize went to E. Jenkins, gardener to Girand Foster, and would itself have been a winner at almost any other show in America, being finely put up.

The chrysanthemum classes brought out strong competition and many very fine blooms were staged. Girand Foster was the most successful exhibitor in the cut flower section, taking eight firsts, including best thirty-six blooms, which were magnificent Wm. Duckham. Other successful exhibitors were W. D. Sloane, John Sloane, Mrs. John E. Parson, Charles Lanier, Mrs. Robert Winthrop, Mrs. F. K. Sturgis and Geo. H. Morgan. For chrysanthemum plants, the prizes went to George G. Haven, Girand Foster, R. W. Patterson, John Sloane, Mrs. J. E. Parsons, Mrs. R. C. Winthrop and Mrs. F. K. Sturgis.

new sorts were shown. The prizes went to W. D. Sloane, John Sloane, L. W. Acheson, R. W. Patterson, Charles Lanier, August Schemerhorn, G. H. Morgan, Mrs. R. Winthrop, Mrs. J. E. Parsons and Girand Foster.

The best 100 Marie Louise violets were from George H. Morgan, John Dallas gardener. Mrs. John E. Parsons won with Campbell and John Sloane for single.

The new cosmos, Lady Lenox, from A. H. Winthrop, secured a first-class certificate. The flowers are four to five inches across, of a deep pink color, a decided acquisition. Mrs. F. K. Sturgis received a diploma for a group of plants. Guttman & Weber a similar award for Carnation Victory and John Shields the same for cyclamen. E. J. Norman, of the Westinghouse estate, received a diploma for a fine collection of vegetables. There were excellent displays of fruits and vegetables. The grapes from Girand Foster, W. D. Sloane and Mrs. R. Winthrop were extra good. W. D. Curtis had pumpkins weighing 153 pounds each.

The attendance of the public was exceedingly good and there were many visitors from a distance. The judges were James Wheeler, Brookline, Mass.; Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; I. L. Powell, Millbrook, N. Y., and Walter Shaw, Huntington, L. I. W. N. CRAIG.

notable features of the structure and is described as follows in a recent issue of the Engineering Review:

The house contains eight benches and is divided into four sections by three cross walks. The main flow passes down the north walk, feeding branch flows in each cross walk, so that in reality there is a separate system for each of the four divisions.

The west end of the greenhouse has an elevation of seven feet above the east end, which gives a pitch of twelve inches to the 100 feet for the entire length of piping of the heating system, which consists of a 100 horse-power tubular boiler, located in the power house, forty feet to the north of the greenhouse, and 1¼-inch wrought iron pipe placed on the side walls and under the benches running parallel with the grade. The boiler foundation is about fifteen feet below the walk level of the greenhouse at the point of entrance of the steam main.

The heating system is fed by a 7-inch main, which is run in a trench for a distance of seventy feet, and enters at the north side of the house under the first cross walk at a point about 130 feet from the east end. From this point a 4½-inch cross walk branch is taken out of the main, which feeds the first or east division, containing twenty-three lines of 1¼-inch pipes. A

2-inch return carries the water of condensation from this division back to the return main. This is the only pipe in the house that does not pitch toward the east, i. e., follow the grade. As the first cross walk is about fifteen inches higher than the east end of the house, it was necessary for this return to dive into the grade.

From this point the main is composed of 6-inch pipe, and continues this size through the second and third divisions, being bled by 4 1/2-inch branches at the cross walks; each of these 4 1/2-inch branches or cross walk mains feeds twenty-two lines of 1 1/4-inch radiating pipes. From the third cross walk to the west end of the house, the steam main is 4 1/2-inch pipe. This feeds the last of fourth division, which is heated by twenty-three lines of 1 1/4-inch pipe.

As noted, the two end divisions, Nos. 1 and 4, are heated by twenty-three lines of 1 1/4-inch pipe and the two inside divisions, Nos. 2 and 3, are heated by twenty-two lines. This difference is made up by larger steam and return mains running through the two middle divisions, and the house is, as a whole, uniformly heated.

The main steam pipe, which is well carried on roller chairs, runs up the north side of the house in the walk, about ten inches to center above the walk level. Its expansion is taken care of by a 6-inch expansion joint situated about eight feet to the west of the third cross walk. The main is well covered with asbestos covering, having a waterproof jacket to protect it when the plants are being hosed. It is also securely anchored to prevent its rolling downhill. It is relieved of water through each of the cross walk mains, which are in turn relieved by a drip in the end connected with the main return pipe which runs down the south side of the house in the walk at a depth under the walk level of about its own diameter.

The side coils are hung on improved Lord & Burnham rafter iron clutch hangers. Each end of these side coils is securely anchored and every line is furnished with a brass expansion joint. Under each bench in the house there are two 1 1/4-inch steam pipes, connected, like the side coils, with the steam cross walk mains at the west end and to the return cross walk main at the east end. These bench lines are all anchored securely in the middle, and the expansion is taken care of by the swivel joints of the connections at the ends of the lines. The total amount of radiation in the house is about 7,062 square feet, or over three miles of 1 1/4-inch pipe in lineal feet. The valve control of the house is excellent, it being possible to run any one, all, or none at all of the fifty lines of 1 1/4-inch pipe which comprise the radiation.

The greenhouse with all its appurtenances and steam heating plant was designed, constructed and installed by the Burnham-Hitchings-Pierson Co.

A COIL HEATER.

I have three houses, one 20x80 and eight feet to the ridge, one 20x75 and twelve feet to the ridge, and one 20x100 eight feet high. The ends are glass but the walls are partly protected. The climate is that of the District of Columbia. I have a coil boiler which I have used two winters but it does not work quite right. It contains seventy 1 1/4-inch pipes eight feet long, with 3-inch manifolds. There are five layers of pipes over the fire space and two layers in the draft space. Some of the tubes look badly burned and in two places water drips where the scales have been knocked off. Would you risk this heater another year? I have the city water connected with the return and the hot water backs up into it some ways. Would it be better to have an expansion tank on the flow pipe? F. J. K.

I doubt if it would be safe to go into winter depending upon a boiler in the condition you mention. It may be, however, that only few of the tubes in the boiler are injured, in which case they might be cut out and others put in with long screw connections. The plan of connecting the returns with the city pressure is a good one where the pressure does not exceed thirty to forty pounds. If the pipes are properly graded there should be very little heating up of the pipe connecting the water with the boiler. If you decide to get a new boiler it should have a capacity to heat 2,000 feet of radiation. Your houses should have about 1,700 feet and a boiler to heat this should have a rated capacity for at least 2,000 feet of radiation.

HARRISII.

Please tell us when Harrisii lilies should be planted for next Easter. What kind of soil should be used, size of pot for 5x7 bulbs, and how should they be treated? A. J. B.

Lilium Harrisii should be potted just as soon as the bulbs are received, for if they are exposed to the air for a protracted period they deteriorate quickly and seem to lose in vitality. For 5x7 bulbs for a first pot use 4-inch and pot firmly, placing the bulb deep enough in the pot so that it is just covered. They do well in an ordinary rose soil which has been composted during the summer. This compost should consist of five parts good, fibrous loam and one part decomposed cow manure, thoroughly incorporated.

Immediately after potting they should be well watered and placed in a pit, plunging the pots in some such material as ashes or sand, and covered beyond the reach of frost.

To get them into bloom for Easter without having to resort to hard forcing they should be brought into the house at least sixteen weeks before that date and placed in a house with a temperature of 50 degrees, but it is useless to try to force them if they have not been potted sufficiently long to have made good roots.

As soon as the stems attain a length of four inches they should be put into the flowering pots and potted deep enough to cover at least one inch of the stem. These flowering pots should be Cross Section of Large Greenhouse of the John Young Co., Showing Benches and Branch Steam Mains.

6-inch or 7-inch, according to the strength of the plant. The compost should be the same as that previously used and a 4-inch pot of bone meal added to each bushel of the compost. Drain well and pot firmly. Gradually increase the temperature till it reaches 60 degrees at night, with a day temperature of 75 degrees during bright weather.

These plants are greatly benefited by an application of liquid manure during the growing season, especially during the period of bud formation, and until the buds show color, when it should be discontinued. Keep the plants clean and do not let green-fly get a hold, as they are very destructive to this class of plants, and do not let them suffer for want of water. RIBES.

THE RETAIL

FLORIST.....

A LARGE LUNCHEON TABLE.

In answer to an inquiry for a decorative scheme for a large round luncheon table for a musical society, the following might be suggested:

Although the decoration must be high, it need not necessarily be dense nor heavy, but light enough to admit of at least a partial view across the table. If chrysanthemums, cosmos or carnations can be used, make a large ball of a solid color, or a number of colors shaded gradually one into the other, and suspend from an overhanging chandelier, if such is found over the table. If not, erect a tripod of heavy gilded wire in the center of the table, and suspend the ball from the inside, at a convenient distance above the table. At the base of each of the three wires of the tripod set a small plaque filled with fairly long-stemmed flowers and green to correspond with the flowers used in the ball. If the ball can be suspended from a chandelier, start delicate strands of asparagus or smilax from a point over the ball to each place, and trace a tiny lyre with the smilax sprays where each strand terminates. The ball might also be made of violets, if expense is not too great and the small lyres traced by a single line of violet flowers cut short and laid on the cloth inside of each place.

If a vase arrangement is preferred, have a very large, tall vase in the center, with a circle of small vases about it, one at each place. Two or three or half a dozen flowers, as the case requires, might be placed in each small vase, the color and kind of flowers corresponding with the center bouquet. Connect each vase in the outside circle with the large vase in the center by sprays of green, not drawn very tight, but decidedly enough to show the idea.

A more rustic effect would be a loose, large group of chrysanthemums, autumn leaves and cosmos in a very large jardiniere or a number of jardinieres grouped together, the outside hidden with fern leaves or banked up with sheet moss. Around the outside stretch an enclosure of gilded wire netting close around the group of jardinieres so that the flowers and foliage may hang outwards over the edge of the wire, like apple boughs over the orchard fence. Scatter flowers and ferns carelessly about the table outside of this centerpiece.

Here is a seasonable design: Select a large number of very long-stemmed chrysanthemums. Spread out the lower ends of the stems to resemble the frame work of a wigwam. Bring the heads together at the top and tie with wire. Afterwards make a number of rosettes of satin ribbon with one streamer to each rosette. Fasten these rosettes closely enough around the wire to make a continuous row around under the chrysanthemum flowers. The ribbon ends will fall and may be fastened on the table to form the covering of the wigwam in between the stems. Carve out pumpkins to resemble handle baskets and fill with chrysanthemums or cosmos like baskets. Place these at convenient intervals around the table in a circle around the wigwam.

A more elaborate piece might be constructed as follows: Bank up a mass of sphagnum high in the center of the table. Protect the table with a pan of some kind to keep dampness off the table. Cover the sphagnum bank with ferns or sheet moss to represent a hill. Around the base of the hill set in four or six pans of water. Line the pans with gravel or moss and cover the edges with moss. Place a few gold fish in each pan, and fill up the spaces between the pans with small ferns or cut flowers in concealed vases. On the edge of the pans in several places lay small birch bark canoes with a few flowers or ferns lying loosely over the sides.

One more will complete our list: Hang a large basket of flowers and ferns from a tripod as described above. Fill small baskets with flowers to correspond with the center one, and place in front of each place, and connect each small basket with the center by a spray of green or a band of ribbon.

In any case extra care should be taken to protect the table and the cover, if a cover is used. After such a table is set, it is a nice job to place the decorations without displacing the silver or soiling the linen. The more dexterous we can become in this respect, the better it will be for our reputation, for all too often the careless decorator brings the business into disfavor with patrons and caterers by making extra cleaning necessary at the last minute. This is not a case where a "carpenter is known by his chips." GERTRUDE BLAIR.

CARNATION NOTES.—WEST.

Heat, Water and Air.

Now that you have your carnation supports in place, the beds all mulched and everything in trim condition, the heaviest part of the season's work is done. Henceforth your time and attention will be taken up with the more pleasant but equally important work of keeping the plants in good health, by giving them the right amount of water, air and heat. These three the plants must have and on the amount of one of these the plants get will largely depend the quantity required of the other two. As we can easily regulate the water supply and the ventilation, we must gauge ourselves almost entirely by the amount of sunlight and sun heat we get, over which we have not the least control. When there is lots of sunlight the plants want plenty of water and plenty of fresh air, but when the sun hides its face the plants grow slower, evaporation is slower and less water is needed. Fresh air is always beneficial.

As I said before, you cannot control the sunlight; neither can you produce a substitute. True, you can fire up and keep the temperature up to just where the carnation likes it, but it will not have the same effect on the plants as the same amount of heat produced by the sun. You can hang strong artificial lights in your houses, but their effect will not be the same as sunlight. Our scientists have not as yet been able to produce a substitute for sunlight. When that is accomplished flowers will become cheaper.

Out in the open these same things produce the weather, and each must be considered, but inside the greenhouse we regulate the supply of each, except the sun, and as we cannot regulate it, we must allow it to regulate us. Bear this in mind later on, when the days are cloudy and your buds refuse to open as rapidly as you would like them to. You can force them out faster by firing a little stronger, but only at the expense of your plants; whereas, the sun will do the same thing for you and improve the plants in health as well.

How much more valuable an experienced florist would be for a fireman during these nights, when fire heat is really needed only part of the time. To try to explain all these finer points to a green hand is like showing him a Chinese puzzle. He has all he can do to run the fire and to remember all the valves, etc., and so you must help him out on the other points. Have some experienced man handy so he can be called upon for advice when necessary, as experience counts for everything when trouble comes, and trouble does put in its appearance occasionally on the best regulated places.

There will be many nights in the next few weeks when you will have to run steam around and keep the ventilators up a little. An experienced man will know how far to go with this. It would be foolish to keep the steam around all night and keep the ventilators up six inches. That would be wasting fuel. Open them about an inch or two and then run the steam around often enough to keep the temperature up to the mark or a little above. On a damp night this will be better than to allow the temperature to drop very low. The moisture will not gather in the house as readily and the various leaf-spot diseases will not start so easy. Two or three degrees higher than the regular cold weather temperature will not hurt the plants if there is air on, but don't do it with the ventilators closed. A. F. J. BAUR.

ENCHANTRESS.

In practically all American cut flower markets Enchantress, strictly on its merits, is making better prices than any other carnation which is offered in quantity. Speaking of the cut flower market in London an English writer says: "Enchantress is the leading feature in carnations. This variety is very fine and captures the highest class trade. Some superb blooms are on the market. It has every promise of being the leading carnation for a very long time to come."

TROUBLE WITH ENCHANTRESS.

I am sending you a bud of Enchantress and would be glad to have you tell me what is the trouble with it. Many of the flowering shoots dry up and many young shoots curl at the end. What can I do to save them? C. D. J.

I cannot tell you a great deal about your case; I have not enough to work on. The shoot you sent has a few spots of fairy-ring, but not enough to cause the bud to blast and dry up. The shoot has the appearance of having been out in frosty weather. In such case we have seen buds blast after being housed. Not knowing when your plants were housed, I cannot say whether that is the cause of your trouble or not.

I would advise you to remove all the spotted leaves and the stems that have blasted buds on them and burn them. Then dust your plants with a mixture of air-slaked lime and sulphur in equal portions. Also paint a steam pipe with this, after adding enough water to make a thick paint. Leave the dust on the plants several days; in fact, you need not syringe it off at all unless you have to syringe for spider. When you water do it early in the day and wet the foliage as little as possible. Give plenty of air and don't neglect firing on cool nights, even if you have to run a crack of air in order to keep down the temperature. You want to keep the air dry and circulating.

We have never seen the young shoots on Enchantress curl up, but we have seen it on other varieties, particularly on Mrs. Joost. This usually appears soon after they are housed and have just taken a new hold. The first new shoots will come curled and appear to stick together. This I think is caused by the soil in the new quarters being a great deal richer than that in which they had been growing, causing an abnormal growth. After the plants become thoroughly established this will disappear. Run them a little on the dry side for a time, to slacken their pace a little. You will also notice this more on late planted stock than on that planted earlier. A sudden activity in growth after a check will bring it on as a rule. A. F. J. BAUR.

THE WELLS-POCKETT SET OF 1904.

The criticism that has been given Merstham Yellow, and in some quarters evidently with good reason, leads us to see how other kinds sent out with it are behaving now that they are more generally distributed and are being subjected to the different soils and treatments of different growers.

Chief, perhaps, is Mrs. Wm. Duckham. This variety won the C. S. A. cup last year and so far this season has made good with every grower whom I have spoken to. It is as hard as nails and not a petal has damped in a notoriously bad season. This good qualification, combined with its fine dwarf habit and excellent stem, is making it a great favorite in the east with commercial as well as exhibition growers.

Another one that is very satisfactory is Merstham Red. This variety I have seen exhibited several times the past week, with a broad reflexed petal showing splendid color, and it can be confidently recommended as an all-round good red and is showing up far ahead of last year. Some flowers at Madison, N. J., last week had petals considerably over an inch in width.

Mrs. H. A. Allen, sent out only as an exhibition variety, is not satisfactory on the whole. Some very fine flowers are around and the deep color is telling but it evidently wants a long season of growth and liberal feeding.

Mrs. J. A. Miller, a variety Mr. Teilmann speaks of last week as being poor with him, is very fine indeed with me, and some splendid cut blooms have been shown the past week and also on 6-inch pot plants. Miller is grand in foliage, stem and size of flower. The only fault I find with it is its earliness. I exhibited it in splendid condition on October 9, before the New York Florists' Club, and at that early date it was of exhibition size and finish, and much deeper in color than last year.

J. H. Doyle, somewhat on the Miller order for color, is also finishing very finely and I think will be set up in very good shape next week. It is a slow grower and has a habit of making buds early in the season instead of growing on nicely, but aside from that, it is a good variety.

Other imported varieties largely planted are Valerie Greenham, Emily Mileham, Mrs. D. V. West and Mrs. Swinburne. West has done splendidly and has more than lived up to its past as an exhibition flower. Everyone likes it and it is, perhaps, the largest white we have today. Emily Mileham has not done well. Why I cannot say. Some beautiful flowers can be seen in 6-inch pots but early planted stock has not nearly come up to expectations as compared with last year. Too bad, for the color is very pure. Greenham has produced the largest flower I have seen this year and is here to stay. The stock as imported was evidently mixed with another pink, or else it is a case of reversion, since in some lots a percentage of plants made a poor, miserable growth, but Greenham true is a very fine variety. Mrs. Swinburne as a late white is going to prove a valuable commercial variety. It should be taken on a September bud, as the early crowns are all damped, while the late crown is finishing finely.

Committees on Seedlings.

President Duckham has announced the committees to examine seedlings and sports on dates as follows: November 4, 11, 18 and 25, 1905.

Exhibits to receive attention from the committees must in all cases be prepaid to destination, and the entry fee of $2 should be forwarded to the secretary not later than Tuesday of the week preceding examination, or may accompany the blooms. Special attention is called to the rule requiring that sports to receive a certificate must pass three committees.

The wood should be immersed in water as soon as possible after being taken from the plant to prevent wilting and should not be allowed to stand too long therein before being "made" and put in the bench.

RIBES.

A NEW PINK RAMBLER.

The demand for rambling roses is so great in these days of pergolas, arbors, pillars, and arches of roses that numbers of very fine varieties have been raised and placed on the market to meet it. Among rambling roses, as among all other things, there is ever room for something extra fine, or very distinct, and on these grounds there is room for the new Mrs. F. W. Flight. This is a wonderful rose, says the Gardeners' Magazine, and so exceptionally robust that it succeeds in places and under conditions where other varieties make but a poor show. But it is not simply robust in the sense that it produces growths with the vigor of a Crimson Rambler that finds itself at home, and clothed with ample foliage. It is robust also in that it flowers with a freedom not common even among such free-flowering plants as roses. Its big trusses of flowers are particularly large, and well filled with flowers two and one-half inches across, and of a delightful bright rose-pink shade. The flowers are semi-double, and do not fall to pieces quickly, as is the case with those varieties in which the doubling is less advanced. Thirty such flowers on one truss of bloom is of quite common occurrence, that number being seen on the sprays shown during the summer by Messrs. W. Cutbush & Son, Highgate, who are the distributors of this highly meritorious novelty.

The new rose is a seedling and its parents are Crimson Rambler and The Garland, according to the Gardeners' Magazine, from which we reproduce

PREPARING FOR PROPAGATING.

As the time for propagating draws near every provision should be made so that there may be no delay at that busy season. Very rarely do we find a house of Brides or Bridesmaids that are not more or less of a mixture. Now there is no reason why this should be so, as a little care and attention during the few weeks previous to propagating will effect a remedy and get the young stock true to name.

During the season of propagating the chances are that a small percentage of the plants will not be in bloom and this will make it impossible to determine the variety if there is a mixture on the bench, so the safest course is to go over the benches every day and place a prominent tag wherever the mixture is observed. Were this done season after season there would be less complaints in regard to mixed stock.

It must be a disappointment to many growers when, after planting a house of young stock, to find when they begin to show bloom that a large percentage of them are not of the variety ordered. There are, no doubt, some firms who take particular care to put out stock true to name, but, unfortunately, there are others.

In the selection of suitable wood for propagating purposes great care should be taken to have it of the proper condition of ripeness in order to make a "good strike." The best wood can be the accompanying illustration of a truss of flowers. There is no question whatever that this is the rambling rose of the year, and it is very probable that in a few years it will be as widely grown as Crimson Rambler.

TEAS OUTDOORS.

I have been growing some tea roses outdoors in southern Kansas this summer, equal to any grown in greenhouses, but I want some information as to their care in winter. Can I take them up and store them in a cold frame or cellar through the winter and set them out in the spring? Please tell me how to treat them.

A. T. B.

With such a salubrious climate as yours I do not think there will be any necessity for lifting the tea roses during the winter, as they can withstand 20 degrees of frost without injury when they are in a dormant state. However, it might be safest to lift and store a part of them and experiment.

They should be thoroughly ripe before being lifted and then heeled in in a pit or cellar where they would not be exposed to draughts. The material used for heeling in should be moderately dry, just moist enough to keep the bark on the roots from shriveling. Plant out as soon as danger of frost is past.

RIBES.

VIOLETS IN DESIGNS.

It seems to me that growers of violets who have a good retail trade at home could greatly increase that trade by devising new and original combinations in design work for funerals, etc. In spite of what are used at present, still there is a preponderance of roses, carnations and the regulation assortment of stiff set pieces.

If you do not readily think of new combinations, keep a sharp eye out for cards of all sorts, Christmas, New Year's, birthday, etc.; photographs and, in fact, pictures of many kinds. Artists are plentiful nowadays and you can get many suggestions in this way that can be applied to violets as well as other flowers. Again, if a customer comes in with an idea, don't scoff or advise something easier, for you may find out to your astonishment before you are done that you have not only pleased your customer but received a new idea or so yourself. For example: A lady came into a store one day saying that she had seen at one time one of Prang's chromo cards of a bunch of callas with violet all through and wanted a bunch fixed just like that. When it was finished, with sprays of violets arranged loosely and carried between and around the callas, it made a pleasing change from the usual arrangements. This particular way may be old to some, but it is doubtless new to many, as it was to this florist.

I believe you will find it a good plan to try and vary your style of making pieces from week to week, so as to have them ever different and not have every piece coming from your establishment easily recognizable from their looks, as though they all came out of the same mold. Try lettering a pillow diagonally and filling the lower triangle caused by so doing with violets, using something lighter for the upper corner, again bordering the lettering panel with them; sometimes where there is no lettering make it solidly of violets, with a spray of carnations, roses or orchids, with adiantum, tied with ribbon to harmonize, laid over the top. Of course you must be sure to have just the right tint in flower and ribbon or the whole thing is killed.

It does seem as if there is not much chance for originality nowadays in design work, yet you can, with study, make constant little changes that will give your customers an impression of newness, even if not strictly new. All this is somewhat off the subject of violets, but unless your trade is entirely wholesale it has its bearing on your business, especially on your pocketbook, for of course there is more to be made, in putting out your violets the most of the season in such ways than there is in the bunch trade, unless you have more wealthy customers than many of us have, and with the winters that we have been having lately you have to sell many a thousand to keep the boilers full of coal, to say nothing about having anything left over at the coming of summer.

FICUS PANDURATA.

The strong growth and massive foliage of this fine ficus are well shown in the accompanying illustration, which gives some idea of the decorative value of this comparatively new species. As indicated by the specific name, the leaves of this plant have some resemblance in outline to the body of a fiddle, and one of the strong features of the plant is found in the tough texture of its foliage, from which it has proved to be an excellent house plant, enduring dust and draughts with almost as much impunity as an aspidistra.

Tops of this ficus may be mossed and rooted just as readily as those of the common Ficus elastica, and when rooted will flourish under the same conditions as its better known relative, but the cut back plants do not break away quite so freely, and consequently the propagation of Ficus pandurata is somewhat slower than that of the ordinary rubber.

This is a plant that occupies a good deal of space, and consequently must bring a good price to the grower, but there are some of the prominent retail dealers who see its possibilities and are willing to pay the price for good specimens.

MEALY BUGS.

I have a house of coleus and ferns in which there are mealy bugs. I have tried lime, tobacco and washing, but they quickly come again. What will clean them out? C. W. W.

Mealy bugs may be killed on the plants in question by frequent fumigations with Nico-fume paper, this being a nicotine preparation, and is much more effective than fumigating with tobacco, without the danger of scorching the plants. From twelve to fourteen pieces of the prepared paper may be used in a greenhouse 20x100 feet without injury to ferns, and if the foliage of the plants is wet at the time the smoking is done the operation will be more successful than if the house is dry. But one smoking will not kill all the insects, and it may have to be repeated several times. The liquid solutions of nicotine are also effective for this pest, but are somewhat more costly. W. H. TAPLIN.

VINCA MINOR.

Last spring I planted some myrtle, sample enclosed, on a cemetery lot. The parties wish me to protect it for the winter. What is the best way to do it? We have very cold weather, 10 to 20 degrees below zero. F. H. P.

The best protection for the vinca, or creeping myrtle, as it is commonly called, is to cover the plants ere severe freezing weather, with a coating of leaves. Some spruce boughs or light boards can be laid over these to keep them from blowing away, or if the space to be covered is not large, make a box covering of matched boards to put over the leaves. Give this a coat of green paint. It will look neat and last for a number of years. English ivy can be treated similarly. W. N. CRAIG.

LETTUCE.

There is no one in this vicinity growing vegetables under glass and there is a good opportunity to make money in this line. I intend planting one house with lettuce. As I do not know anything of its culture I should be glad to have you give some information as to the night temperature, how far apart the plants should be set and how long it takes to grow a crop. E. S.

The night temperature of a lettuce house should range from 40 to 45 degrees, according to the outdoor conditions. By this I mean that under the milder conditions of weather 45 degrees would be about right, but in severe weather it is better to run the house at 40 degrees rather than cause too dry an atmosphere. Lettuce is much more easily grown in solid beds than in raised benches, or, better still, right in the ground when this is composed of good soil. Here they have the advantage of natural moisture from below and can be kept in a healthy condition with less frequent watering. The less frequent application of water to the surface of the soil eliminates to a considerable degree the danger from fungous diseases.

The distance apart will depend on the variety grown. The Boston Market or Tennis Ball type can be planted about eight inches apart, but larger growers would require a little more space. The type above mentioned, however, is generally conceded to be the most satisfactory to grow for a greenhouse crop where a head lettuce is wanted. The best and easiest grown variety is Grand Rapids, but as this does not head it is not so easily disposed of. Personally I would prefer it to any other for table use, as it is invariably crisp, tender and sweet. But the majority of lettuce buyers, at least in the east, prefer a head lettuce, and it is hard to drive them out of the old rut. In pushing anything else they are apt to think you are playing the "just as good" joke on them.

From ten to twelve weeks is necessary for the maturing of the crop from time of sowing. The gain in time can be principally effected in the growing of the plants up to the time they are large enough to set in the benches. Given ideal conditions, with good, fresh seed that will start quickly and strong, cutting may begin with some of the largest in ten weeks from time of sowing, but a week more should be allowed for the maturing of the majority of the crop, and if any little setback should occur a week longer still will be necessary. W. S. CROYDON.

A POOR COMBINATION.

This year I threw out my violets at Memorial day and planted tomatoes, with the result of a good crop. I should like to put in one bed of tomatoes in March and fill the other beds with stocks and candytuft for Memorial day. Do you think the tomatoes would be a success with the flowers mentioned if I hand-fertilize the tomatoes? R. S. B.

I do not think stocks, candytuft and tomatoes would be a very desirable combination. There is no reason why the tomatoes would not do in such company as long as the proper temperature can be maintained, but I would not vouch for satisfactory results if the temperature was run much below 65 degrees. This, in my opinion, is about 10 degrees too high for the stocks and candytuft. With some things you might be able to strike an intermediate condition, but I don't think the tomatoes would stand for it, and I am afraid a temperature of 65 degrees would so weaken the growth of the stocks and candytuft that you would have poor results with your flowers. W. S. CROYDON.

GRAPES UNDER GLASS.

I should be glad to have advice as to what can be done to get good color in Black Hamburg grapes grown in the greenhouse. Some of the bunches have grapes of a good color and some only look red. They are all on the same side of the house and in the same soil. The vines are in first-class order and have from twenty to thirty pounds of fruit on each. The plants are forty years old. J. B. A.

This is one of the cases where it is hard for the doctor to prescribe without seeing the patient, so many different conditions tend to prevent the proper coloring of grapes: wrong atmospheric conditions, temperature, lack of moisture at the roots, an overabundance of moisture, lack of proper drainage, overcropping and a hundred and one other things would produce the condition described. But seeing that the vines are forty years old and grown under artificial conditions, I have no doubt that the trouble lies with the roots, and if the vines were mine I would not hesitate a moment in throwing them out, renewing my soil and replanting with young vines. You seem to think your vines are in good condition. It is surprising how fresh and healthy a vine will look as far as growth and foliage are concerned with the roots in an unhealthy condition, but it will always tell on the fruit. I took hold of an old grapery a few years ago in which much the same conditions prevailed as you describe, and in turning it out I was astonished to see the state of the roots. The soil, through constant watering and the annual adding of manure, together with the want of the sweetening influence of frost, had got into a very bad state; the roots were in a black, half-dead condition, and it was really surprising where the vines got the support to keep them in as healthy condition as they were.

If you do not want to go to the trouble of renewing, you may be able to help them a good deal by taking away about six inches of the surface soil and replacing it with fresh material. In this way you may be able to draw some roots to the surface, where they will maintain a more healthy condition and where feeding can be accomplished with better effect. Don't use too strong a compost until you get your roots working. After this use wood ashes freely to supply potash, which is one of the most necessary ingredients in the production of good fruit. W. S. CROYDON.

ADAM GRAHAM, BANKER.

When the Society of American Florists met in Cleveland, in 1896, under the presidency of William Scott, of Buffalo, the members cast about for Ohio's leading member as his successor. The call naturally fell to Adam Graham, who was one of the charter members and a veteran of the craft. There are few more popular members than Mr. Graham. His presence is looked for at each annual gathering, and, although no longer in so vigorous health as in the days when he did his greatest work for floriculture, still he is counted a regular attendant and none enjoys the renewal of old acquaintances more than he.

Adam Graham was born at Dunfermline, Scotland, in 1840. His parents emigrated to America in 1850, locating at Philadelphia. Mr. Graham's first employment in the trade was at Peter McKenzie's establishment under Alexander Craig, the father of Robert Craig. After spending several years there Mr. Graham went to Dr. Rush's place, where fortune made him assistant to James Eadie. After three years there he took charge of Gen. Patterson's establishment where he remained for another three years, relinquishing the position to go to Cleveland to lay out a property for J. H. Wade, one of Cleveland's leading citizens, with whom he remained for seventeen years. When he left it was to go into business for himself. This was twenty-five years ago. Being a thorough plantsman and possessing the Scottish predilection for a square deal, he soon established a prosperous business. A number of years ago he admitted his son, A. H. Graham, to partnership and the firm has since been known as A. Graham & Son. They have a handsome store at 1263 Euclid avenue, the greenhouses being on the site, opposite Lake View cemetery, which Mr. Graham chose for his first venture a quarter of a century ago.

Besides being an ex-president and active worker in the S. A. F., Mr. Graham has been president of the local Florists' Club and president and for several years treasurer of the local branch of the St. Andrew's Scottish Benevolent Association. Aside from his many business connections as a florist, Mr. Graham has for some years been vice-president of the Reserve Trust Co., a rich and well known local banking establishment in which he holds a considerable interest and of which he has just been elected president. He is also vice-president of the Adams Bag Co., a prosperous paper bag factory in Cleveland.

NEWPORT, R. I.End of the Season.

Newport's season is a short one—that is the weeks when the full swing is on, and society's fashionable entertainments are at their height—it is the fourth of July when they all get here, and after the horse show, which always opens Labor day, the summer places close rapidly for the winter. Of course a great many of the cottagers come much earlier, and many estates are open until Thanksgiving, but the season's gayety is at its best through the hot days of July and August. This is our harvest time, and every effort is made the rest of the year to have plenty of stock ready for the "Avenue" people.

Besides our own florists there are four New York firms that have branch establishments here for these summer months, namely, Leikens, Siebrecht & Son, Wadley & Smythe, and J. M. Hodgson, Inc. But in a good season there is business enough for all, as when Newport is entertaining an enormous amount of stock and much expert labor is required in a very short time. The season just past has been fairly good, but it has now been several years since we have had a real boom summer.

The Market.

At the end of the summer season there is always a dull time before the regular all-the-year-round fall and winter trade starts in. We have been having such gorgeous weather for the past month that, except for the usual wedding and funeral orders, there has been very little doing, especially as we have had no frost to do any harm as yet, which still leaves every one with plenty of garden blooms and reduces the florists' cut flower trade to small limits. A good hard frost, which may be expected any day now, will change all this and make the craft again happy.

Violets and chrysanthemums have appeared and they always freshen up things and start up the cut flower business for the autumn. We try to get $1.50 and $2 per hundred for Marie Louise and Princess of Wales violets, putting them up in bunches of all sizes. Mums start at $1 a dozen and go to $5 for the very best. Of course, at present we have only a few early sorts. Roses fetch from $1.50 a dozen to $6 for the very choicest long-stemmed American Beauty that the craft get from

Carl Jurgens. Carnations are now coming better both in size of flower and length of stem and bring 60 cents to $1 a dozen. Dahlias are about the only outdoor stuff there is now any demand for, and these are such a flood that 50 cents a dozen is the limit. We noticed a little very nice mignonette.

Horticultural Society.

The meetings of our society have lately been better attended, as through the summer months our members are so busy that it is almost impossible to get together a large gathering. As winter draws near it is always planned to have some subject of interest discussed at each meeting. Joseph Gibson has been asked to prepare a paper for the next meeting on "Landscape Art, Past and Present."

Since our last regular exhibition some very worthy exhibits have been made. John Marshall, the manager of the Bythessea Greenhouses, exhibited several very promising seedling carnations; the committee requested Mr. Marshall to exhibit these again later in the season, when an award will be made. A very interesting exhibit was made by David McIntosh, consisting of some branches of cockspur hawthorn, Crataegus Crusgalli. This hawthorn at this season of the year makes a fine show, being covered with large and brilliant red berries. Its long thorns and bushy growth adapt it well for hedging.

The following persons have been recently chosen to active membership: Miss M. C. Codman, Mrs. Hamilton Fish Webster, Frank L. Peckham, Mr. and Mrs. De Lancey Kane, and James Sharkey.

Various Notes.

F. L. Zeigler has for several weeks been making an exhibit of some fifty sorts of dahlias in his show windows, which has attracted much attention, and resulted in many orders.

C. Peirce, of Dighton, Mass., has also had a collection of cactus, show and fancy dahlias on exhibition at Barney's music store, booking many orders for 1906.

The commercial fruit growing business of Charles Stark, Jr., who for many years has leased the greenhouses of the William Findlay estate and raised nectarines, grapes, peaches, melons and tomatoes, has been given up. Mr. Stark has gone to California.

Siebrecht & Son, after a very satisfactory season, have closed their Bellevue avenue establishment for the winter. Ralph Armstrong, their manager, reports a fine business in renting large bays, palms and other foliage plants; in fact, they placed for the season all they brought from their New Rochelle nurseries. Their increasing business demands many store improvements for the summer of 1906, among which will be a much larger ice-box and a new concrete floor.

Outdoor-grown melons have blighted so badly for several years in this section that many growers have given up trying to raise them. It is pleasing to note that Ritchie's Greenhouses have succeeded in ripening a nice lot, including Miller's Cream, Emerald Gem, Extra Early, Hackensack and Improved Christiana.

The seedsmen are all having their fall sales of plants. Palms, rubber plants, ferns and a few other kinds sell very well at this season and help out the bulb trade. The small plants go the best, 50 cents to $1 being about the limit. Quite a run on the new Scott fern is the florists' report.

H. L. De Blois and wife have for the past ten days been taking a vacation trip to New York and Washington. Mr. De Blois represents J. M. Thorburn & Co., of New York, here.

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market was in crescendo last week. This week it is in diminuendo. Thursday, Friday and Saturday saw a steady stiffening in prices. Sunday was just a trifle weaker than Saturday because there was a limit on what the southern All Saints' day shipping orders would stand. Monday was still weaker in spite of short supplies, because of decreasing demand and Tuesday and Wednesday saw the market returning to the conditions which prevailed prior to the recent flurry. The horse show week was certainly one of the most active this market has ever seen at this season, with supplies not large and entirely inadequate to the demand. Where orders were filled in full it was only at the expense of rejecting others entirely. There was no limit to prices except the limit at which the buyers could no longer use the stock.

All Saints' day shipments went out on Sunday. These were as large as ever, if not a little larger. The bulk of the business went out on the 6 o'clock train on Sunday night and made a full car-load of cut flowers. Some stock went Saturday night and a second shipment Monday, so that the business cut a large figure. There was the opportunity to have done a great deal more had the stock been available and prices where the buyers could have used quantities. There was hardly an item on which it was possible to supply all needs, chrysanthemums being more nearly equal to the demand than anything else. White roses were very hard to get and white carnations have seldom brought higher prices for the lower grades.

The present week began with cold, dark, dismal weather and has had the effect of retarding production. Growers report that there is little immediate prospect of large increase in the carnation cuts but that roses are well under way with new crops, which are already affecting the market. Chrysanthemums have not yet become over-abundant, although each week it has appeared that the next one would see an inundation. It still appears so. The mid-season varieties are now coming in and some fine flowers are seen. Top prices are $3 to $4 a dozen, and all grades are bringing exceptionally good prices, especially the small flowers.

Since the horse show the demand for violets has fallen away. There is now plenty of lily of the valley. Callas are frequently seen and Harrisii lilies are no longer so scarce as they have been for the past month. Cattleyas are equal to all demands. A number of growers are pretty well cut out on smilax and an advance in price is noted. Plumosus in bunches is also shortening in supply.

The Million Dollar Show.

All over town there are signs announcing the "million dollar flower show" of next week. It will be a big affair. Plenty of exhibits are assured and new features will be numerous, including exhibits of good back yard planting, window boxes, popular lectures, restaurant, etc. The list of committees is a long one and includes many who have not been active before. Many new premiums are announced in the supplementary list just out.

Visiting florists will be cared for by the following committee: J. P. Degnan, care of E. F. Winterson Co., 45 Wabash; John Poehlmann, care Pohlmann Bros. Co., 35 Randolph; E. C. Amling, 32 Randolph; C. W. Scott, care Vaughan's Seed Store, 84 Randolph; Arnold Ringier, care W. W. Barnard Co., 163 Kinzie; John Zeeh, care Zeeh & Mann, 51 Wabash; C. W. McKellar, 51 Wabash; James Harts-lorne, Joliet, Ill., or 45 Wabash; A. C. Spencer, care Peter Reinberg, 51 Wabash; C. L. Washburn, care Bassett & Washburn, 78 Wabash. The committee wishes it stated that if trade visitors will call on any of the above before going to the show they will be fixed up with tickets. A banquet is planned, probably for Thursday night.

Various Notes.

The wholesalers are almost unanimous in deploring the recent flurry in prices, several saying that they believe the injury done the market, could it be measured in dollars, would far exceed the gain. When, as happened, the price of carnations is doubled between two issues of the REVIEW it is sure to cause many complaints from surprised and uncomprehending buyers. Then, too, there is always a point above which it is folly to go, for buying stops. Last Friday any really good carnation was worth 3 cents but on Saturday, when 4 cents was demanded, several houses found that they had gone too far; the buyers simply turned away. Then, too, the effect is bad in the retail end. A customer goes into a retail store and finds that carnations which a week ago were 50 cents a dozen are now, without apparent reason, 75 cents or $1; he not only doesn't buy but it is probably several weeks, perhaps months, before he again ventures into a flower store.

When G. H. Pieser, of the Kennicott Bros. Co., was at Rhinebeck, N. Y., the other Saturday night, he held an impromptu levee at the hotel. It was registration day and, as word of his presence was passed around, by twos and threes the growers dropped in to pay their respects and learn about the western violet market. Mr. Pieser was the second Chicago wholesaler to visit the Hudson river violet district, W. E. Lynch, of Hunt's, having preceded him a year. The violet growers must at least have gained the idea that Chicago wholesalers are well fed.

Among the growers who will add extensively to their glass next spring is J. A. Budlong. The eight remaining old houses will be taken down and replaced by new structures and all the remaining vacant ground in their block will be built up, there being room for seven new houses, the dwelling of Mr. Budlong and Phil Shoup being moved across the street to clear the square for glass.

John Schoepfle had a fine decoration at the Masonic Temple October 26, for Waubansia Lodge, A. F. and A. M. It called for cut flowers, plants, etc., in quantity and the effect was notable.

Carl Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., is doing a two weeks' term of jury service.

N. J. Wieter says that if nothing happens to a certain batch of Yellow Eaton in the next four days he will show the visitors to the Coliseum what that variety is like at its best. He also has Balfour fine. Wieter Bros. will stage 500 mums.

E. F. Francis, formerly with D. Wood Brant, is now with Vaughan & Sperry, where increasing receipts make work for more hands to do.

The Ernst Wienhoeber Co. has distributed its engagement book for the social season of 1905-6. The work is of the best character and the advertising value, placed in right hands, is so great that the book is an annual feature.

Bassett & Washburn are cutting very fine Appleton and Morel chrysanthemums.

Mrs. R. Hilmers, 190 E. Forty-seventh street, writes from 34 A II Schiller strasse, Charlottenburg, near Berlin, of the success with which her little daughter is meeting in her musical career.

Leonard Kill and N. J. Wieter will go to the Kansas City show with exhibits.

The Moninger Co. is tearing down its old office building preparatory to putting up a new two-story structure which will give them much needed room.

The George Wittbold Co. has recently received a large importation of bay trees, azaleas, rhododendrons and other stock.

BETTSVILLE, O.—M. W. Walters has added a house 11x65, making 7,000 feet of glass in all.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo.—Fred Kuhn, an employee of the Stuppy Floral Co., was held up October 21 by two masked men and robbed of $20.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

Perfect weather these days in New York. The brave old oak has been yielding his branches profusely and every retail window is aglow with autumn foliage. A beautiful background it makes for the great white and yellow and pink chrysanthemums which now are in their glory, making every florist's window an exhibition that appeals to every eye.

Never have the mums seemed so perfect and enough of them to keep the prices reasonable. Few even of the novelties command over $25 a hundred. Now and then something especially large and beautiful has been brave enough to demand $6 a dozen, they say, and get it, but 25 cents apiece may be fairly called high tide, and from that on down to $1 a hundred.

Orchids and violets complete the window displays. Roses and carnations are content to wait. Their day is now close at hand. Violets have actually surprised themselves. A few weeks ago it was a ten to one shot they would not go over 50 cents a hundred before Thanksgiving. Now good ones command $1 a hundred and I have heard of a few specials bringing $1.25. It is the unexpected that happens. You cannot keep a good thing down. The west has had its influence in the recovery. There can be no disputing that, and so after all maybe those Rhinebeckers builded wiser than we knew.

Orchids have become a standard decoration. The cattleya rules king of them all, but many other varieties are growing in popularity and the local demand, I predict, will exceed the supply before the year ends. Nevertheless, the shipping demand grows. All the large cities seem to depend upon the New York market and seldom is a disappointment recorded. Anderson, in Buffalo, told me last week of a big demand for cattleyas that came suddenly a while ago, which made shipment within an hour imperative, and a telephone to McManus brought the goods on time and in perfect condition. Wallace Burnham, of Bloomingdale's, announces an all-week orchid show at his big roof conservatory that will do much to popularize the flower.

All roses have advanced slightly in value. Some exceptionally fine blooms of Bride and Maid have touched higher prices than the average quotation of $6 per hundred. Beauties have risen to $30 per hundred for the finest, this grade, however, being extra select.

Carnations improve daily. Novelties are coming fast. Craig and Victory are grand. The whole market may be summed up as healthy, cheerful, encouraging and in consequence thereof a buoyant, hopeful condition inspires all branches of the trade.

The Violet Train.

Speaking of violets, a very interesting sight is the daily distribution of the boxes and their arrival at the Grand Central on the 3:33 train in the afternoon. A few boxes arrive at 8 a. m. and another lot at 10:40, but these amount to nothing when compared with the big receipts in the afternoon. Twenty or thirty wholesalers are represented and two or three clerks from each are on hand ready for the fray. When the violet train steams in and McManus, the veteran expressman for thirty years, gets busy, all is rush and excitement. Not so many years ago Jack Gunther was the only "early bird." Gradually the numbers increased until now there is no limit to the crowd save the supply. Five to ten boxes is the average for each at this season. Soon ten to twenty will be received. One thousand to 2,500 violets are in each box. Count the total daily; a million and a half! It is hard to realize it. These "waiters" secure as quickly as they can one to three boxes out of their shipments and start the round of the retailers, displaying, selling, supplying their regular customers, vieing with each other in the rapiuity of their hustling and intensifying the competition as the season advances. So keen is the fight for a share in the business of the big city. "Down the line" is no misnomer. Up and down they go, seeking an outlet for their stock and using all "the tricks of the trade" to maintain their custom and hold their patrons. Later the balance of the shipments arrive at the wholesale houses.

Various Notes.

Many of the great lights of horticulture are expected here this week. Ex-President Breitmeyer's wireless message announced his coming Sunday, and here he is. The big show at Macy's promises heavily. Everybody is coming to see it.

All the flower shows around New York are breaking records. Down at Madison last Friday I saw one of the most perfect exhibitions ever set up. C. H. Totty had many of his new varieties on exhibition, some of which must prove universally popular. His Richmond roses were the best we have seen in the east. He has the largest stock of any of the growers in this section. Joseph Fenrich handles the New York shipments from Mr. Totty's greenhouses. Wm. G. Badgeley, one of A. J. Guttman's shippers, secured first prize for his Maids, an honor the young gentleman may well be proud of.

Harry May and Miss May, of Summit, were among the visitors and with them were Joseph Hill and his bride, of Richmond, Ind., son of Gurney Hill and a chip off the old block for geniality and energy.

Chas. W. See, bookkeeper for a decade with Siebrecht & Son, with his brother, were owners of the "Tom Paine" farm near New Rochelle until last week, when a syndicate bought the 115 acres for $140,000. Mr. See will retain the old homestead.

Wertheimber & Co., the importers of Japanese goods for florists, have some fine novelties this year, Christmas bells being a specialty.

The Florists' Board of Trade grows in popularity. Gradually names are added in their quarterly issues, until now the book has quadrupled in size. The management appears well pleased with the progress made.

Schloss Bros. have some great novelties in red and green ribbons for Christmas. They are the originators of numerous novelties that have appealed to the artistic florists of the country. Their trade is growing constantly.

McMillan & Son, of Hudson Heights, N. J., are shipping an average of 2,000 Ivory, pink and white, daily to the New York market, splendid stock which Ford Bros. find no difficulty in distributing. It is hard to find a more generally popular variety, even now, than the old Ivory that has held its place for half a score of years.

Chas. Schenck, of Traendly & Schenck, discovered a thief in the store one night last week and chased him down the street and into the arms of Bob Cummings, the robust actor. The thief proved to be a former employee who had retained a key and was going through the place each Saturday night. He was let off with a night in the cooler. The surplus is now growing again.

Robert Craig was in town last week, growing young again.

That innovation of a flower store on the big steamship Amerika bids fair to have a following, and doubtless before long every large steamer will be considered old fashioned without this convenience.

Hardy roses, evergreens and other nursery importations are appearing at the auction rooms and good crowds and prices encourage the sweet-voiced persuaders in their strenuous work.

H. H. Berger & Co. report by far the best season in their history. They are still very busy. The prospect for Japanese stock next year is higher prices.

The exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society took place Monday and Tuesday of this week and was a fine success. Mr. Bennett, the secretary of the society, was married a week ago to Miss Maud Williams.

November 13, the New York club will hold its November meeting at the Grand Opera House and as this is chrysanthemum night and the last floricultural night of the year's exhibitions, President Traendly requests the club members to turn out 200 strong. The caterer will "cate" more elaborately than usual and the official guidance for 1906 will be determined.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

Business has shown a decided improvement since the end of last week. The quantity of chrysanthemums coming in is larger than a week ago, but most of them are sold at fair prices. Some go on the street, but that does not always mean that the prices are low, the street-men having paid as high as $15 a hundred last Saturday for good flowers. The early sorts are practically over, the mid-season varieties being now at their best. Of these the Leo Niessen Co. report Col. Appleton and Halliday as the best yellows, Mrs. Coombes, White Baizley, of which they control the stock coming into this market, Ivory and Edith Bryan as the best whites, while Pink Baizley and William Duckham are the leading pinks. This will give a fair idea of the varieties, with the addition of Miss Alice Byron, seen at W. J. Baker's. Among the other varieties noted in the market are Col. Bonnaffon, which is now very fine, Eaton and Yellow Eaton. Carnations are quite scarce, the prices slightly advancing. Roses have also advanced a little in price, especially the choice grades selected for out-of-town shipping orders, Beauties being in particularly heavy demand. Valley is plentiful and only in fair demand. Violets are in demand. Orchids have sold well; quite a large number are coming in. Gardenias are quite scarce and the price is advancing. White snapdragon is now to be had, the Flower Market and Cut Flower Co. having some especially choice stock. The outdoor flowers are entirely over, excepting cosmos, which is still coming in limited quantities. The outlook for a good month appears excellent.

The Sign of the Rose.

Charles H. Fox, who opened his new store last week, as mentioned in this column, has succeeded in carrying out his idea of an Old English shop arranged in the most tasteful and artistic style. From the sign outside to the most minute detail of the interior arrangements, the Old English idea has been carried out faithfully. There is not the slightest trace of commercialism in the well-arranged shop that meets the visitor's eyes as he opens the door. Anyone might suppose he was in a parlor of a person of means, whose taste ran more toward plants and flowers than toward paintings or bric-a-brac. The door is an exact imitation of the Old English style. The windows are high and with small panes, such as we are accustomed to seeing in paintings of a hundred years ago. The candelabra is finished in copper. The open fireplace would delight the heart of any true Briton. Here we have the special gem of the room, for the mantelpiece is made of the first limb cut from the famous Lippincott tree, taken down last spring, over which all Philadelphia mourned, while the logs in the hearth are from the same historic source. Back of the pretty shop is Mr. Fox's demonstrating room, where he can take a customer who wishes to see just how her table or vase would look when arranged in a certain way. Behind this room, but not connected with it, is the workshop, where all the making-up is done. And in the passageway leading thereto the boxes, paper, string and other necessities have their allotted places. A winding stairway leads to the conservatory above. It is about twenty-five feet square, arranged with water-proof floor, very light and effective. From this conservatory opens Mr. Fox's special sanctum, where he can design his most elaborate decorations undisturbed. This room is large and comfortably furnished, and may also be used for the bookkeeping department, which is carefully excluded from the shop below. In fact, the effort to keep out commercialism has gone so far that even the cash register is encased in a wooden cover. The impression created by this new venture is that we have among us another artist aiming to advance the standard of our calling.

Strafford.

Seventy-five members of the Florists' Club accepted the invitation of Edward A. Stroud to visit his greenhouses at Strafford on Thursday of last week. The place was in perfect condition, the plants being clean, healthy and full of vigor, with not a weed or trace of disease to be seen.

The readers of the REVIEW know that Mr. Stroud's place was built a little over two years ago, by Hitchings & Co., and that his houses, four in number, are all that modern ingenuity can devise. That these houses are light, airy and durable can be seen at a glance. Three of them, each about 25x350, are planted with carnations, the varieties being carefully selected. Of the whites, May Naylor is evidently the leader, making a very fine appearance. Lady Bountiful seems a good variety, with wiry stems, holding the medium flowers erect. Lieut. Peary promises well. My Maryland is the picture of health, but there are no flowers. It is evidently a very late bloomer. Of the reds, Flamingo, scarlet, is the best, its only drawback being a slight crook in some of the flowers, just at the top of the stem. G. H. Crane is not nearly so good. Harry Fenn seems the best scarlet. It is in splendid shape, but Mr. Stroud is evidently cutting down on this color. A little space is devoted to Cardinal, which is very pretty, but the flowers are not yet at their best, nor are the stems very strong. Of the pinks, Enchantress is far and away the best, the plants being larger this season than last. A table which then held 1,000 plants was planted this year with 800 or 900. Fiancee gives promise of doing well later. Mrs. Lawson is not so good as last year, although still largely planted and looking well. Genevieve Lord is very fine. Of the blush varieties Mrs. M. A. Patten is in magnificent shape and should prove very profitable. Judge Hinsdale, variegated, looked well. Prosperity was very late; the flowers are not coloring well. Gov. Bliss, Ethel Ward and one or two other varieties are also grown.

The chrysanthemum house was a sight. Cinna, an early yellow, Col. Appleton, Yellow and White Chadwick, and Yellow Eaton were the varieties.

After strolling through the greenhouses, a cricket match was played on carefully prepared wickets nearby. Philadelphia was defeated by Montgomery by the close score of 35 to 32. Then came a handsome collation, followed by an address of welcome by Mr. Stroud and some songs by Mr. Dumont. The affair was greatly enjoyed. Among those present were Frank Adelberger, Geo. Anderson, John Berger, Eugene Bernheimer, Geo. Burton, Wm. Carey, D. T. Connor, J. H. Dodds, H. P. Dumont, Fred Ehret, G. S. Faulkner, Dr. Geo. Goebel, Hugh Graham, Robert Kift, P. J. Klingporn, A. J.; John Sholl, Burlington, N. J.; W. H. Vance, Wilmington, Del.

Various Notes.

John Curwen, of Berwyn, has completed his new greenhouse 27x200, built with Dillon concrete posts and roofing material. It is planted with carnations, which are in very fine condition, and violets. The varieties of the former are Enchantress, Prosperity, Queen, Joost, May Naylor and Harry Fenn. His violets are singles, Luxonne and Princess of Wales. A small house 12x40 is in course of erection.

Pennock Bros. have a very pretty window decoration of tiny baskets filled with yellow pompon chrysanthemums, suspended by yellow cords. A few larger flowers of the same color are used to heighten the effect.

John C. Gracey has a very pretty window decoration this week, made of fancy chrysanthemums and autumn leaves.

J. J. Habermehl's Sons had a handsome wedding at the Bellevue-Stratford on Saturday, which Phil was to have seen but despite his best efforts luck seemed to be decidedly averse.

Chas. Fox, Broad and Thompson streets, had a very handsome "military wedding" at Chestnut Hill a short time ago.

Chas. E. Meehan and Alfred Burton went up to Gwynedd to see John Savage. They report his bouvardias and chrysanthemums as ready to harvest, with the roses coming in a little later.

Mrs. M. D. Young, of Thirty-third and Dauphin streets, has the decoration for the Young Men's Republican banquet at the Bellevue-Stratford on November 3. This is the second affair she has had at this famous hostelry.

Lloyd G. Blick, of Norfolk, Va., was in town visiting M. Rice & Co.

Julius Wolff, Jr., has harvested an excellent crop of orchids from his place at Twenty-eighth and Sedgely streets. He has added a large number of plants this season.

The annual chrysanthemum show of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society will open at Horticultural Hall, Broad street below Locust, next Tuesday evening, November 7.

Edward Reid is handling some exceptionally fine white carnations, Beauties and chrysanthemums.

Phil's attention to the nice valley they are receiving.

Bowling.

The Philadelphia team, minus one man, went down to Baltimore last Friday to bowl the first of two rounds in the tri-city match for the silver cup presented by Samuel S. Pennock. While the result was not wholly satisfactory, better things are hoped for in the return match to be played in this city at the Casino alleys at 4 p. m. on November 8. The score:

The Market.

Conditions have improved quite a little since our last report. There is, of course, no chance for any upward bound with so many chrysanthemums arriving, but prices on some staples have hardened a little. Chrysanthemums sell from $4 to $12, more at the former price than at the latter. Some very good Miss Alice Byron, Bonnaffon, Duckham, Dr. Enguehard, Merza and other varieties are seen. Beauty and Liberty roses remain about the same, but the better grades of Brides and Maids are selling higher. Carnations fetch from $2 to $3, a few selling lower and fancies a little higher. Violets are coming of improved quality. Some of the best realize 75 cents, ordinary stock 40 to 50 cents. Callas come from one or two growers and realize 12½ cents each. Some Paper White narcissi and stevia are seen, but are not in much request.

Florists' Club Field Day.

The outing to the Waban Rose Conservatories on October 28 was a decided success. Weather conditions were ideal and about sixty members attended. An inspection of the extensive blocks of rose houses was first in order and, as usual, everything was found in as near perfect condition as possible. The big Beauty house, 40x700, was in grand order and will produce a big Christmas crop. This house contains six beds and 13,000 plants. Brides and Maids filled quite a number of houses and were carrying grand crops of flowers. Quite a number of Morgan and Mrs. Oliver Ames are grown on front benches, each producing large quantities of flowers.

Liberty looked extremely well and so did a batch of 1,500 Richmond. This latter was closely scrutinized. As seen here it appeared to be an unusually good grower and was flowering with great freedom, producing strong shoots which should give very fine flowers later. Many of the visitors considered it better than Liberty and perhaps another year, with good home-propagated plants, it may eclipse that fine variety. We would not venture a definite opinion so early in the season. The greatest interest centered in the houses of Wellesley, of which 10,000 plants are being grown this season. These look splendid and show wonderful vigor and freedom of bloom. Mme. Abel Chatenay and La Detroit grown on a part of one bench for comparison were entirely outclassed. Wellesley is increasing in popular favor in the Boston market, and many other New England cities experience an increasing call for it.

A house of Killarney was doing finely. This has not been grown here before but promises to be a very profitable one. A striking contrast was presented by two rows of plants on own roots. These were greatly inferior to the grafted stock. Excepting the Beauties and one lot of Wellesley, all roses at Natick are grafted and very few raised benches are now seen. Other roses of great merit are likely to emanate from here in the future, for many excellent seedlings were noted in bloom.

Chrysanthemums, which used to be a star feature here, have now been dropped entirely. The decline in demand as also in prices for specimen blooms are causes for this.

Inspections of the model heating plant, offices, etc., having been made, an adjournment was made to the roomy packing shed, where a staff of young ladies served a bountiful collation. President Wheeler called on a number of members for short speeches. Among those who responded were: E. O. Orpet, T. H. Westwood, M. A. Patten, J. W. Duncan, Henry Wild, W. N. Craig and others. A vote of thanks to Mr. Montgomery and his able son was enthusiastically carried. Mr. Montgomery, in responding, expressed the great pleasure it gave them to have the club with them. Three cheers and a tiger for the generous hosts brought to a close one of the most delightful field days the club has yet held.

Flower Market Banquet.

The stallholders and stockholders of the Boston Co-operative Flower Growers' Association, with a few invited guests, enjoyed their annual banquet at Young's Hotel on Saturday evening, October 28. About seventy-five gentlemen were present. After the very excellent menu had been disposed of, W. C. Stickel took charge of the post-prandial exercises. He first called on W. H. Elliott, whom he introduced as the dean of the market corporation. Mr. Elliott spoke entertainingly of Porto Rico, life insurance and the work the Park street market was accomplishing. W. J. Stewart spoke for the press and F. R. Mathieson for the retired florists. Allen Peirce was introduced as the dean of baby culture but declined to discuss so delicate a question. Wm. R. Nicholson, who just returned from his honeymoon, also felt a natural feeling of hesitancy and was excused. Addresses were made by J. W. Duncan, W. N. Craig, Andrew Christiansen, H. A. Stevens, H. S. Parker, H. L. Cameron, H. M. Robinson and Elijah A. Wood, the latter making an excellent comparison of flower sellers twenty-eight years ago and today.

Alexander Montgomery was called upon to speak for the American Rose Society. He said he was glad to announce that they had secured a large number of valuable cups, shields, vases and other prizes for the show to be held in Boston next March and predicted that it would eclipse anything of the kind ever seen in America. Peter Fisher responded for the American Carnation Society and gave the reasons why an amalgamation with the rose society could not be arranged. He urged all carnation growers to send at least one vase of flowers and help make a show which would redound to Boston's credit.

The election of officers of the corporation took place at the close of the speech making.

Various Notes.

Duncan Finlayson's uncle, George McRae, of New Zealand, was an interested visitor with the club at Waban Conservatories on October 28. This is his first visit after forty years' absence. He returns to that far off land of beauty and sunshine in a few days. Speaking of violets, he states that every house has a bed of them and that New Zealanders are great flower lovers.

Peirce Bros. have a large house of Asparagus Sprengeri at their big Wellesley plant, which is the finest in the section.

Joshua C. Stone, who died at East Watertown on October 22, aged 76 years, was a familiar figure for many years at the Boston shows. His death creates a vacancy on the vegetable committee of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, on which he had served faithfully for many years.

Mrs. William Nicholson, of Framingham, received painful injuries on October 20 from falling down two flights of stairs. We are glad she is now somewhat improved.

McMulkin had a very pretty pink window the past week. Lorraine begonias, carnations, chrysanthemums, cattleyas, roses and bouvardia were included.

H. M. Robinson & Co. are now handling some big consignments of southern smilax and other green stock.

Henry Wild, of Greenwich, Conn., was in town this week, purchasing stock for the large estate of which he has charge. His numerous friends were pleased to see him.

Charles Sander, at Prof. C. S. Sargent's estate in Brookline, has a grand collection of hybrid nerines now in bloom. Some of Elwes' varieties are especially fine. If only these could be brought within the reach of commercial growers they ought to sell well.

W. P. Rich and O. B. Hadwen represented the Massachusetts Horticultural Society at the annual exhibition of the New Hampshire Horticultural Society at Rochester, N. H., on October 24, 25 and 26. They report a good exhibit and some very interesting lectures and discussions.

Robert Cameron sailed on October 28, per S. S. Maraval, for Trinidad. He will visit Grenada, Barbadoes, Jamaica and a number of smaller islands. He expects to collect many interesting and useful plants.

The North Shore Horticultural Society is making active preparations for the annual chrysanthemum show. It will be held this year in the City Hall, Beverly, on November 8 and 9.

William Nicholson, Alexander Montgomery and possibly one or two others from this section, will take in the C. S. A. show in Philadelphia, also probably the New York show.

W. N. CRAIG.

TOLEDO.

At a special meeting held at Chas. Schramm's greenhouse, the Florists' Club decided to accept the invitation of the Detroit boys to visit them on November 2 and take a trip with them to Mount Clemens. About fifteen promised to go.

Frost at last. Mums feel the effect of it. Business is picking up all along the line.

Chas. Schramm has entirely recovered from his recent illness.

J. Gratopp celebrated his fiftieth birthday in a fitting manner on October 28.

John Barrow, who plants his carnations in solid beds and then afterwards builds the houses over them, complains of grub and cut worms eating the roots and killing the plants. E. A. K.

CHARCOAL SCREENINGS.

Since the Germans have introduced the hard wood, kiln-burned charcoal in this country, the grocery trade has made a market for kindlings in paper bags and the screenings, as a by-product, have been used to advantage by florists, especially those who have old beds that it is not convenient to refill each year. They find that a very little of the charcoal will keep away mold and, the soil being sweet, produces well. Among the violet growers it is thought by some that it adds color or deepens it. Very good recommendations have also been given by Hamburg grape raisers who use it instead of wood ashes and as it is cheaper they find it very effective. E. V. Sidell, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., reports that the growers and gardeners in that neighborhood are using large quantities of these charcoal screenings.

DAISIES.

I have a lot of yellow daisies, Etoile d'Or and Giants, in from 5-inch to 10-inch pots. They are pot-bound but do not give many flowers, although full of buds. I have been feeding with liquid cow manure. How can I get them in bloom the quickest and continue until, say, the middle of March? After that of course it is easy enough. Will muriate of potash help to develop the flowers, and how much should I use? C. J. D.

These daisies do well in a temperature of 50 to 54 degrees and produce the greatest number of flowers when in a pot-bound condition. They should receive liberal supplies of liquid feeding, but should not be subjected to a high night temperature with a view to forcing them into bloom. Give them plenty of ventilation and allow the temperature to run up to 75 degrees or even higher during bright weather. Have patience, it is hardly time to realize a crop from them yet; the season is scarcely begun. R.

COLUMBUS, O.—The Livingston Seed Co. is holding its fifth annual chrysanthemum show this week, attracting many visitors to the place.

Mums ! Mums !

The season is now on. We can furnish the best stock in the market in great variety. Our roses were never better. RICHMOND and KILLARNEY, our novelties, are especially fine. Give us a trial order for these. Carnations, Violets, Orchids, Valley and everything in season at lowest market rates.

TORONTO.

The Market.

Trade during the past week has been fine and stock has moved off freely. Mums are not coming as rapidly as had been expected and the supply is hardly equal to the demand. Especially might this be said of good stock in colors; these find ready sale. Carnations and roses are in fair supply and all good stock is pretty well cleaned up. Violets are coming in quite plentifully.

Various Notes.

Much interest is being taken by both the growers and retail men in the coming chrysanthemum show, which is now known as the Ontario Horticultural Exhibition. On account of the change in the name some people have an idea that it is not the same as the old chrysanthemum show. The advertising manager of the exhibition called the other day and made it very clear that this is no pure food show or anything of that kind, but a chrysanthemum show on a very large scale, with several additional features in the line of table decorations. There is, however, an exhibition of honey which will merely be a side show in comparison with the chrysanthemum show. The show will be held in Massey Hall November 14 to 18, and as this is the largest auditorium in the city the show has to be conducted on a large scale to meet expenses. Any information may be had from Secretary H. B. Cowan, Manning Chambers, Toronto.

The reduced rates for Thanksgiving brought quite a few visitors to the city. Among these we noticed A. G. Stephens, late of Darch & Hunter, London, who is about to open a store there on his own account.

J. A. Fraser, of Prescott, also gave us a call. He has lately been appointed fishery overseer on the St. Lawrence. This leads us to remark that it is astonishing the number of our brother craftsmen who have received appointments under the Whitney government. We wonder if all influential florists in Canada are conservatives.

We also had a call from F. Mason and wife, Peterborough, and R. Greenlaw, with N. F. McCarthy, Boston. D. J.

NEW YORK.—The British Empire from Antwerp landed 2,465 boxes of Belgian window glass October 23. Importations are increasing.

AMERICAN SEED TRADE ASSOCIATION.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

JAMES DOBBIE, founder of the great English seed house of Dobbie & Co., from which he retired in 1887, is dead, aged 88 years.

TOLEDO, O., Nov. 1.—December clover-seed, $8.20; January, $8.25; February, $8.30; March, $8.35. Alsike, $8. Timothy, $1.55.

VISITED CHICAGO.—T. M. Landrum, of C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Cal.; A. E. McKenzie, of A. E. McKenzie & Co., Brandon, Man.

FROM Nebraska it is reported that the weather is against the sweet corn harvest. It is generally conceded, however, that the early varieties are safe.

A BURSTING water main at Clark and Sixteenth streets, Chicago, October 28, cost three lives and $200,000 in property. The Albert Dickinson Co. lost $2,500 on grass seeds.

CHICAGO.—Several car-loads of onion sets leave for distant points this week. November 1 to 10 is about the limit for what is termed fall shipment. After that date few sets are shipped until January.

THE California growers are now busy cleaning up cucumber and tomato, which are the last crops to come off. In about two weeks everything will be quiet on the seed farms, except planting for next season. There have been no early rains as yet and the farmers are badly in need of them.

ONE of the best posted California growers says, relative to cucumber as grown in California, that he thinks in all there is about 200 acres produced, which, compared with the Nebraska and Colorado growers, is insignificant. Cucumber does well in California, but the crop this year is rather light.

W. ATLEE BURPEE is now in the midst of his busy season, getting up catalogues for 1906.

JAMES CURRIE, father of the Currie brothers, seedsmen, is dead at Milwaukee, aged 78 years.

THE Planters' Seed Co., Springfield, Mo., is erecting a warehouse 36x60 with power cleaning machinery. They confine their efforts to the southwestern jobbing trade in garden and field seeds and, although only ten months established, already have worked up a considerable business.

THE "good old times" are about to return. Alaska peas and other canners' varieties are sold at $3 per bushel and over, in quantities. The Globe varieties of onions are bringing $2 per pound with higher prices in sight. Bean prices are likely to go to the market gardeners' limit before spring and altogether it looks good for the seedsman.

IN the southern section of Chicago, where a considerable quantity of onion sets are grown, it is reported that the child labor law will interfere with and cut down operations considerably the coming year. In vacation time boys of 14 to 16 years do considerable harvesting of onion sets and if the law prevents the grower from employing them other available help will be insufficient to meet the emergency.

BEANS are reported to be arriving at the growing stations very slowly. This adds to the annoyance of the growers, who cannot give proper replies to inquiries as to what percentage they will deliver until they know how many they will receive.

MONTGOMERY WARD, SEEDSMAN.

Last season Sears, Roebuck & Co., Chicago, one of the largest general mail order houses in the country, established a seed department, now in charge of S. D. Dysinger, formerly with L. L. May & Co., St. Paul. They issued a special seed catalogue, which they advertised widely, offering to send with it, free, a packet of sweet pea seeds to each one who answered. The extent to which the catalogue was distributed may be judged from the fact that they required over four tons of sweet pea seed. The catalogue brought satisfactory results and the firm is preparing to go into the business on a still larger scale next season. They have gone to the original sources

Crop 1905. RAWSON'S ROYAL STRAIN CYCLAMEN is ready for delivery.

This strain has no equal or better. Perfect flowers of giant type are borne on long, erect stems in such profusion that they almost hide the foliage and pot. of supply, wherever possible, in securing stock.

Now comes the announcement that Montgomery Ward & Co., the world's largest general mail order house, will issue a general seed catalogue in January. Montgomery Ward & Co. never do anything by halves, and it is promised that the catalogue will be equal to the best issued by exclusive seed houses. Mr. Fisher, manager of the department, until recently with the Albert Dickinson Co., has a thorough experience in the general seed line. The policy of the department will be that of the house, to keep prices at the lowest point and transact a very large volume of business.

It is reported that the Cash Buyers' Union, another large Chicago general mail order house, will go into the seed business.

Just what effect this will have on the exclusive seed houses doing a catalogue trade remains to be seen; it is not likely to help it any. And the general stores and small seed stores through the country are likely to feel the effects of this competition once it is in full swing.

PUBLICATIONS RECEIVED.

[Field Notes on Sweet Peas, edited by Lester L. Morse and published by C. C. Morse & Co., San Francisco, Cal.]

It is now some years since the first edition of this work appeared and it is three years since the second edition was distributed. The demand for the previous editions has warranted the publication of the pamphlet now at hand. In the introduction Mr. Morse says that it has been found necessary to add thirty-four new names to the descriptive list. Some of these varieties are of little value, but others have given a new and decided impetus to the sweet pea trade. The list contains also descriptions of many old varieties which are now practically discarded in favor of some of the newer sorts.

It is evident that the discovery of the new Countess Spencer has inaugurated a new era in sweet peas and we may look forward to the time not far distant when we shall have all colors in this kind. The various forms of sweet peas are shown by half-tone reproductions from photographs and a number of pages are given to color classifications with planting and cultural directions and other matter of interest and value to every sweet pea grower. A very interesting page is that devoted to collections, naming the best fifty varieties. It is stated that the best six are: Countess Spencer, new giant pink; Dorothy Eckford, the large white; Phenomenal, orchid flowering, blue, edged white; Helen Lewis, new giant orange pink; Lady Grisel Hamilton, the largest flowering lavender; King Edward VII, the largest pure red. To make the best ten Mr. Morse adds the following varieties: Hon. Mrs. E. Kenyon, largest primrose; Mrs. Walter Wright, largest purple blue; Navy Blue, the largest dark blue variety; Marchioness of Cholmondeley, the largest buff and pink.

The descriptive list contains 214 names, with field notes brought down to the growing season of 1905, including the synonyms under which a number of these varieties are known and which would add very materially to the total number of varieties. The pamphlet is one which should be in the hands of every one who handles sweet pea seeds or grows the flowers.

that might otherwise have remained unsold on their hands found a ready market to be used for substitutes of such varieties that are no more to be had at any price. Naturally this brisk demand has caused a very sharp rise in prices, and also in consequence some stocks have been completely exhausted, because, not only first-size bulbs have been used, but also second and third size, which is not the case in ordinary seasons. The work of planting all sorts of stocks is now being pushed forward with greatest vigor, and as shipments of late ripening goods, such as spiraea and lilium will not begin until the end of October, all hands are now being pressed for planting operations. The weather also has been rather favorable, as the unusually dry condition of the ground has been much relieved by the rain of the last two weeks."

NORTHERN TEXAS.

After almost three months without rain in this section, a good soaking rain visited us October 18 and with warm sunshine a banner crop of outdoor roses is expected. This time of the year roses out of doors are at their best and consequently the florist suffers. Social functions use the flowers which the neighbors grow and, were it not for funeral work, there would be little doing. The successful growing of winter roses is as yet but a dream, every effort so far resulting in failure. But it is hoped that by persistent effort obstacles may be overcome and that it will be but a question of a short time when roses will be grown here.

Carnations seem to revel in this climate and some very fine ones are being grown. But stem-rot has ravaged some of the houses in this section, some growers being forced to replant over two-thirds of their stock. Lilium Harrisii is looking well, but the California calla is almost a failure. Ten-weeks stocks grow in abundance and are used for funeral work. Mums are grown practically outdoors and are very fine. Prices are low as yet, but when the roses are gone prices will jump and times will be better.

Your correspondent visited the Munson plant at Denison, but was disappointed by not finding Mr. Munson at home. He has a very neat place of about 4,000 feet in which he grows carnations and general stock. He is better known as a nurseryman, having one of the largest establishments of its kind in this section of the country.

In Sherman there are two plants, one the Texas Nursery Co., consists of four houses, two in carnations, one in mums and the other house is used for propagating and general stock. This company, as its name implies, is chiefly devoted to the growing of nursery stock and does not cut much figure in floriculture as yet, but it will grow.

The other plant is owned by H. O. Hannah & Son, who have been in the business about eight years and have about 7,000 feet of glass in which they grow carnations, mums and general stock. Mr. Hannah does a very large decorating business and an immense business in funeral work, having almost the entire trade of the surrounding country and Indian Territory. Mr. Hannah is a progressive man, who went into the business as a pastime, but it has grown to such proportions that he found it necessary to give up his other business and devote his time to growing exclusively, until at the present time it takes five men to handle the trade.

The state fair to be held at Dallas, commencing October 28, will give the florists of northern Texas a chance to show what they can do. If the florists of this section will get together they could find plenty of ways to get their goods before the public and by meeting, say once a month, will soon be able to better educate the people to buy nothing but first-class stuff and there will be less waste. I trust the boys in Dallas will help take the matter up and help the good work along.

NARCISSUS.

MILWAUKEE.

James Currie, aged 78 years, senior member of the firm of Currie Bros. Co., florists, is dead at his home, 308 Twenty-seventh street. Mr. Currie was born in Auchendrane, on the banks of the River Doone, Scotland. He became a landscape gardener and florist and in 1888 came to Milwaukee to take charge of the greenhouses of Currie Bros., conducted by his sons, William, Adam and James, Jr.

Mr. Currie was a member of the St. Andrew's society and the Milwaukee Curling club. He attended Calvary Presbyterian church. He is survived by a widow, three sons and two daughters.

DENVER, COLO.—The Gallup Floral Co. is preparing to enlarge its present quarters at Fifteenth and Cleveland place by the addition of a large show-room for cut flowers and plants. Large plate glass windows will be placed in the front of the building, so as to give a full view of the interior of the store. The alterations will cost about $10,000.

The Market.

Since the frost of a week ago there has been a great decrease in the supply of cut flowers. Roses have shortened up considerably and better prices are ruling. Carnations have also been in good demand and prices have stiffened on the better grades. Enchantress seems to be the best in this line so far, but all kinds were in very short supply the past week. Too many yellow chrysanthemums and not enough white to meet the demand was the condition of the market during the week of October 28. Some few dahlias and outdoor roses are still seen, but from all appearances outdoor stock will soon be done for. Violets are improving and selling well.

Various Notes.

Philip B. Welsh is sending in some fine pink sweet peas.

At the last club meeting the question was brought up how to elevate the private gardener, and papers will be read on that subject at the next meeting, which no doubt will prove an interesting one. There was also a fine exhibit of a pink seedling chrysanthemum by N. Smith & Son, and also an exhibit of chrysanthemums from G. Lotze, of Glen Burnie, Md., among which were some very promising varieties.

On Friday, October 27, the three cities, Philadelphia, Washington and Baltimore, rolled a match game. After the three games in Baltimore the remaining three are to be bowled in Philadelphia during the Horticultural Society's flower show. There was a banquet here after the game on Friday night. F. G. Burger acted as toast-master and there was a general good time. The following scores were made:

The Market.

Business the past week was not very encouraging. The sharp change in the weather should have a beneficial effect. Cut stock, that has been arriving in quantities more than the market could handle, has shortened up considerably. The call for carnations is especially good and this stock cleans up almost every day at advanced prices. White, with Enchantress and Lawson, sell best.

Beauties are selling better than they were, with extra fancy limited. Shorts are plentiful. Brides and Maids have shortened up, Richmond and Meteor are plentiful, also Perle. Carnot is fine, but scarce. All of the above have advanced slightly in price.

Extra fine valley sells well at $4. Violets are good in color and stems, though hardly enough are in to supply the demand. Chrysanthemums are still going off easily and nearly everything wanted in this line is now obtainable. There is no glut, although the big prices for choice blooms of previous years do not materialize. There was quite a lot of shipping among the wholesalers last week.

Various Notes.

The Simmons Hardware Co. will hold a free chrysanthemum show in its china department this week. They have invited the florists of the city to show not less than five plants for prizes of $75 for first and $50 for second, the decision to be left to popular vote by the visitors.

Ed. Honlihan killed himself on Tuesday of last week at his home, 3632 Evans avenue. He was well known in the trade but was out of employment. He was an inveterate smoker of cigarettes.

J. F. Ammann, of Edwardsville, is sending in some extra fine blooms of Richmond, also a good cut of fine Chateaufort.

Mary Gorley, wife of Vincent Gorley, has instituted divorce proceedings the past week.

Julius Koenig and Otto Brunig, at Berning's, are fast becoming expert bowlers. They intend to join the florist bowlers on Monday nights.

The employees of City Hall park are busy planting some 50,000 tulip bulbs in the big beds just vacated by the summer plants.

Robert Meinhardt, who recently opened a store at Sarah and Suburban streets, has taken John S. Dierkes, who was formerly with Grimm & Gorley, into partnership. The firm will be known as Meinhardt & Dierkes. They make a great team.

C. Young & Sons Co. have had a busy week. Among their work was the event of the social season, the Scullen-Wade wedding. The church and residence were beautifully decorated. The bride carried a large bunch of white orchids. The Wade residence, where the reception was held, was elaborately decorated in pink and white, with many fine plants.

The posters for the flower show are out and in the windows of the florists. They are small but neat and very attractive. The committee has distributed some 10,000 postal cards among the retail florists, announcing the date of the show. Theo. Miller, who is auditor of the show, reports everything favorable. The club's special prize for 100 American Beauties should bring out a big competition, the first prize being $100, second $75 and third $50. This will be the feature on Friday, the third day of the show.

Henry Lohrenz has his new show house well stocked with extra fine decorative plants. Henry reports trade good since opening the new place.

The Florists' League bowlers had no trouble in defeating champion Martin Kern's team on last week. Two of the three games played Capt. Beyer was not able to roll and H. Lohrenz took his place. Robert Meinhardt made 607 in the three games, Beneke, 537; Kuehn, 499; Ellison, 485, and Lohrenz, 429.

J. J. B.

IRONTON, OHIO.—A. C. Ullrich & Son have been holding a very successful sale of Boston ferns, stock which they did not have room to carry through the winter. Cheap prices brought many buyers who had never before visited the greenhouses.

PIPING THREE HOUSES.

I want to heat three houses, built without partitions, with hot water to 52 degrees when it is 20 degrees below zero outdoors. One house is 17x85, twelve feet to the ridge, side wall seven feet half wood and half glass. The west end is protected for four feet and the east end entirely so. Two houses are each 14x85, eleven feet to the ridge, the north side wood to the gutter, ends the same as the other house. The heater is to be located in a pit one foot below the level of the houses. How many lineal feet of 1½-inch pipe will be required and how would it best be located?

J. H. S.

The largest house, 17x85, should have a 2½-inch flow pipe supplying ten 1½-inch returns distributed under the benches. Each of the houses 14x85 should have a 2-inch supply flowing into eight 1½-inch returns. If a pressure system is used elevate the expansion tank twelve to fifteen feet above the highest point in the system. If these houses are on the ridge and furrow plan, with no side walls except the outside ones, the center house will require slightly less piping than that above specified.

PACIFIC COAST.

CALIFORNIA NATIVE PLANTS.

I had the pleasure during the past week of inspecting a garden that was truly typical of California. Everything planted in it, from the sidewalk to the back yard fence, was a native of this state and from the lowest border to the many splendid specimen trees on various parts of the grounds, all were indigenous to the soil. It was hardly possible to believe that we have so many valuable ornamental trees and shrubs and the fact that there was nothing in the garden except what grows wild in different parts of this state made it doubly interesting. On the sidewalks were planted alternating Juglans Californica and Castanopsis chrysophylla, the latter the golden chestnut, with deep green leaves, yellow underneath, and the former the well known native walnut. Several large beds of Rhododendron Californicum and R. occidentale, although not in bloom at this season, showed quantities of brilliant foliage. A few plants of Agave Deserti and A. Shawii in earthen pots were very effective. Both these varieties are of a bluish color and the latter has red spines. There were fine specimens of Arbutus Menziesii, the well known Madrone; Arctostaphylos glauca, the equally known Manzanita; Heteromeles arbutifolia; the red Christmas berry, now in full fruitage; Libocedrus decurrens, our magnificent white cedar; Quercus chrysolepis, the mountain evergreen oak, and Quercus Garryana, a deciduous variety just commencing to shed its foliage. Several fine shrubs of the Cornus Nuttallii, the large flowered native dogwood, were also seen. A hedge made of Prunus ilicifolia and trimmed to the height of four feet was very effective. This is the so-called wild cherry and has leaves somewhat resembling those of the holly. Another hedge of Cupressus Guadalupensis was very noticeable. It somewhat resembles our C. macrocarpa except for the foliage, which is of a deep bluish color.

A considerable space is given to native bulbs of about twenty varieties but these are not blooming at present. Borders made of Hazardia detonsa, with its silvery leaves and big flowers, were very showy, also Pentstemon cordifolius is very effective. A half dozen varieties of cotyledon were used to advantage, C. lanceolata, C. Californica, C. edulis and C. pulverulenta, all in full bloom, also Delphinium cardinale, easily the most beautiful of our native larkspurs. A couple of clumps of Romneya Coulteri still in full bloom must not be overlooked and a large specimen of Elymus condensatus over ten feet high.

I could name a couple of dozen more native plants noticeable here but these will suffice to give an idea of what we have that is indigenous to California and is so seldom made use of by our gardeners. A few palms and roses are usually all that are seen even in our largest places and the fact that we have so many distinctive California shrubs of considerable value as decorative plants should not be overlooked by landscape architects in quest for something original or beautiful.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues dry, with plenty of fog and warm afternoons, and these conditions make it favorable for outdoor stock, such as violets and mums. The former are not overplentiful this week, although there are enough to supply the demand. Chrysanthemums are not as plentiful or as cheap as those of a year ago, nor is the quality up to the standard. Sweet peas hold their own very well and continue to be one of the best-selling flowers. Indoor stock is in fair supply, the only scarcity being fancy Beauties. Business is fair, with considerable funeral work to help along.

Various Notes.

A visit to the houses of F. Aebi, at Berkeley, shows good prospects for a large crop of Beauties in the near fu-

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

At Sarcxie, Mo., Wild Bros. Nursery Co. will conduct the business of J. B. Wild & Bros.

C. A. DOSWELL, formerly at Bluffton, Ind., is now landscape gardener at Winona park, Warsaw, Ind.

A HOLLAND peony grower, writing of general conditions, says that there is a very heavy demand from America and very likely all stocks, ready for sale, will be cleared out at good prices by fall shipments.

OUR POSSESSIONS.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has gone to the trouble of showing by statistics how slight are the business relations of the nurserymen of the United States with our "noncontiguous" possessions. During the years mentioned we sent nursery stock to the values stated to the following countries:

Alaska	$ 270	$ 405
Hawaii	1,693	1,400
Porto Rico	1,318	1,511
Philippines	24	...

In the same period we received nursery stock as follows from our possessions:

TEXAS AND A TEXAN.

It was in 1874 that A. W. Kerr started in the nursery business at McKinney, Tex., in which he was soon joined by John S. Kerr. After removing to Sherman, in 1889, the latter became sole owner of the business and has, in the sixteen years which have since elapsed, made a large impression on the horticultural affairs of the state. Not only did Mr. Kerr establish a large business through agents and a catalogue business, but he built up the wholesale end to good proportions. He has preached orcharding for other Texans, and he has practiced what he preached, having established large orchards near Pottsboro, in the Red river country, and in the peach belt in the eastern part of the state. In the early part of the present year the business was incorporated as the Commercial Nursery and Orchard Co., several of the force taking stock.

Mr. Kerr has been an active worker in the affairs of the American Association of Nurserymen and is rejoicing that the association is to visit Texas next June. "The growth and development of the entire southwest in the past decade 'is something marvelous,'" says Mr. Kerr. "King Cotton is gradually losing his sway, being supplanted by the diversification idea. Cattle, hogs, rice, fruit and truck growing are the principal factors in the new agriculture of the southwest. In this great movement, there has been nothing more marked than the great interest manifested in fruit-growing as one of the best means of diversification. Texas especially is taking a front rank among the fruit-growing states of the union. Last year there were perhaps 2,000 cars of fruit shipped from eastern Texas to the northern markets, and not more than one-third of the orchards already planted were in bearing. This year the output will be greatly increased on account of the young orchards coming in, and still not more than half the orchards that have been planted are bearing this season. In addition to these, large plants are continually being made. Texas has no fears at all of California in the stone-fruit business, and has little fear of Georgia, Louisiana and other states, because the quality, the time of ripening, and the accessibility to market for Texas peaches are such as to place her easily an equal competitor with any of these.

"These great strides in horticultural development have, as a matter of course, played into the hands of the nurseryman, and southwestern nurserymen are equal to the march of progress and have increased their plants and have shared a degree of prosperity not heretofore enjoyed or expected. With the increased demand for trees, there has been a rapid increase in nursery plantings, and this has been aided by better methods, better grading, and more activity in the creation of new varieties suited to our demands.

"Although great progress has been made among the nurserymen of the southwest, yet there is room for more improvement. We need to give more attention to producing a better class of stock, which requires better cultivation, and there is great need for improvement in the grading of stock. The southwest seems not to be up to the northern and western nurserymen in the matter of grading, but the force of circumstances is causing an improvement along this line.

"Much agitation has been going on concerning healthy stock and true-to-name stock. The nurserymen of the south are making progress along these lines also. From association with the nursery interests in the north and east, we believe there is room for improvement in the manner and conduct of the selling department. There is an effort on foot to have a better class of salesmen, better grades of stock, better business methods, and better prices. There is certainly room for improvement in the sales department.

ter prices, and that is the flooding of our country with wholesale price lists from foreign nurseries, direct to the planters, which causes a great demoralization of price levels. We feel that strenuous efforts should be put forth to stop this demoralizing and unbusiness-like procedure.

"Not only is there a demand for stone fruits in the southwest, but also for apple, pear, and shade trees, and berries, and ornamentals of every kind. The ornamental department especially is demanding more attention and it is being demonstrated that the nurseryman must provide a class of ornamental stock suited to the needs of the southwest, which has its peculiar climate and adaptabilities.

"It is proving eminently certain that the nurseryman sets the pace in the horticultural departments in this country, and is an important factor along these lines."

rose growers, and will, another year, be very widely catalogued and offered by our nurserymen, is the German variety, Frau Karl Druschki. The raiser of this remarkable rose was Peter Lambert, of Trier, Germany. The flowers, which are of the largest size, are of the most beautiful pure white, shell-shaped petals, opening well, very strong, and vigorous grower; in fact, it promises to be the best hardy white rose yet introduced, and one of the best novelties of recent years. Many of our best and most expert rose growers consider it far superior to Mabel Morrison (1878), Merveille de Lyon (1882), Margaret Dickson (1891), and Marchioness of Londonderry (1893); as it is certainly a much freer flowering variety than any of its predecessors. Wherever exhibited, it has taken first prizes, and many special medals."

AILANTHUS VILMORINIANA.

Among the many interesting new trees and shrubs is this new species of ailanthus. A small plant was acquired for the Kew collection last spring, and this has grown so well during the past season that we are now enabled to see how it differs from A. glandulosa and to judge of its merits, says the Gardeners' Chronicle. It is, indeed, very distinct from the latter in more than one respect. The most noticeable character, perhaps, is the presence of short spiny excrescences on the bark. Another is the thick pubescence on the under side of the leaflets. In A. glandulosa the under surface is shining green, but in this new species the pubescence is so plentiful as to make it dull. The leaflets have the pair of gland-tipped lobes at the base (one on each side) which are seen also in A. glandulosa, and which serve to distinguish these two trees from all other hardy trees with pinnate leaves. It promises to be quite as beautiful an ornament to our gardens as the older species, if not more so. It is interesting to note that, according to Père Farges, a decoction of the bark is useful for curing the cutaneous eruptions caused by handling the poisonous Rhus vernicifera. The species is a native of the Szechuen Province of China.

The Market.

Business continues fine and everyone is hustling, with lots of orders. Monday saw the wholesale houses cleaned out, with scarcely a bloom left after 10 a. m. The demand is all we can ask, but the supply could be better. Mums are coming in stronger all the time but at that there are not enough of the large ones to go around. Small ones are about equal to the demand.

Roses are slackening up very rapidly and look to be scarce for the next few weeks. The quality is first-class and the price has advanced a cent all around. Some very fine Beauties are coming in and sell out fast. Carnations are very scarce and it is almost impossible to fill orders. Violets are coming now and some good stock is seen. They average around 50 cents per hundred. Baby primrose brings the same price. Lilies of all kinds are fairly plentiful and sell well. The demand for greens is first-class and well taken care of.

Various Notes.

The preparations for our mum show are completed and we are looking forward to a fine exhibition this year. The club rooms are being cleaned and everything will be in good shape. The daily papers are giving us free advertising and there will no doubt be a large crowd.

Mrs. R. D. Ruttle is suffering from a broken arm, caused by falling down stairs.

There are rumors of a new retail store backed by Chicago capital.

It is likely that there will be a party of the local craft to visit the Indianapolis show.

The Market.

There has been quite an improvement in business the past week, and the dark weather shortened up stock considerably, the result being that prices have stiffened. Roses and carnations have improved in quality. Many of the Beauties coming in are cut so tight that they do not amount to much. Chrysanthemums are finer every day and stock has been cleaning up nicely at very reasonable prices. Up to the present there has been very little stock sold at the fancy prices of former years. Some very fine violets are coming in from the Hudson river district, and find ready sale at fair prices.

Various Notes.

The war of the Greeks is now going on between the rival stands on Fifth avenue. One is in the Arcade with a stand outside; the other is a street stand with a case right against the Arcade stand. The Arcade man fills his stand with rubbish and over it places this sign: "No fresh flowers sold outside; fresh stock in the Arcade." This sign is made very prominent, but the street man puts up his sign almost close enough to touch the other sign: "No fresh flowers sell inside; fresh flowers outside. We retail at wholesale prices."

The Schenley park show was opened Sunday, and the day being fine, immense crowds attended. The arrangement is very artistic.

Wm. P. Craig, of Philadelphia, was in the city the past week, booking orders for palms, etc. He had his bride with him.

Randolph & McClements had one of the largest wedding decorations of the season for Miss Sorg and Captain Drui-lard, U. S. A. They chartered an Adams Express car in which they hauled their palms, flowers and other paraphernalia for the purpose. Mr. McClements superintended the work, assisted by Fitzsimmons, Wilson and Crosby to arrange the flowers and a couple of their plantmen to arrange plant decorations.

A. W. Smith had charge of the Painter wedding Monday, which was one of the large weddings of the year.

Hoo-Hoo.

I HAVE been well pleased with the REVIEW and wish it great success; here is another dollar.—W. C. BROOKE, Chevy Chase, Md.

The Market.

There has been a shortage in stock the past week. All kinds of cut flowers have been scarce and this, together with a good demand, has brought prices up. The cold weather and disappearance of cut-door stock has had a good effect on trade. Roses are not equal to the demand and carnations are short in all varieties except Lawson. There is a good supply of chrysanthemums, which are selling well.

Various Notes.

Lawrence Schwager is able to attend to business again, having recovered from his recent illness.

The Alpha Floral Co. reports that their business for this month was fully double that of the same period last year.

The Hernden Seed Co. has put in an up-to-date cut flower department and will handle flowers in addition to their seed business.

It is reported that the W. L. Rock Flower Co. will erect a new range of houses the coming summer.

Charles Smith is building a greenhouse on East Seventh street, 27x85 feet, and will engage in the florists' business.

KAY-SEE.

WASHINGTON.

The next meeting of the Florists' Club will be held in Schmidt's hall, 516 Ninth street N. W., on November 7, at 8 p. m. This will be chrysanthemum night, when a good attendance and fine exhibit of choice flowers are assured. The club decided at its last meeting to award certificates of merit to new or meritorious plants or flowers that may be shown at any of its meetings in the future. Chrysanthemum growers are requested to send an exhibit for the mum night of the club; if addressed to Peter Bisset, Twin Oaks, Washington, D. C., they will be properly cared for and staged; they should be shipped so as to reach Washington on the morning of November 7, express charges prepaid.

Show Notes.

After quite a bit of wire pulling it is announced that Vice-president Fairbanks will make the opening speech at the flower show, Tuesday evening, November 14. This should prove a big drawing card. Forty pieces of advertising matter are being distributed throughout the state, besides the many programs which are mailed out to parties inquiring for them. The committee having charge of the entertainment for Thursday evening, November 16, says that everything is in readiness.

Henry Rieman has a lot of seedling chrysanthemums with which he expects to carry off the honors at the show. This is Mr. Rieman's strong line, and no doubt he has some surprises in store.

The down-town merchants have been requested to make preparations for the flower show by trimming up their windows for the occasion. Many of them have consented to do this, as plants will be furnished them free of charge by the flower show association.

A quantity of yellow and white chrysanthemums could be seen on the street Saturday, the day of the big football game between Purdue and Indiana Universities. One down-town dealer sold at least 300 yellow chrysanthemums.

NEW ORLEANS.

The Market.

As we neared November 1, with fresh, dry weather, the chrysanthemums improved, but the crop of outside flowers was short and under-glass plants were also not of the best. Chicago florists must have received many orders for mums, for we had to draw a good deal from the north to fill our All Saints' day demand.

The President's visit to New Orleans having been very short, the floral decorations were almost nothing. Our evergreen palmetto leaves from the woods, stalks of sugar cane, with balls of cotton and sprays of Spanish moss were mostly used. Still a few emblems were offered him. The postal employees handed to him a floral design three feet long by twenty-one inches wide, representing a letter. White carnations formed the body and the canceling lines were of violets. The circular date and the address were also made of violets. The address was Theodore Roosevelt, President, U. S. A. The post office clerks offered him a bouquet which crystallized in handy form all the products of Louisiana. His carriage was loaded with flowers given him en route. He ordered them sent to the Miliken Memorial hospital.

Business is improving. Department stores are exhibiting plants.

Various Notes.

P. M. Chopin has a fine display of plants and flowers at Fuerst & Krammer's confectionery store on Canal street.

J. Shindler & Co. report many advance orders for All Saints' day.

LOUISVILLE, KY.

The Kentucky Society of Florists has issued the program for its big exhibition to be held at the Masonic next week, November 7 to 11. Chrysanthemums and miscellaneous plants are to be staged on Tuesday, roses and carnations on Wednesday and table decorations, designs and novelties on Thursday. The prospects are for a very successful show. A. R. Baumer is president of the society and C. H. Kunzman, Jacob Schulz and Chas. W. Reimers are the show committee.

The Different Ways

You built a greenhouse because you saw a chance to make money.

You enlarge because it's no longer a question of chance, you can make more money.

You purchase your materials in any of three ways:

- From the cheapest concern;
- From a firm that's done other work for you satisfactorily;
- Or from a Manufacturer and Builder whose name stands for all that's high-class in materials and workmanship.

Then you either erect it yourself with local labor, or the manufacturer and builder sends his experienced men and they do a skilled job.

If you were going to buy a certain machine upon which your living depended, you would go a bit careful and look into its durability, whether it was constructed upon principles to produce the best returns. You might even talk it over with a man who was using another make; finally you would get a line on the reputation of the firm who made it!

Now it's exactly the same with a greenhouse, simply a machine so constructed as to turn out the best possible plant results.

A firm who has been building these plant machines for 50 years—who has erected some of the largest—one bearing the reputation of putting into them only the best materials—that's why you want to write to us before committing yourself.

You will want more houses next spring, so let us get it ready now, so you'll be ready then.

PEOPLE who know a good thing when they see it, and will take advantage of the same, must be possessed with good judgment and are generally successful. ANGELUS CHRISTMAS BELLS

Patented

COPYRIGHTED

March 15, 1904

NO BETTER BELL CAN BE MADE AT ANY PRICE, AND THE PRICE IS REASONABLE

Angelus and Alpha Bells are made in 2½, 5, 6, 7, 9, 12 and 15-inch sizes. For the convenience of those who want to see these Bells we will mail a 2½-inch Angelus Bell for 30 cents, and a 2½-inch Alpha Bell for 20 cents. Price lists on application.

We do not believe there is a town, however small, where a good business cannot be done with these Bells.

In reply to many inquiries, we wish to state that we do not manufacture paper bells, and do not intend to do so. We find they are utterly unsatisfactory; they accumulate dust and dirt to an incredible degree and lose their shape so that they soon lose all semblance to the shape of a bell. They satisfy neither buyer nor seller. They may be all right for 5 and 10-cent stores, where they are found in profusion, but not for florists. They are all played out with florists in the east, and will soon be played out in the west.

A medium priced Bell, but as good as the best as has ever been put on the market. Perfect and graceful in shape, bright and attractive in color. They are strongly and firmly made—easily handled—no chance for breakage.

THE EXHIBITIONS

CHICAGO.

At a recent meeting of the Chicago Florists' Club there was considerable discussion as to whether Chicago should this year have a one-horse flower show, as heretofore, or should have a two-horse show in keeping with modern tendencies. There seemed to be great unanimity of opinion and a two-horse show was confidently expected, but the exhibition which opened on Tuesday was neither one nor the other; it was a six-horse circus team show and, pursuing the metaphor a little further, each one of these steeds may be said to have been standing on its hind legs and prancing in time to the music.

Chicago has never had such a flower show as the present one and there have been few like it in this country. Its size is not its only remarkable feature. The Coliseum is the largest building in Chicago and affords more floor space than any other building in the west. It is filled to its full capacity. In fact, in the late days of the week when all the exhibits are in place, it will be found that without re-arrangement the aisles are too narrow to hold the crowds which will come. Tuesday was a miserable day so far as weather conditions go, but at four o'clock, when the show had been open only three hours, the box office had as much money as was taken in the entire first day last year. Tuesday evening the crowd was great and as word goes out of the wonders of the show the attendance will greatly increase.

This year's show abounds in novel features. It has been said that Chicago retailers had more enterprise in the matter of exhibiting than the retailers in any other city in the country. However this may be, Chicago retailers really never participated until the present show. There are nineteen who have booths and others were refused for lack of space. In fact, Manager Asmus states that many more exhibits than those of procrastinating retailers were declined with thanks. The retailers' exhibits occupy the space underneath the balcony all the way around the hall, with the exception of the ends, which are reserved for nursery exhibits and model back yards. It is worthy of note that no matter how much attention other features attract, the crowds have their backs to the center of the hall; they are gazing in admiration upon the retailers' showings. This does not imply that the retailers have gone to great expense. As a matter of fact their exhibits are less expensive than a few of them have had at previous shows, but one and all are artistically arranged and beautiful in the extreme. It is safe to say that this is a feature which a Chicago show will never again be without.

The nurserymen have never before participated in a flower show. This year four or five of them have garden scenes, lawns surrounded by hedges, walks bordered with specimen plants and each subject plainly labeled. It should be gratifying to them to see how the visitors are jotting down plant names in their notebooks.

The suggestion as to model back yards was a late one. It was the happy idea of James Keeley, managing editor of the Chicago Tribune. There was little time for its execution but two such yards occupy the larger part of the north end of the hall, and the nursery showings come in this class. The work of J. S. Wilson, of Vaughan's, is entitled to special recognition. The rear of a cottage is shown, with vine covered porch, with the back yard fence screened by plantings of hardy stock and the lawn dotted with beds of Baby Rambler roses and other suitable plants. Adjoining this the George Wittbold Co. has a space planted in a more rustic manner but none the less attractively. It has hedges, winding walks, trees and shrubbery and back of the whole is a smiling sky on canvas which adds immensely to the scene. It is safe to say that whatever good flower shows may have done in previous years, nothing has ever approached the benefit to the general trade which will come from this back yard idea carried out in a somewhat amplified form, as it will be in succeeding exhibitions, when time is afforded for the preparation of stock.

The public parks have never before contributed to flower shows on the scale of the present one. Lincoln park has a magnificent group of plants covering a space of probably 500 square feet. South parks have some of their best material and the west parks are also represented by groups of palms and foliage plants. These, in addition to the best plants from leading private conservatories, make the plant display all that could be desired.

The cut blooms of chrysanthemums do not impress one until he has spent some time in the show. They are widely scattered in the arrangement and their number is not apparent at first glance. But one does not need to spend more than a moment in the hall to realize that the quality was never so good as it is this year, and the number is great. The judges had a tough proposition in several of the classes, there being from four to six entries in each and quality so uniformly good that there was little opportunity for choice. It is notable that the old favorites of recent exhibitions are little in evidence, with the single exception of good old Major Bonaffon, which took first place for 100 yellow. The collections of one of a kind show quality never equaled in the west and both the first awards fell to the E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., with H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, second. The varieties were largely new foreign sorts and more of them in the exhibition class than in the commercial. Wm. Duckham was shown in form which would be a pleasure to the president of the Chrysanthemum Society, and to Chas. H. Totty, if they could have seen them; they would be compelled to revise their opinion that Duckham is not grown well in the west.

The one spot where the show could be improved is the specimen plants. They are as numerous as ever and quality is equal to the usual Chicago standard, but they are not what are seen at eastern exhibitions, particularly at Boston.

Manager Asmus repeated his good work of last year in handling the installation of the exhibition. The arrangement leaves nothing to be desired, unless it may be wider aisles, and these are only to be had by crowding the exhibits together. There was an idea that the Coliseum was too big for a flower show but that idea is dissipated.

The decorations consist of an overhead canopy of yellow and green, a relic of the horse show. The Geo. Wittbold Co. raised to a level a little above the balcony some twenty great hanging baskets of pine boughs which serve excellently where it had been feared that so high a building would cause the exhibits to appear dwarfed. The balcony rail is hung with wild smilax, serving to carry the decorative scheme down to where the retail florists take it up. Everybody praises the effect. Tables are used for only a few classes.

In the basement there is a refreshment room and in the annex a lecture room where popular talks on gardening subjects will be given each evening during the week by E. G. Routzahn and C. B. Whitnall. The annex is reached by passing through the exhibits of the nurserymen, which run out into the annex, relieving that somewhat bare room of its cheerless appearance. Here also is a demonstration of mushroom growing, a field of pumpkins and a number of other things not usually associated with a flower show and affording considerable contrast with the splendid display of orchids in the main hall. Here H. G. Selfridge and E. G. Uihlein meet again in spirited yet friendly rivalry. Mr. Selfridge's exhibit is a great bank covered with specimen plants in bloom, including a large number of varieties, staged in a more attractive manner than any heretofore seen. On the other side of the electric fountain is Mr. Uihlein's table, a huge mirror on which sit slender glass vases, each containing a cut bloom. The center vases are taller than those on the outside and the effect is very fine. Mr. Uihlein also has a glass case containing a very fine Phalaenopsis amabilis illuminated by an incandescent globe which makes it one of the striking features of the hall. There are also some splendid baskets of orchids.

The only carnations so far exhibited were 100 blooms of Victory which were brought by A. J. Guttman from New York. They were cut on November 5 and have made the long journey in perfect form. On Thursday the competitive classes for carnations come on.

In an exhibition of so great extent and variety, where the judges open the envelopes on not more than one-third the exhibits, it is manifestly impossible to note all the good things, but mention should be made of a group of plants from J. Rosenwald, a new exhibitor, of Vaughan's Baby Rambler, of Pierson's Elegantissima and of the valley from Bruns and Jurgens.

The Retailers' Exhibits.

As one enters the hall and passes around to the right, he finds the following retailers' displays:

Lubliner & Trinz, an open booth banked with foliage plants in front of which are several tall vases of chrysanthemums and roses.

E. Wienhoeber Co., an open garden scene with lawn in the foreground, the sides of specimen plants with a few cut flowers, at the rear a garden fence with the moon just peeping over the gate and back of it the dark blue sky with twinkling stars. The average visitor stops here some little time.

Bohannon & Conger, an open booth with a background of plants and tall vases of mums. At the sides and center are tables with handsome baskets and hampers of orchids, roses, Lorraine begonias and valley.

E. Hobbs Co., G. Wagner proprietor, a background of plants with tables of birch bark baskets and many styles of hampers containing a variety of small plants.

Sheridan Park Floral Co., an enclosed booth in the center of which is a cork bark tree on which a variety of orchids are growing. The surroundings are palms and ferns.

Muir, an enclosed booth, the background of plants, in the center a vase of cut flowers and on the ledge across the front, baskets of cyclamen, Baby Rambler, Lorraine, etc.

Klunder, an enclosed booth, the background and sides of plants, in the center a dinner table with candelabra, a wedding bell suspended over the table.

A. I. Simmons, an enclosed booth, with counter and tables which carry many baskets and hampers of plants such as every first-class florist sells in quantity, including some plants in pot covers of Mr. Simmons' own manufacture.

C. Frauenfelder, an open booth, backed by plants with a birch bark stand in the center carrying baskets and hampers of ferns, crotons, etc.

A. Lange, an open booth with the usual background of plants, the center a fine display of pans of Lorraine, valley, Baby Rambler, orchids and other plants.

H. C. Rowe, an enclosed booth with background of plants and tables and counter carrying baskets and hampers of plants and cut flowers, overhead a number of Hunt's Christmas bells illuminated by electric lights.

McAdams, an open booth, the features of which are tall vases of excellent chrysanthemums backed by plants and mirror.

Friedman, an open booth with illuminated electroliers at the side, two bay trees at the front center, with white ribbon leading back to a kneeling stool, the whole surrounded by a bank of green.

Mangel, a carpet of autumn foliage in an open booth with big vases of yellow mums tied with yellow ribbon.

The Geo. Wittbold Co., a rustic scene with autumn foliage, with a carpet of oak branches for a background.

W. J. Smyth, an open booth with a foil of green behind tall vases of chrysanthemums.

C. A. Samuelson, illuminated electroliers at the front, background of green, at the sides tables containing baskets and hampers of plants and cut flowers, the center a table with a tall vase of orchids. This one of the most attractive displays.

Schiller, an open booth outlined in plants, with tables carrying a large variety of baskets of plants, the center a tall vase of white chrysanthemums with a base of Scottii ferns.

J. F. Kidwell & Bro., an open booth banked with the best of their stock of decorative plants, the center a tall vase of Bonnaffon chrysanthemums.

There are no premiums for the retailers' booth displays but they will change their decorations to freshen them for each day.

Nurserymen's Exhibits.

Porter's Nursery has an evergreen hedge surrounding a sodded lawn on which are growing specimen evergreens.

Peterson Nursery has a privet hedge surrounding a lawn on which various trees and shrubs are shown, the walk encircling a fine English privet.

Swain Nelson & Sons have a winter scene, grounds covered with make-believe snow, the stock shown including a large variety of trees and shrubs.

Klehm's Nursery has a lawn carpeted with twigs of arbor-vitæ, with a hedge of berried shrubs.

Rose Day.

On Wednesday the rose exhibits came on. The showing was a remarkable one in view of the condition of rose crops. The display was larger than had been anticipated and the quality was excellent. An especially notable feature was the way Richmond outclassed Liberty. Peter Reinberg exhibited his new rose which has been named for Mrs. Marshall Field, and John Monson, of the Minneapolis Floral Co., exhibited his light pink seedling, which he has just named Miss Kate Moulton. Both received favorable consideration although not entered in competition. The awards on the roses will be found in the report of the judges in this issue.

Table Decorations.

The table decorations Wednesday were put on in the Annex, which goes further to show that the Coliseum of itself is too small for a flower show, instead of being too large. There are five tables. There are no premiums, but each exhibitor receives a gratuity. The decorations are to be changed daily as usual. The first day:

Bohannon & Conger had a low centerpiece of pink chrysanthemums.

Frauenfelder had a tall vase on his table, with Appleton chrysanthemums, and pompon chrysanthemums at the base of the vase.

J. L. Raske used Meteor roses for a low centerpiece, with corsages of violets.

Mangel had a low mound of small Bonaffon chrysanthemums.

Friedman's centerpiece was of daisies and adiantum loosely arranged on a mirror and interspersed with tiny green incandescent lights. It attracted much attention.

Each table was, of course, supplied with the usual napery.

Visitors.

The annual banquet of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held at the Coliseum Annex this, Thursday, evening at 8 o'clock. The visitors are all invited. Those who had registered up to Wednesday evening were:

S. W. Pike, St. Charles, Ill.; Geo. A. Rackham, Detroit; Fred Breitmeyer, Mt. Clemens; W. L. Rock, Kansas City; Jacob Rohr, Naperville, Ill.; A. J. Guttman, New York; R. A. hedge surrounding a sodded lawn on which are growing specimen evergreens.

Peterson Nursery has a privet hedge surrounding a lawn on which various trees and shrubs are shown, the walk encircling a fine English privet.

Klehm's Nursery has a lawn carpeted with twigs of arbor-vitae, with a hedge of berried shrubs.

Rose Day.

On Wednesday the rose exhibits came on. The showing was a remarkable one in view of the condition of rose crops. The display was larger than had been anticipated and the quality was excellent. An especially notable feature was the way Richmond outclassed Liberty. Peter Reinberg exhibited his new rose which has been named for Mrs. Marshall Field, and John Monson, of the Minneapolis Floral Co., exhibited his light pink seedling, which he has just named Miss Kate Moulton. Both received favorable consideration although not entered in competition. The awards on the roses will be found in the report of the judges in this issue.

Table Decorations.

The table decorations Wednesday were put on in the Annex, which goes further to show that the Coliseum of itself is too small for a flower show, instead of being too large. There are five tables. There are no premiums, but each exhibitor receives a gratuity. The decorations are to be changed daily as usual. The first day:

Bohannon & Conger had a low centerpiece of pink chrysanthemums.

Frauenfelder had a tall vase on his table, with Appleton chrysanthemums, and pompon chrysanthemums at the base of the vase.

J. L. Raske used Meteor roses for a low centerpiece, with corsages of violets.

Mangel had a low mound of small Bonaffon chrysanthemums.

Friedman's centerpiece was of daisies and adiantum loosely arranged on a mirror and interspersed with tiny green incandescent lights. It attracted much attention.

Each table was, of course, supplied with the usual napery.

The annual banquet of the Chicago Florists' Club will be held at the Coliseum Annex this Thursday, evening at 8 o'clock. The visitors are all invited. Those who had registered up to Wednesday evening were:

NEW YORK.

The New York show closed its doors on November 3 and the attendance, while nothing special the first days of the show, was a jam on the last evening. The show as a whole was generally considered better than last year, particularly in the orchid section, which was a magnificent display, the value of which could in no way be measured by the amount of the prize offered.

Chrysanthemums are always a fine feature and this year was no exception, the standard specimens and bush plants set up by C. D. Schaeffer, gardener to Richard Mortimer, Tuxedo, and Peter Duff, gardener to J. Crosby Brown, being especially fine. In cut blooms, A. Herrington was a heavy winner in the large vase classes, scoring first for fifty blooms one variety, fifty in three varieties, twenty-five yellow, twenty-five white, twenty-five pink, twenty-five any other color and twenty-five any 1904 variety. C. H. Totty was first for thirty varieties short stems, his varieties being mostly novelties. Among them were Beatrice May, Mrs. H. Partridge, Mrs. Heaume, May Seddon, E. J. Brooks, Mary Ann Pockett, Mrs. J. Dunne, Mersham Crimson, Mrs. F. F. Thompson and others. F. R. Pierson Co. was second in this competition with a fine exhibit of standard kinds and some seedlings.

The varieties set up in the large vase classes by Mr. Herrington were W. Duckham, Cheltoni, Harrison Dick, Col. Appleton and Mrs. Robinson. He scored first also in ten white, with Robinson; ten pink, with Duckham, and ten yellow with Appleton, all splendid flowers.

Thomas W. Head, superintendent for M. F. Plant, Groton, Conn., scored many firsts with a grand lot of flowers. His Mrs. W. Duckham were particularly fine and also Mrs. D. V. West.

Mr. Head was first in ten bronze, with Donald McLeod; six white, with Merza; six crimson, with S. T. Wright; six reflexed white, with Mrs. D. V. West; six reflexed yellow, with Mrs. W. Duckham; six reflexed pink, with Leila Filkins; six reflexed crimson, with Henry Barnes; five any variety, six any white 1904 variety, and eighteen blooms in three varieties.

Wm. Duckham was first in every class he entered: Ten blooms in variety, six any new yellow, six any new white, six in three varieties, eighteen in six varieties, some seven or more in all.

Other prominent exhibitors in the cut chrysanthemum classes were Chas. H. Totty, who was first for six Madam Carnot, six seedling pink and six seedling any other color. J. McNicoll was first for six Eaton, six Appleton and several other classes. Jas. Fraser was first in pink, in several classes with W. Duckham. F. R. Pierson Co. was first in several classes, with various seedlings.

Hardy chrysanthemums were represented in splendid shape by R. Vincent, Jr., & Son, White Marsh, Md.; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; Jos. Meehan and others. The exhibit of the first named is always a spectacular feature of the show, filling several hundred feet of bench space. A dozen of the best sorts in his collection were as follows: Jas. Boone, Stratagem, Dinizuler, Mrs. Porter, Cerise Queen, Golden Trophy, Ruby Queen, Boston, Lyndhurst, Aaron, Edna, Mrs. Vincent and Globe d'Or.

The groups of ornamental plants were very fine, Julius Roehrs Co. getting first for a group of ornamental foliage plants and also group of foliage and flowering plants. Roehrs also won the firsts for collection of dracaenas, collection of crotons and collections of Rex begonias and bay trees. Lager & Hurrell were first for collection of orchids and this group was the premier attraction of the show. Orchids were also largely exhibited by Julius Roehrs, Henry Siebrecht & Son and Clement Moore. The last named had a wonderful new hybrid cattleya named after himself that created much interest. Siebrecht & Son and F. R. Pierson Co. were large exhibitors of palms and stove and greenhouse plants, and the last named won out in a great competition for group of conifers shown in tubs. Bobbink & Atkins were large exhibitors in the hardy classes, showing conifers, bay trees and other specialties. Lehnig & Winnefeld were first for several classes of Lorraine begonias and cyclamen.

The cut flower classes in roses were not very well filled for a New York exhibition. W. Kleinheinz was first for twelve Beauty, L. A. Noe for twenty-five pink tea, twenty-five white tea, R. Vince for twenty-five yellow, C. H. Totty for twenty-five red, with Richmond, and Geo. Von Qualen twenty-five any other color, with Mrs. Ames.

In the carnation classes the exhibits were very fine, the Cottage Garden scoring first for collection of varieties showing fine vases of Octoroon, Mrs. Ward and Robt. Craig. For six varieties twenty-five blooms of each, Wm. Kleinheinz was first. For three varieties twenty-five of each, R. Vince was first with Fiancee, Roosevelt and Enchantress, beating Cottage Gardens, with Robert Craig, Alma Ward and Enchantress.

Violets were won by R. Vince in the singles and I. Seligman in the doubles.

J. H. Troy was awarded special prizes for dracaenas, boxwood, palms and other plants; John Lewis Childs, for palms, crotons and other stove plants.

The spineless cactus was on view, as was also the seedless apple and several other things with greater or less claims to abnormality. Ellwanger & Barry, Rochester, N. Y., showed hundreds of plates of apples and pears that were very fine, and there were very large exhibits of nuts, fruits, vegetables and miscellaneous stuff that hardly come in the range of floriculture, so I will not go into detail.

C. D. Schaeffer, gardener for Richard Mortimer, Tuxedo, New York, was awarded the Gardeners' Chronicle silver cup for the finest individual exhibit in the show, his large exhibit of specimen plants gaining him this honor. The exhibits in every class were good and few who have not seen it have any idea of the size of the show as a whole. Dr. Hexamer and his staff deserve every credit for being able to gather such a mass of material, and it is the sincere wish, I am sure, of everyone to hope they may long continue.

CHARLES H. TOTTY.

PHILADELPHIA.

The fall exhibition of the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society opened in Horticultural Hall last Tuesday evening, a peaceful scene of beauty in striking contrast to the exciting election scenes outside. The stairway was adorned by specimen foliage plants of great size and grand cut chrysanthemum blooms. Mrs. William Duckham, the new yellow, being near her William, which had the place of honor in the center. The chrysanthemum plants in the main hall were uniformly good, presenting a fine appearance, with a group arranged with Japanese and pompon flowers and foliage in the center.

The cut blooms of chrysanthemums were wonderful, an army of perfect flowers in every shade of color. These overflowed the foyer into the main hall and downstairs into the lower hall. An American seedling, a white somewhat resembling Colonel Appleton in form, was very fine. Another feature was an exhibit of twenty-five English varieties.

Dracena Godseffiana won the silver medal for the best foliage plant in the exhibition. Ficus pandurata and Croton Dayspring were of rare excellence.

The new rose, Etoile de France, was seen here for the first time, also a new form of Cattleya labiata. Some specimen heliotropes grown on stems three feet long were a novelty.

The ferns upheld their reputation, the Boston type and its descendants being more than usually prominent. PHIL.

BAY SHORE, N. Y.

The second annual exhibition of the Bay Shore Horticultural Society was held October 24 to 26 in Carlton opera house, which was filled to its capacity with the exhibits, which were largely from the private estates of the neighborhood. So conspicuous was one name on the list of premium winners that it brought to mind a famous phrase and it might easily have been said that here was another case of "James H. Hyde and associates." Following were the principal exhibitors and their gardeners: James H. Hyde, M. J. Connelan; Benjamin Stephens, M. Mullen; Miss C. S. Taylor, Thomas McKinley; Edwin Hawley, John Williams; Richard Hyde, Stephen Tott; W. L. Andrews, A. Roehen; Edwin Thorne, John Tobin; Miss M. M. Bourne, Louis Kratz, Jr.; Thomas Adams, B. Dietrich; Mrs. E. S. Knapp, K. Paprocki. E. P. Strong, president of the society, an amateur, beat out the professionals in a number of classes. Special mention should be made of the collection of vegetables staged by John Tobin; 310 varieties were included.

The F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, sent a collection of fifty varieties of dahlias.

TARRYTOWN, N. Y.

The show at Tarrytown, November 1 to 3, was the seventh annual and was quite up to the high standard of former years. According to visitors from other sections, it was easily the best show held within a considerable distance of New York, and for quality of blooms it was claimed to be ahead of New York itself. The principal winners in chrysanthemum cut blooms were Girard Foster, Lenox, Mass., Edwin Jenkins, gardener; Samuel Untermyer, Yonkers, John Featherstone, gardener; Wm. Rockefeller, Geo. Middleton, gardener; Joseph Eastman, Wm. Scott, gardener; and Frederick Potter, Ossining, Wm. G. Roberts, gardener. The best blooms shown were Lady Hopetoun, Wm. Duckham, Cheltoni, Emily Mileham, Chrysanthemum Wm. Duckham as Shown at Madison, N. J., by A. Herrington.

Donald McLeod, Ben Wells, Mrs. Weeks, F. S. Vallis, Janet Lady Clark, Mrs. D. V. West, Guy Hamilton and Lord Salisbury.

In roses, the principal prize winners were Mrs. Geo. Lewis, James Ballantyne, gardener; W. A. Burnham, F. Reynolds, gardener; Howard Willets, White Plains, A. Weisenberger, gardener, and W. D. Sloane, Lenox, Mass., F. Heeremans, gardener.

In carnations, the Cottage Gardens, Queens, N. Y., Frederick Potter, Mrs. M. E. Sands, Ardsley, N. Y., Thomas Lee, gardener; W. D. Sloane and Mrs. O. B. Jennings, Fairfield, Conn., Oscar Carlson, gardener, were the most successful exhibitors, and the varieties most prominent were the three Lawsons, Robert Craig, Alma Ward, Victory, Pink Paten and Enchantress.

In the plant classes, the principal prize winners were Samuel Untermeyer, Mrs. J. B. Trevor, Mrs. Geo. Lewis and Joseph Eastman. The plants, especially foliage, were exceptionally fine.

There was an exceptionally fine display of vegetables and fruits. In the former Martin J. Bell, Sparkill, was the largest and most successful exhibitor, while in fruits Samuel Untermeyer, Mrs. J. H. Whitehouse, Irvington, A. Fallon, gardener, and Martin J. Bell were well to the front.

A feature of the second day was the dinner table decoration, the contest lying between Thomas Lee and John Woodcock. The former used crimson and the latter pink. Both tables were very neat and effective. The lady judges decided on the crimson as first.

The judges were Peter Duff, Orange, N. J.; John Shore, Harrison, N. Y.; S. Carlquist and A. H. Wingett, Lenox, Mass.

WM. SCOTT.

ORANGE, N. J.

The eleventh annual exhibition of the New Jersey Floricultural Society was held in Berkeley Hall, October 30 and 31, and was a most successful affair. There were some twenty-five exhibitors, mostly the gardeners on the private estates in the vicinity, and the show put up was worthy of the increased attendance which resulted from keeping the show open two days instead of one. J. Crosby Brown was the principal prize winner. Others who received awards were Sidney and Austen Colgate, William Runkle, William Barr, A. B. Jenkins, H. A. Potter, O. D. Munn, Stewart Hartshorn, M. M. Brown, F. H. Presby, George Smith, T. A. Gillespie and Mrs. William Pierson.

Lager & Hurrell staged a fine lot of orchids, Guttman & Weber Carnation Victory, and the F. R. Pierson Co. a large display of dahlias, each receiving a certificate of merit. The awards were made by Joseph A. Manda, A. W. Bodwell, Edward Thomas, William Reid, Detrick Kindsgrab, Malcolm MacRorie, William E. Bennett, Peter Duff and George Smith.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y.

The eleventh annual exhibition of the Dutchess County Horticultural Society was held in Columbus Institute, November 1 and 2. Competition was close, there being as many as six entries in some of the classes. Wm. G. Saltford was the largest exhibitor and principal prize winner. He had several non-competitive groups and special exhibits besides those in scheduled classes, and was highly commended for the showing made.

C. F. Bahret was the winner in each of the open classes for violets. Sloan Bros. had some fine carnations.

Premium winners among the private growers were W. P. Clyde, H. Osterhoudt, gardener; Archibald Rogers, Thos. P. Conners and T. Talhot, gardeners; F. R. Newbold, Fred Sanger, gardener; Winthrop Sargeant, F. E. Whitney, gardener; F. W. Vanderbilt, H. J. Allen, gardener; Ogden Mills, Jos. Blair, gardener; Edward Jenkins, Lenox, Mass.

The attendance was excellent and it may be said that the exhibition was a greater success than the most successful of its predecessors.

RED BANK, N. J.

The eighth annual exhibition of the Monmouth County Horticultural Society, which was held November 1 and 2, was a great success in every particular. The classes were all well filled, and in many there were six or seven entries. The blooms were beyond all expectations and competent judges pronounced it one of the best shows ever held in the east. More out-of-town exhibitors showed than on any other occasion, while the local gardeners vied with each other in making the exhibition most attractive.

On thirty-six blooms, six varieties, William Turner, gardener to M. C. D. Borden, captured the first prize and George H. Hale, gardener to E. D. Adams, second. The same exhibitor also scored on twenty-five varieties. On eighteen blooms in six varieties, N. Butterbach, gardener to C. N. Bliss, was first and Mr. Hall, gardener to S. B. Guggenheimer, Elberon, second. For twelve varieties the same awards were made. On two vases arranged for effect, Mr. Turner won first, and Mr. Hale second. On group of chrysanthemum plants, Mr. Butterbach was first and Anthony Bauer, gardener for D. O. Day, Deal, was second.

On three bush plants, specimen bush plant, three plants of Garza and on group of foliage plants, H. A. Kettel, gardener to Jacob Schiff, captured first prize. George H. Hale was second on the first three classes and Mr. Hall on the last. On six specimen ferns, Mr. Hale took first, Mr. Butterbach second. On one specimen fern, Mr. Hall was first, Mr. Hale second.

On Beauty roses, Mr. Hale was first, Mr. Butterbach second; on Brides, Mr. Kettel first, Mr. Bauer second; on any other variety, Mr. Hall first, Mr. Hale second.

On carnations, Mr. Turner was first for four colors, Mr. Robinson for white. A beautiful red carnation, Victory, was exhibited by A. J. Guttman, New York, which received the society's certificate.

On double violets, George Kuhn, gardener to Dr. E. Parmley, was first for 200 Marie Louise; William Dowlen, gardener for Fritz Archelis, second. The same awards were made for singles.

On greenhouse grapes, Mr. Turner was first and Mr. Hale second. The winners in apples and pears were George Kuhn, Robert Kennedy, H. A. Kettel, William Dowlen and W. W. Kennedy.

On best collection of vegetables, George

Kuhn captured first and James Kennedy, gardener for G. W. Young, of Deal, second; William Dowlen, third. Other winners in vegetable classes were Messrs. Hale, W. Kennedy, Butterbach, McIntosh and Turner.

The attendance at the exhibition was the best ever and from a financial standpoint the society can congratulate itself. B.

CYCAS REVOLUTA.

I bought two large cycas stems and planted each in a half barrel. They were about three feet above the tub and with the soil weighed about 400 pounds each. One tub went to pieces in handling and I found every root rotten. Will you please tell me what to do with the one that has no roots left but is green at the top? How should cycas be cared for? Some say shade, some full sun; some say a small pot, some a big one.

F. S. W.

The cycas in question seems to have been overpotted, and at the same time was kept too wet, this combination causing the roots to rot.

The best course now would be to wash off all the old soil, then trim the dead roots with a sharp knife, and finally to repot the trunk in as small a pot as possible, ramming the soil firmly. Then place the plant in a greenhouse having a night temperature of 60 to 65 degrees, and only water enough to keep the soil just damp. If the roots are all rotten it is probable that the leaves may be lost during the winter, though this may not occur, and the trunk will be likely to form roots enough to induce a new growth of leaves next spring. Keep the water out of the crown of the plant during the winter, as it might rot the crown while in this dormant condition.

A well established cycas may safely be put outdoors during the summer, but the leaves will sometimes bleach a little from exposure to the full sun, and those who purpose using the leaves for funeral designs prefer to keep the plants in partial shade during the hot weather.

These plants seldom make any growth of leaves in the winter, and a plant that is healthy and well rooted may be kept in a temperature 10 degrees lower than that suggested above without suffering any injury.

From the description given it is probable that this particular plant might be put in a 12-inch or 14-inch pot, and this would be enough pot-room for about two years, after which it would be helped by a shift into a larger pot or tub, provided that the plant regains its health and makes plenty of roots. W. H. TAPLIN.

SOME OF THE NEW SORTS.

William Duckham.

The illustration on another page depicts a vase of this variety as it was set up by A. Herrington at Madison, N. J., show on October 26, and everyone who saw it agreed that it was a wonderful exhibit. The stems were five feet long and every flower measured from twenty-eight to thirty inches in circumference and absolutely full to the center. These flowers were produced from crown buds taken August 15 or thereabouts, and I cannot help thinking that any grower who grows his plants right and gets a bud as near that time as possible will be successful in handling this variety and concede it first place as an incurved pink, either for exhibition or commercial use.

Beatrice May.

Beatrice May is the grand white which scored 95 points, judged by both exhibition and commercial scale, which record I do not recall seeing approached in the annals of the C. S. A. The plant is a dwarf grower, three feet with me, and in foliage, stem, size, finish and every other essential it seems to me it leaves absolutely nothing to be desired. Crown buds taken August 16 produced pure white flowers. Terminals taken in September showed a blush tint, but even the terminal produces a phenomenal flower. As a white Beatrice May has a friend in every one who saw it. One valued friend and correspondent, who ordinarily is a most dignified and eminently practical individual, broke out into poetry on seeing it and produced the following:

Oh, Beatrice May!
You're lovely as the day;
Your color so white,
Your foliage so bright;
You are the best mum out today.

Viola.

Viola is a reflexed pink that makes a very deep flower. The color is good and it is showing sterling merits. In growth it is very free and kind, but rather tall, five to six feet. It created a good deal of favorable comment at the New York show last week, where it was shown in the short vase classes.

Mrs. D. Willis James.

Mrs. D. Willis James is an earlier variety and was one of several given a certificate of merit by the New York Florists' Club on October 9. The habit is very good, and stem and foliage perfect. The flower, by present-day standards, is inclined to be small, but due allowance must be taken of its earliness. The color is very beautiful and attractive, being a bright chestnut with golden reverse running in the late buds more toward scarlet.

Mrs. Wm. Knox.

Mrs. Wm. Knox, noted as the finest yellow in Australia, produces a beautiful flower, but rather long in the neck, which makes it unsuitable for the long vase classes. Another year, with a longer season of growth, and better stock to work on, I hope to see Knox improve greatly over present showing. When one has giants like Appleton, F. S. Vallis and Mrs. E. Thirkell to come up against, a yellow has to show exceptional qualities to win out.

T. Richardson.

T. Richardson is immense in size of flower, size of foliage and petalage. The color, bluish white, is very beautiful, being the shade of Enchantress pink. Commercially, perhaps, it is too delicate in color, but if you want a big flower with a stem like a young tree, and foliage like cabbage, try Richardson and you will get it.

E. J. Brooks.

E. J. Brooks will displace all the rosy purple varieties, of which Carrington has stood for so long as the king pin. Brooks is altogether a stronger grower than Carrington, makes a larger flower and has a better color. The flowers are perfectly globular in shape when finished, and stem, foliage, height of plant and habit leave nothing to be desired. Brooks needs very little feeding because it is such a strong grower. And buyers should make a note of that, because one is tempted sometimes to overfeed a plant when it spreads out its luxuriant foliage and shows that it likes it.

Other Novelties.

As a red Mrs. H. Partridge is valuable chiefly because it will not burn in sunlight, all my flowers having developed without losing a petal in a house that was not shaded. Those growers who have lost many flowers from this cause will appreciate this as much as anything in Mrs. Partridge, and when combined with the fact that it comes equally well from any bud, either crown or terminal, makes this the most easily handled variety in its color in sight today. Partridge is a splendid grower and will not run over three and one-half feet, if planted in May, and as a pot plant will be very popular.

Mrs. John E. Dunne was certificated last week as an exhibition variety, and as seen at the New York show was universally admired. This variety won the silver gilt medal in Melbourne, Australia, last year, and should be grown by every lover of a beautiful flower. The color is a reddish salmon, or perhaps deep old rose would express it better, and, being a true Jap, the reflexed petal shows off the color beautifully. The habitat of the plant is grand; strong stem, dark heavy foliage and a short neck. Mrs. Dunne will be seen next year in every exhibition in the country.

Mrs. G. Heaume, also certificated by the C. S. A., is one of the easiest "doers" I ever handled. I have mentioned it before in these notes, so need not go much into detail. It is a flower of the largest size, salmon buff in color and comes true and kind on any bud, from an early crown to a terminal. The first bud produces a bloom almost straw yellow, but a later crown gives a lovely, delicate shade that is very pleasing.

Merstham Crimson is well named and is the only crimson I know of that naturally reflexes every petal, so that the color shows evenly all through the flower. It is a fine grower and, while some petals were burned with the sun, it is not nearly so bad in this respect as S. T. Wright or Maynell. The early crown produces a fine flower, but the neck is too long and weak to stand erect, and I find a late crown or even terminal produces a much more satisfactory flower. The early bud shows a golden tip on the petal, which incurves just a little on the end, but a later bud shows only a solid color. It is a splendid keeper.

Mary Ann Pockett made only a moderate growth all summer, but the flower was a pleasant surprise, for it developed in great shape, and the color was very taking, Indian red, with a golden tinge on the reverse of the petal. The plant does not go over three feet in height this year, and it will be fine for front benches.

Mary Seddon is another very dwarf variety, and I think another year will show up finely, as the color is a very pure white and stem and foliage perfect.

W. Wells will also be in it next year. June propagated stock has produced very satisfactory flowers and it is only reasonable to suppose that, given an earlier start, it would do correspondingly better.

Possibly the most phenomenal of all the novelties this year in the east is a pink seedling of Messrs. Dailedouze Bros. This variety was grown and set up by Mr. Duckham at the Madison, N. J., show and simply amazed everyone. The color is a deep, splendid pink, somewhat deeper than the old Morel used to come when in its prime, and the petal is purely reflexing, showing the color up magnificently. In size it is the largest flower I have ever seen, and that is saying a good deal, and the petals hang right down to the foliage. There is no neck to speak of and the flower seems to rest on top of a pyramid of green. The foliage and stem are an exact replica of Col. Appleton, and if this variety has a single fault, time has yet to reveal it. C. H. TOTTY.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.Work of the Committees.

NEW YORK, October 31.—Chrysanthemum T. Richardson, blush, Japanese type, exhibited by Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., scored 86 points exhibition scale.

Mrs. John E. Dunne, terra cotta, Japanese type, exhibited by Charles H. Totty, Madison, N. J., scored 88 points exhibition scale.

Mrs. Geo. Beach, yellow, sport of Mrs. Swinburne, exhibited by W. Duckham, Madison, N. J., scored 87 points commercial scale.

Cincinnati, November 4, No. 34-13-03, bright pink, silver reverse, extra fine combination, Japanese incurved, exhibited by Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., scored 90 points commercial scale. No. 16, pink, incurved, exhibited by E. G. Hill Co., Richmond, Ind., scored 83 points commercial scale.

FORCING GLADIOLI.

Forcing gladioli at a reasonable profit is a subject which will admit of considerable discussion, for the reason that so far as I am able to ascertain, most florists use this flower to fill in vacant spaces, especially among carnations which have been destroyed by stem-rot and other diseases, and it being a catch crop, more attention has been given to securing as cheap a bulb as possible, rather than the best varieties and properly grown stock.

No matter whether the gladiolus is grown among other plants or by itself, the grower should use selected stock, the same as with any other bulb or seed. The best tested varieties upon the market at the present time are as follows: Shakespeare, May, Augusta and, for mixed light colors, the Silver Trophy strain, section two. For shades of red and pink, I do not know of any to highly recommend. The old variety, Brenehleyensis, will force well but the flowers are too small. I have several dark shades under test and hope to be able to report upon these another season.

Before forcing, the bulb should be allowed to thoroughly cure; it needs a rest the same as any other bulb. I would not advise planting before the middle of November or first of December. With ordinary weather conditions, most of the above varieties should flower from thirteen to fourteen weeks after planting. In planting in the benches the bulbs should be placed at least two inches below the surface, and if the soil in the bench is six inches deep, I would advise planting a depth of three inches. By doing this the plants are not so liable to bend after coming into bloom.

Bulbs once forced are not damaged if allowed to ripen in the bench. If the space is needed, carefully loosen the soil when removing the bulbs and heel in the ground, which, if done, ninety-five per cent of such bulbs will thoroughly ripen.

CARNATION NOTES.—EAST.

Marketing the Product.

Whether you are a wholesaler or retailer of your product, it is of the utmost importance that every effort be made to place your goods before the buyer in the most attractive manner and also in the freshest state possible.

This can be done much easier and better by laying out the work of cutting, grading, counting, etc., according to some system. That is, have a regular time for cutting, appoint certain help to do certain parts of the work, make each one responsible for something. Arrange it to suit yourself, but by all means have a system and stick to it.

Our practice is to make two cuts a day, one before 8 in the morning, the other about 4 in the afternoon. The afternoon cut, which is usually the larger, is used to fill orders going out the following day. Orders arriving late in the day are filled with the early morning cut. Any left-overs are either used in design work or sold for what they are.

Always use a sharp knife in cutting blooms, making a slightly slanting upper cut through the stem, and bear in mind the fact that every second of time the fresh-cut end is exposed to the air, the means of free passage of water into the stem is being reduced, so have your system provide against injury from this source. A good plan is to have vases of water distributed at intervals along the bench.

In the effort to supply large blooms, many carnations are left on the plants too long. Better cut when three-quarters developed, letting the consumer have at least a fraction of the "come out" and all the "out."

Do not crowd too many in a vase, but arrange loosely. The more stems in a vase, the less water, to be sure, but water is cheap and so are vases when it is considered how long they last. Have the water in which blooms are to be put about the temperature of the house where grown. Five degrees either way will matter little, but the point is not to chill them suddenly by plunging the stems in ice water, and the only flower I know of which should be placed in tepid water is the poinsettia.

Store the vases of cut blooms where no draughts will reach them, but not where the air is stagnant or laden with other odors. Keep the temperature not over 50 degrees or under 45 degrees. Change the water daily and at least once a week give the vases a good inside scrubbing and rinsing.

No matter how well the blooms have been grown, careful attention to all the details connected with proper handling of same is necessary to give your product the stamp of quality.

GEORGE S. OSBORN.

CARNATION STEM-ROT.

Perhaps the worst difficulty which carnation growers have to contend with at the present time is the presence of stem-rot. There are at least two species of fungi involved in this trouble, one caused by fusarium, which produces what is known as the dry rot, and the other by a fungus termed rhizoctonia, which causes the so-called wet rot. Practical growers state that the wet rot is the more common of the two, but in my section of the country I find much more dry rot than wet.

It is only within recent years that we have heard very much about any of these stem-rots, and in my opinion the prevalence of these rots has kept pace with the modern methods of forcing. With the old system of cultivating carnations, where less forcing was practiced, the stems were sufficiently hardy to become apparently immune to stem-rot. Whether this is the whole cause or not I do not know, but I think this at least accounts for a large amount of the increased stem-rot.

I am of the opinion, therefore, that remedial measures must be based upon modification of the cultural methods, or by breeding and selecting more hardy varieties. The sterile fungus rhizoctonia can be absolutely controlled by heating the soil, or what is termed sterilizing. Our numerous experiments with this fungus have shown conclusively that when soil is sterilized rhizoctonia is eliminated. If the carnation cuttings, however, should happen to be placed in soil outdoors which contained this fungus, sterilizing would be of little value.

This latter remedy, however, in my opinion, is of little use in connection with the dry stem-rot, since fusarium fungus bears spores profusely, and these spores are wafted about by the wind and are likely to be found everywhere. Moreover, according to our experience in growing aster seedlings in sterilized soil, we found that there is a larger percentage of stem-rot occurring from fusarium where the plants were started in flats in the greenhouse in sterilized soil than where the plants were started in ordinary soil outdoors. In our opinion this was due to the fact that the aster seedlings in the sterilized soil were more tender and succulent and were therefore more susceptible to stem-rot than those grown in a different temperature outdoors.

GEORGE E. STONE.

CUTTINGS.

The style of cutting preferred by most growers is the three-eyed cutting. This gives two eyes above the sand and one at or near the base of the cutting.

A keen edged knife should be used and the cut should be short and clean, avoiding a long slice, as the shorter and cleaner the cut so much quicker will the callus form and the arrangement of the root will be more perfect. The most perfect arrangement of roots is when the rootlets are in a whorl and this can only be attained by being careful in making a clean, short cut.

The depth of sand or other propagating medium should be about four inches after being pounded firm and thoroughly moistened. With a rather thick-bladed knife draw a straight line across the sand, making the bottom of the cut reach half-way to the bottom, so that the base of the cutting will be as near as possible half-way between the surface and the bottom, thus securing a uniform amount of heat and moisture at a point where these essentials are least liable to fluctuation.

The cuttings should then be put in about one inch apart, taking care to see that each cutting reaches the bottom of the cut. The sand should then be packed firmly around them and the whole bench thoroughly watered. Beauties, owing to their heavy foliage, will require more room.

The bench should only be shaded during bright sunshine and the shading removed as soon as the sun ceases to shine on the bench. The temperature of the sand should be 60 or 62 degrees, with a house temperature of 50 or 52 degrees. This low temperature of the house is necessary to keep the buds from starting and making wood while root formation is in progress.

Some growers use a higher temperature, both in the sand and in the house, in order to work off the batch in shorter time but the time thus gained is lost when the young stock is potted. The cooler handled stock after being potted goes to work at once and soon makes up for lost time, both in size of plant, quality of foliage and general constitution.

A careful examination of the condition of the sand every morning before watering is absolutely necessary, as the young stock is very sensitive to overwatering and cannot survive a drying out. During bright weather the bench should be sprayed two or three times a day to keep the foliage fresh and crisp, as the moisture on the foliage is a great factor in helping to produce a good and uniform strike.

After twenty-eight or thirty days of this kind of treatment the cuttings will be showing a sufficient quantity of roots to require potting.

RIBES.

EFFECTS OF SULPHUR.

I had an accident in my houses of Brides and Maids by sulphur gas. On account of the weather being so mild I could not use sulphur on the pipes, as I was firing with hot water, and could not get the pipes hot enough to give any fumes, so I have been bothered with mildew more or less. So I had an oil stove and would boil sulphur every morning. Yesterday I spilled some on the stove and it caught the pan. Now I would like to know what I must do. I have already cut them down to about twelve inches of the soil. Will it pay me to keep the plants or throw them out and plant with new stock and can I expect any blooms by the holidays? The roses were two-year-old stock and in very good health.

C. L. B.

These roses might eventually recover but the chances are that by the time they did recover the season would be over. Sulphur applied in this manner, if it does not kill, leaves the plants in such a debilitated condition that they are seldom worth bothering with.

I should advise throwing them out and try to secure some strong plants of such strong and rapid growing varieties as Kaiserin and Chatenay. The prospects for a holiday cut, even from the best you can procure, will be poor, but by nurturing and encouraging them during the dark weather they may produce a fair cut during spring and at Easter.

It is safer to use the sulphur blower, though it has to be done three times a week, than to run any risks with sulphur in a state of fusion.

RIBES.

ROSE LEAF-SPOT.

My roses appeared healthy up to a week ago, when numerous spots appeared on some of the plants and on others they turned yellow and are dropping, some plants being dead. I send a sample of the foliage. I notice a multitude of small white insects in the soil. What are they and what shall I do for this house?

B. L. B.

These roses are infested with the fungus Cereospora rosæola, or rose leaf-spot, a rather uncommon trouble and not very difficult to get rid of.

This fungus manifests itself by producing spots on the foliage very much resembling glass burns. A careful examination of these spots will show that they are covered with a very fine gray matter and that the edges of the spots are encircled by a purple border which is continually increasing its area.

By reason of its very quick action this disease, if uncontrolled, can do a lot of damage in a very short time, and, like most other fungoid troubles, it is very contagious. The very act of syringing is sufficient to disseminate the spores through a whole section and any current of air is capable of transporting the spores from one plant to another on a bench.

The remedy is to pick off all infested leaves and burn them. Spray with the carbonate of copper mixture (cupram), using five ounces of the carbonate of copper to three quarts of ammonia and sixty gallons of water. Use a nozzle that makes a very fine spray and spray the upper and under sides of the leaves thoroughly. This should be practiced twice a week until the trouble disappears.

Those small insects in the soil are probably the larvæ of thrips. While in this stage they are very difficult to reach with any kind of fumes, as they burrow very quickly to escape the fumes. Fumigating twice a week with tobacco will catch each brood as they develop into the perfect insects, as in this state the least puff of tobacco, if it can be made to reach them, is certain to kill. Fumigating with cayenne pepper is also a sure method of keeping them in subjection.

RIBES.

rooted later, make the finest plants. The Turnford Hall type is likely to be more popular than any other when better known.

Bulbous Stock.

There is not a great deal of sale for either Paper Whites or Roman hyacinths while mums have the field, but some sales for Thanksgiving are usually made. It does not take these long to come into flower if placed in a warm, moist house. When opened remove to a cool house or even to the flower room to harden. Do not forget to give an occasional watering to the later batches of bulbs. One futile cause of failure is that they give the bulbs a soaking after potting, cover them with soil or ashes and neglect to give them any more until removing them to force. Bulbous stock needs a good deal of water. Remember that the pots are filling rapidly with white, fleshy roots and a withholding of water just when it is most needed is bound to cause serious injury.

Lilies.

It is not yet too late to pot up lilies of the longiflorum or Harrisii type for Easter. The great festival next year comes on April 15. That leaves about five months in which to flower the bulbs from time of potting, which is none too long a period. We do not advocate potting in small pots and shifting into larger ones. Better give them 5-inch or 6-inch pots at once. Always place the bulb sufficiently low to allow of a liberal top dressing of loam for the numerous roots which start from the

TIMELY REMINDERS.

Cyclamen.

Additional greenhouse space will soon be at liberty, as chrysanthemums are cut out. While the cyclamens will still do in frames for a few weeks, if well looked after and protected on severe nights, it is unwise to keep them out after the middle of November. Give them a light position but not too sunny. There are often places where there is no room for a bench but where a narrow shelf can be fixed up and it is surprising what a lot of stock can be stored in this way. If a front bench is at command, in a house with a minimum temperature of 45 degrees, it will answer well. Spread a good layer of tobacco stems among them to keep down thrip and aphids. Do not syringe overhead, and it will pay to use the watering pot in lieu of the hose. When the plants are pushing roots freely around the sides of the pots, give an occasional dose of weak liquid manure or a sprinkling of some reliable fertilizer, like Clay's. Do not neglect seedlings coming along. Prick them off as soon as they can be safely handled, in a light, rather sandy compost. Seed sown will still give nice plants for next year.

Freesia.

While freesia is not in very heavy demand in the markets, early batches realize good prices, especially if in time for Christmas or New Year's. To get them in flower for the earlier date give the plants a shelf or bench in a house where a night temperature of 55 degrees is maintained. Remember they need copious supplies of water, no matter whether in flats, pans, or pots. Saucers should be used except for flats. They appreciate doses of liquid manure but do not like it too strong; it will cause a browning on the ends of the leaves. They are also easily injured by fumigation but will stand tobacco papers without injury. Late batches can be held in a cold house or even in frames for some time. Freesias are excellent for design work and those with a local trade can scarcely afford to be without them.

Lorraine Begonias.

Some of these are now sufficiently well bloomed to be quite salable. If they have been grown along in a moderately warm house give them one now where a minimum of 50 degrees is kept. Stand them well up to the light; sunlight will not harm them in the least. It is a good plan to suspend a number over the paths by wire hangers. Use care in watering. Give liquid stimulants occasionally and you will have beautiful plants for Christmas.

It is rather early yet to start propagating for another season, but about December 1 is a good time to commence inserting leaves in sand in a close propagating frame. Cut off a good piece of stalk with the leaf. With care nearly all will root and throw up a number of young shoots. These, when base of the flower stems. Unlike the Dutch bulbous stock, lilies are better kept a trifle on the dry side until the pots are well filled with roots. One of the prime causes of so many sickly looking plants is an overplus of water in the early stages of growth.

Early potted bulbs for Christmas flowers should soon show the buds. It takes about forty days from the time they show until flowers are expanded in a temperature of 60 degrees at night. Syringe freely and see that green aphids does not get any foothold.

Geraniums.

Do not neglect geranium cuttings in the rush of other work. They need practically no water for several months. Pick off decaying foliage and remove any damped-off stock. A shelf well up to the sunlight is what suits them. Old stock plants potted up late will also need a little picking over. Do not push them under the benches, as is too often done. Give them a place in the sun and keep rather dry for some time. Early in the new year water more freely and you will get plenty of nice cuttings to root in heat.

Have you ever tried growing a batch of nice doubles and singles in 5-inch or 6-inch pots for winter blooming? Keep the flower trusses picked off until the chrysanthemum season is partially over. For Thanksgiving or Christmas sales they are very attractive, for about everybody feels that he or she can manage a geranium. Narrow, light shelves on the sides of a carnation house, where the atmosphere is fairly dry, suits them admirably.

Primula Obconica.

There are now some very fine strains of this pretty primrose and in spite of the fact that the leaves poison some people, no more useful plant is grown. It is of such easy culture, produces such a continuous wealth of bloom and is so salable as a pot plant that the retail florist can scarcely afford to overlook it. The flowers of the white varieties are also very serviceable in funeral work. The plant is by no means fastidious in its wants, for it does equally well in a cool north house and a warm, sunny one. It requires more feeding than Primula Sinensis, cow manure water being good for this purpose. Pots from five to six inches in diameter produce good plants, although larger sizes are needed to give the finest specimens. It does not pay to carry old plants over, nor yet to divide them. Nothing like seedlings of a good strain for vigor and floriferousness.

Spiraea Japonica.

Botanists may tell us that astilbe is the correct name for the above, but florists are not likely to give up the old name in a hurry. The imported roots will soon be arriving. Soak them well after unpacking and leave outside to freeze well before potting. We do not consider imported clumps half so good as home-grown ones. Try growing some yourself another year and be convinced. After forcing if clumps are large divide with a sharp spade, plant in the field and leave for two years. When lifted you will find it necessary to divide many of them, as they grow so large. The varieties compacta astilboides and Gladstone, can be especially recommended.

CANNAS IN THE SOUTH.

The canna fields of the Southern Floral Nursery Co., Fruitvale, Ala., have been the Mecca for many pilgrims this summer, both from nearby and distant points. The southern summer being so long, it gives nearly twice the length of blooming season that can be had in the north.

Among the best newer kinds that have shown most continuous bloom Papa Nardy stands well to the front and at this date (November 2) is the fullest in bloom it has been during the season. Buttercup is also at its best and it is a hard one to beat. Brandywine is also good. Queen of Beauty is easily the best of all scarlets. Mount Washington, a seedling of Mont Blanc, is a great improvement on that variety, being a stronger, healthier grower and shows a trace of pink the second day in the center of the bloom that sets off the white petals to great advantage.

Henry George is a new dwarf crimson that will find a welcome in every collection when introduced. Blushing Belle is a new pink of a very delicate shade, slightly edged with a creamy yellow, supposed to be a seedling of Martha Washington, but reaches a height of six feet and is the most continuous bloomer we have ever seen.

Several new pink seedlings from Hia-watha and Eastern Beauty are attracting a great deal of attention and will without doubt be popular when once before the public. The gem of the collection, however, is a row of seedlings from Papa

Nardy, most of which resemble that variety in growth and form of bloom, but are in many shades of red and pink, and a few nice yellows spotted with red, pink and orange. These will form a class very hard to beat. A yellow seedling of Express, which has been christened Golden Express, and a copper colored one from the same plant, to be called Amalgamated, are also among the choicest of a large number of seedlings. R.

CYANIDE.

Some time ago the REVIEW gave the following formula for the use of cyanide gas: One quart of water, one quart of sulphuric acid and five ounces of cyanide for 2,000 cubic feet of space. It also stated that this killed thoroughly the little brown aphids working down in the crown of the violet plants, but that at this strength the gas slightly burned some of the leaves. Now, I have Princess of Wales single violets, double violets and sweet peas all in the same house and would like to ask what strength will kill the brown aphids and not seriously injure the single violets. If it takes a dose too strong for sweet peas I do not care, as there are only a few of them planted. Does this gas rise or settle when liberated from the jars?

In your opinion does the method of keeping the gas confined in the house until it gradually leaks out by morning do any more injury to violet plants than a much stronger dose of gas confined in the house for twenty to thirty minutes and then liberated? W. B. S.

We have used this formula, only the above amount for 1,000 cubic feet instead of 2,000, as stated in the inquiry, and it ought not to hurt the violets if not left in long. It is very light and rises rapidly and the house should be tight in order to get the full benefit of the fumigation. We have tried both ways, but consider twenty to thirty minutes much to be preferred to leaving it in all night. R. E. S.

FLORIST.....

QUAINT RECEPTACLES.

There are times when one resents the use of the dignified tall vase or the prim rosebowl, or even a fancy basket for the more common flowers and for an informal luncheon or tea, the studies presented herewith may prove to be comfortable nestling spots for the eye, both in their color toning and freedom of arrangement.

For an odd setting for Shasta daisies invert a sun hat with a wide, flexible brim. Cut the brim loose from the crown about one-third of the distance around the crown. Roll back the edge of the brim opposite this cut until it touches the crown and fasten there with a strong pin. Find a low dish or bowl which will fit the inside of the crown, fill it two-thirds full of water and set in a generous bunch of Shasta daisies with a few ferns. Draw a dozen or so daisies through the slit around the crown, downwards, still retaining the ends of the stems in water, careless of breaking or bending them. On the left allow a few of the cluster to fall out as they will, on the table, as shown in the first picture.

In cutting flowers let the length of the stems be far from uniform. Half or more may be of about equal length, but there should be a few shorter ones to carry the color lines far down into the water, while a noticeable proportion should be cut longer, to reach far out and up from the main body of the group.

One easy method of securing a natural grouping of cut flowers is that of gathering the flowers all together in the hand with the lower ends of the stems even; set the entire bunch in the vase at once, loosen your hold and the flowers will arrange themselves. The aversion which nearly every person bears to some one flower is usually due to having seen that flower in some awkward position or poor setting. So-called "stiff" flowers are grossly maligned. Nature never produces an ungraceful flower or leaf-stalk. Stiff effects with any kind of flowers should be blamed upon poor arrangement. In the first study there should be an air of a hatful just gathered.

filled with long-stemmed pansies, the whole being set on a mat of the same flowers. The mat consists of brown and purple pansies laid flat, with the stems outwards. The coloring of the pansies in the shell ranges through the browns and yellows, combined with purple in many shades and tints. Small shells, like that shown at the left, can be used in groups at either end of the table, with the large shell as a center, one at the plate of each guest. Here, as in the first study, the flowers will arrange themselves if given a fair opportunity. A network of Asparagus Sprengeri holds the flowers in place without crowding the shell full. Placed on the table immediately before calling the luncheon or tea, the flowers out of water will last well enough for the one function.

The third is a hardy phlox study, in coloring light pink with dark eye, of the variety Henry Murger, in large proportion of color, together with a truss of the beautiful rich American Beauty color, Mme. P. Langier. In combination with the phlox are a few heads of rye and a liberal sprinkling of the well known hardy grass, Eulalia Japonica variegata. The feature of this arrangement is the wide sweep of the upper leaves of the eulalia and the position of the lower ones to blend in form with the handle of the pitcher. Sprays of phlox, cut in stem lengths to correspond with the height of the receptacle, suggest that the much longer-stemmed would be decidedly top heavy in appearance. Proportioned coloring is an interesting and fascinating study. Never set in two colors half and half of each. Have one color largely predominate. Blue decorations on a gray background on the pitcher blend easily with the deep crimson and delicate pink of the phlox blossoms.

In all of these studies there are present an ease of position and a simplicity which carries one away from the "bou-quet" style of the amateur and the trade "centerpiece" of too many professional florists. GERTRUDE BLAIR.

PEAT FOR FUEL.

Lignite is now used extensively for fuel in a number of the western states, and although generally regarded as a low form of coal and of comparatively recent origin, it is not the first stage in the formation of the coal measures. Peat is a still more recent form of coal, and though not as valuable as lignite, yet there are places and conditions when it is found profitable to use it for fuel. The Railway Age says that in Russia compressed peat bricks from a bog at Kieff have been used in locomotives with success, and they are regarded as a legitimate substitute for coal. In Germany and Holland compressed peat bricks are made in large quantities as a regular commercial product. During the past year peat has been used extensively by the Swedish state locomotives on freight trains. Here the peat briquettes are mixed with an equal weight of British coal.

In this country the interest in peat or bog fuel is confined largely to New England, where there are no coal measures, but there is also some activity in developing the peat industry in the middle west. New England railroads are now experimenting with peat as fuel, but no conclusions have as yet been reached as to its economy as compared with bituminous coal.

The density of coals depends upon the time they have been under formation and the pressure to which they have been subjected. Anthracite coal is the oldest and it is found at the greatest depth and has the highest specific gravity. Bituminous coal comes next, with the measures only a few hundred feet from the surface. Lignite is found quite near the surface and is light, like charcoal. The composition of peat is naturally similar to that of wood, the principal difference being that it has less oxygen and more carbon. The average analysis of a pure, dry specimen is:

Carbon, fifty-five; hydrogen, five; oxygen and sulphur, thirty-five; ash, five per cent. The heat of combustion is lower than that of coal or lignite and averages sixty-five to seventy-five per cent of good coal.

Peat or bog fuel is the first stage of the formation of a coal measure and is found as black mud in meadows, or in sphagnum moss peat bogs and in the turf on the hills of Ireland. For ordinary domestic use it is sufficient to allow the material to dry thoroughly in the sun until it cracks, but for industrial purposes it must be prepared for transportation and made waterproof. On account of its great bulk it is necessary to compress the crude material after it has been dried, and briquette machines have been devised for the purpose. Some of these use a pressure sufficient to make a hard, compact briquette, having a specific gravity nearly equal to that of good bituminous coal.

A number of different processes and machines are used in the peat industry; some are like ordinary brick machines which use the bog, mud or peat after it is ground or macerated. Another process merely presses the dried peat into dense briquettes under heavy pressure with some added binder and with artificial heat. These briquettes are not usually waterproof and must be used near the bogs. Another process heats the cylinder in which compression takes place so that a form of hydrocarbon is caked on the surface and makes a glaze not unlike that of anthracite coal. The effect of this is to render the briquette waterproof. An experimental machine of this type is now operating in Chicago and makes peat briquettes in the form of a disc three inches in diameter and half an inch thick. The compression cylinder is about twelve inches long and the pressure amounts to about twenty tons on the 3-inch plunger.

It is claimed by some of these peat fuel companies that peat briquettes which are waterproof and will bear transportation have a heat value nearly equal to that of ordinary bituminous coal, and they can be produced at a net cost of $1 per ton. While it is hardly possible for peat to compete successfully with coal in the vicinity of coal mines, yet it is gradually becoming recognized in the United States as a useful source of heat, the possibilities of which have hardly been suspected.

CLEVELAND.

Seldom has there been such lavish display of floral work in our city as at the funeral of the late Henry S. Storrs, general superintendent of the Lake Shore railroad. The decorations at the church were in charge of Harry Jones, of the Gasser Co., who was assisted by a representative of the Bertermann Bros. Co., of Indianapolis, who furnished an exquisite casket cover of American Beauties, orchids and white chrysanthemums. There were several floral railroad cars sent, the finest one coming from Walker & McLean, of Youngstown, Ohio. Designs and cut flowers were sent from various points from Omaha to New York. A large, massive wreath of orchids and valley from the New York Central lines was shipped from Palmer's, Buffalo. There were some six-foot wreaths of cypas and chrysanthemums. Beauties were used in large numbers and, while most of the large designs were sent to the church where the services were held, most of the loose flowers were sent to the house and these were distributed to the hospitals the following day. The estimated cost of the flowers used was about $1,500.

WATERING.

A Work of First Importance.

With the approach of the dull, short days extra care will have to be exercised in the matter of watering. Though to the novice the matter of watering may seem quite a simple operation, the man of experience knows that it is one of the most important points in the successful cultivation of all classes of plants grown under glass.

A good waterer must be a close observer, both of the soil he is handling and the special requirements of the plants under cultivation. He must know just when his plants require water and how and where to apply it. Soils of a heavy or retentive nature naturally require less frequent waterings than soils of a free sandy composition, not that the plants will absorb more water from the one than the other, but from the fact that the lighter soil does not hold so much water as does the heavier and that the water it does hold evaporates much more quickly. In dull days evaporation is naturally slower and the plant itself requires less moisture. It is the action of sunlight upon the foliage that enables the plant to draw the moisture up through its roots; hence, in the dull, short days with a limited amount of sunlight, a correspondingly limited amount of moisture is necessary for the support of the plant.

It is easily to be seen, therefore, that the application of too much water under these conditions will prove hurtful to the plants, not that the plants will take up more than they need or can use, but that the soil will get so surcharged with moisture that the air will be excluded to a hurtful degree and the soil will become sour, the roots of the plants become inactive, the plants themselves assuming a yellowish appearance. Then when the bright sunlight strikes them they will flag just as if they were suffering from lack of moisture.

If the check has not been too severe, and the soil has only become slightly soured, the plants can be brought back into a healthy condition by withholding water and thoroughly stirring the soil to admit air. But, as prevention is better than cure, it is better to use extreme caution in the application of water in the first place and avoid the necessity of nursing the plants back to health.

Another mistake in watering is often made by applying just a little water when the weather is not so bright. This dribbling is worse than no water, as it never reaches the roots of the plants, to do them any good, and so hardens the surface of the soil that it stops capillary attraction and robs the plants of the support they would naturally get from underground moisture. The safest plan is to wait until the soil is dry and then apply sufficient water to reach to the proper depth, letting it dry out well again before applying more and choosing, if possible, a bright day for the application so that the action of the sun heat will remove, through evaporation, a certain part of the moisture from the upper surface of the soil and allow the air to penetrate.

Sub-irrigation has been found to be advantageous in the forcing of lettuce during the winter, as the keeping of the surface dry prevents condensation of moisture on the foliage, which facilitates the development and spread of disease spores. But good lettuce can be grown without sub-irrigation if proper judgment is used in the application of water and the water applied on such days as the surface of the soil will be pretty well dried up by the time the house has to be closed down.

Such plants as tomatoes and cucumbers will of course need a good deal more water than lettuce, from the fact that requiring a higher temperature the moisture will naturally evaporate much quicker; besides, they have much more foliage to support for the roots space which they occupy, but nevertheless their successful cultivation depends largely on careful watering and close observation of both soil and weather conditions.

THE LETTUCE WORM.

I have been troubled every fall by a light green worm which eats my lettuce in the greenhouse. Is there any way to get clear of it beside picking it off with the fingers? I have tried tobacco, tea and slug shot without any effect.

J. R. C.

I know of no other way of getting rid of the worm you speak of than by hand picking. As a rule the worms are not so very numerous, but they are healthy feeders and even one worm will quickly disfigure a lettuce plant. I have frequently used hydrocyanic acid gas for destroying greenfly on lettuce and was in hopes that this would also destroy the green worm, but it takes a good deal more to kill them than it does to kill fly. No doubt they could be killed by this means, but to use the gas strong enough to do it I am afraid would also hurt the plants and I have never had them in such numbers that I considered the experiment worth trying. The worm is hatched from the eggs of a butterfly and if you keep your eye peeled for the fellow with wings, and destroy him at sight, you will come pretty near stamping out the trouble. W. S. POLLINATING CUCUMBERS.

I am having trouble with my cucumbers. I have a house of as fine plants as were ever seen and they are set very full of fruit but they do not mature as they should; what few develop do not have any seeds to speak of. I have always kept bees in the house and never had any trouble but the swarm all died. Please tell me how to pollinate the flowers.

G. N.

I have no doubt whatever that your trouble is caused by insufficient pollination. Keeping bees is by far the easiest way and it might pay you to renew your stock. In the meantime the method of hand pollination is quite simple; merely take the staminate, or pollen-bearing flower when ready, strip back the petals to leave the pollen-bearing part free, and transfer the pollen to the pistillate flower by touching one with the other. The sticky substance on the pistil will retain the pollen as soon as it comes in contact with it. One staminate flower is sufficient to pollinate several, as very little pollen will do the work. The pollen is usually ready just after the flower is fully open. It is necessary to run over the flowers every day, or at least every bright day, when the flowers expand very quickly. This takes quite a little time but it is time well spent, as it is the only certain way to insure a full crop where the natural agencies, such as bees, are not present in sufficient number to insure the doing of the work thoroughly.

W. S. CROYDON.

IN BELGIUM.

The way in which the raising of grapes in Belgium has become a large industry, involving many thousand greenhouses in a single district, is well illustrated by the experience of the Brussels district.

Writing from that city, Consul-General Roosevelt tells of the development of this industry and the extension of greenhouse cultivation to other fruits and vegetables. He says that about forty years ago the cultivation of grapes under glass was practiced on a small scale at Hoeylaert, a village near Brussels, more as an experimental venture than as a business enterprise. From the beginning the experiment was accompanied by success, and from its small origin this method of cultivation rapidly developed until it now ranks as one of the most flourishing and lucrative industries in this district. Today there are no less than 10,000 hothouses in the immediate vicinity of Brussels.

The greenhouses are usually from sixty-five to eighty-two feet in length, and about twenty-six feet in width. Heat is distributed through clay pipes.

The principal varieties of grapes are: Frankenthal, a blue, medium-size grape of fine flavor and very juicy; Gros Colmar, an immense purple grape of attractive appearance, somewhat too solid and lacking in juice, and the Black Alicante and Queen Victoria, both acceptable as to quality and flavor. These grapes are sold on the Belgian retail markets all the year around, at prices varying with the seasons, from about 15 cents to $1 per pound. In the last few years the cultivation of peaches, in connection with grapes, has also become quite profitable, and, although still practiced on a limited scale, has produced excellent results, the yield being first-class in every respect.

The cultivation of strawberries, tomatoes, spinach, lettuce, asparagus, and chicory under glass is also carried on in this district by syndicates, which regulate production as well as prices. Grapes grown in this consular district are exported largely to England, Germany, Russia and Denmark, and, occasionally, in small quantities, to the United States.

ODONTOGLOSSUM.

For some years the demand in Europe for the more highly spotted odontoglossums has been remarkable and phenomenal prices for them have been obtained, both at auctions and at private sale, far exceeding the amounts ever given for any other orchids. The most valuable of all the cool-house orchids is Odontoglossum crispum and it has given a host of highly spotted forms. It is unfortunate that our hot summers make the culture of this queen of orchids difficult, but cultivators are now succeeding better with them than was the case a decade ago. The old plan was to keep them in a north house the year around. Now the best growers give them a sunny house from November until April and a north house the balance of the year.

Opinions vary widely in regard to compost. In Europe leaf-mold is the most popular material. In America some growers are using a somewhat similar compost, in the majority of cases, with the addition of about equal portions of chopped fern fiber and sphagnum moss. We have, however, yet to see as good plants produced in this mixture as in one of pure osmunda fern fiber. The last named has the advantage of being more wearing and will never sour, as the former does unless very carefully watered.

There are now some very interesting hybrid odontoglossums. Great progress in their hybridization is being made in Great Britain and Belgium and a few have recently been raised in America. The accompanying illustration shows a spike of O. Wilckeanum albens, a cross between O. luteo-purpureum and O. crispum. The flower is exactly intermediate in form and coloring and the heavy dark chocolate blotches add to its beauty. Unfortunately the spike was somewhat twisted and the camera unable to do it justice.

The Market.

Colder weather has helped the retail trade, though some say that the dull feeling continues with them. The wholesalers have been busy with both local and shipping trade all of the past week, with hardly anything left over except roses, which are not selling so well just now, owing to the fact that chrysanthemums have the call with the flower-loving people. Of these the fancy grades seem late, as very few can be seen at the wholesale houses and growers say that these will not make their appearance until next week, just too late for our show and just right for the Kansas City show.

On a trip through the wholesale houses Monday morning fine lots of roses were seen, which included American Beauties in all grades. In mums we see some nice stock. Demand is good, with prices somewhat less than in former years. Carnations are selling clean almost every day and quality is good, especially with Enchantress, Mrs. Lawson and Wolcott. Prices have gone up on fancies. Violets show good color and stem. There are not any too many in the market for the demand.

In greens smilax is overstocked, as the demand is slow. Others are plentiful.

Club Meeting.

The Florists' Club held its regular meeting November 2 in the new meeting hall at Grand and Shenandoah avenues. President Ammann opened the meeting at 2 p. m. There were twenty-five members present, a very slim attendance for the occasion and the importance of the meeting.

W. E. Burrows, W. J. Walther, R. J. Windler, Henry Braun and Martin Malen were elected to membership and W. H. Kruse proposed. The treasurer's report showed a decided shrinkage from last report. The erape pulling matter was dropped.

There was quite a discussion of sterilized soil for carnations, which was very interesting to carnation and rose growers. In this discussion President Ammann and Vice-President Steidle took the leading parts. After this the meeting adjourned and the flower show guarantors held a meeting and perfected arrangements to entertain any and all visitors during the flower show this week. The trustees, Carl Beyer, F. W. Weber and F. J. Fillmore, assisted by Frank M. Ellis and Prof. H. C. Irish, were appointed by the chair to act as a committee to entertain visitors. The next meeting of the club, in the same hall, is on Thursday afternoon, December 14.

Various Notes.

By the time this issue of the REVIEW is in the hands of our readers the flower show will be in full operation. At this writing the committee is hard at work at the hall to be ready for the opening on Wednesday morning. A full report of the exhibition will appear in the next issue.

Julius Schray, of Wm. Schray & Sons, will this month lead to the altar one of the belles of South St. Louis. The happy young lady is Miss Josie Schmitt. The new residence, which is about finished, across the way from the greenhouses will be their home.

J. W. Pilcher and his partner, Mr. Burrows, left Monday for Chicago, to spend a few days at the flower show, returning Thursday to attend the home show, from here to leave again Monday for Kansas City and later in the week will be at the Indianapolis show.

Miss Perle Fulmer, of Des Moines, Ia., spent Saturday and Sunday with her brother Carl, who is at present living in our city.

C. C. Sanders, J. H. Weber & Sons, Emil Rotenhofer and the Star Nurseries all report a good fall trade, both local and shipping.

The chrysanthemum show of the Simmons Hardware Co. brought into competition four well known florists and all made creditable displays. Ellison Floral Co.'s display was all cut blooms. C. C. Sanders made a design of white blooming plants, in the shape of the company's trade mark, the Keen Cutter, which was very pretty. Wm. Kalisch & Sons showed some very fine plants and cut blooms with fancy ribbons, making in all a very attractive display. Grimm & Gorley had a group of mixed plants and some cut stock. H. G. Loyet made a small display in which he used gold fish. The company announced on Saturday night that Ellison Floral Co. got first, Kalisch & Sons second and Loyet third premium. The amounts were $75, $50 and $25.

Miss M. S. Newman reports that she had the house decorations for the big Wade-Scullin wedding a week ago, also the big Spencer wedding the next day. This is a correction from the last issue, Young's only having the church decorations for the Wade-Scullin wedding.

The florists' league team had an easy time of it on Thursday night. They won all three games from the Reliance. This ended the first series of twenty-one games and the boys are in the fourth place, only two games behind the leaders, with whom they opened a second series on Tuesday night. Wedding Decorations.

"This cometh," according to ye letter heade, "frome ye Flower Shoppe kept at 3720 Olive street, in ye Bigge Citie of St. Louis, Mo."

I write to ask you to correct an error in the St. Louis items of November 2. The house decorations and bridal flowers used at the Wade-Scullin wedding were supplied by me. Over 500 chrysanthemums, with Asparagus plumosus, were used, beside palms and foliage plants. On the table La Detroit roses, lily of the valley and Farleyense ferns were used. One of the chief features of the wedding, which occurred in the morning, was the bunches of La Detroit roses having holders fashioned from pink velvet ribbon which matched the broadcloth gowns of the attendants. The bride carried white orchids and lily of the valley, with a similar holder of white velvet ribbon.

The Spencer-Scott nuptials on the day following the Wade-Scullin wedding, were also executed by me. The residence was elaborately decorated, each room being distinctive. In the reception hall and the billiard room large white chrysanthemums were used in abundance; in the library delicate pink tones prevailed, with smilax and croton foliage. The music room, where the ceremony took place, as also the drawing room, was a bower of asparagus and Carnot roses. The prie-dieu, which was designed for this occasion, was trimmed with the same flowers. In the dining room light pink orchids, with lily of the valley, were used. The bride carried her white orchids in a queenly style; her sisters acting as bridesmaids carried pink roses. It is said this was by far the most select assembly so far this season.

DETROIT.

The Market.

Business has been very gratifying the past week, funeral work drawing heaviest on the market, while weddings are also doing their share. Good roses, as always, are in good demand, good Brides and Maids being quite scarce, selling at from $6 to $8 per hundred. Carnations are remarkably scarce, particularly good white and Enchantress, the best ranging from $2.50 to $3 per hundred. Chrysanthemums are finding a ready sale. Pink seems rather scarce, while yellows are almost too plentiful. Violets are commencing to come in, but not in such large quantities as in former years, this being particularly noticeable in the Mount Clemens shipments. Both single and double varieties are bringing 50 to 75 cents per hundred. The season has hardly begun for this popular flower. Cosmos seems quite scarce, especially white.

The Outing.

To begin with, the weather man presented the boys with a fine day. Present from Toledo were George Bayer, L. N. Peck, E. A. Kuhnke, Willis Honberger, H. A. Mills, A. Witterstaetter, T. Ritter, O. Krueger, W. T. Philipps, John Barrow, John Gratopp, Annie Suder, J. Nauman and August Philipps and wife. We had a special car for Mount Clemens. The first stop was made at J. F. Sullivan's. On arriving at the Bath City several hay wagons took the crowd of about sixty-five people to Breitmeyer's. Here a fine lunch was served. Breitmeyer's rose houses are in fine shape, their Beauties, La Detroit and Richmond especially good. Mums were just in their glory. The two varieties introduced in 1904, Majestic and Adelia, showed up in fine shape. Carnations were also fine, especially Enchantress; the other, White Lawson, planted from 4-inch pots.

At Robert Klagge's everything was in splendid shape. He has a new white carnation, a very good yielder. Mr. Klagge, formerly the "violet king," grows but very few violets now.

At A. L. Stevens' the carnations were very good, but violets are not as good as he used to grow them; it is the old story.

As it is quite a jaunt from here to James Taylor's, the hay-motors were put in use. Taylor's coffee and doughnuts are unequaled, and his roses, carnations and mums are not behind. Violets have been given up.

A. Otis says the other fellows can grow red spider, thrips, scale, mealybug, etc., but three good houses of lettuce pay him very well.

August Von Boeselager's was as clean as a whistle. Beside a house of very fine Kaiserin, he has several houses of good carnations and mums; also some good violets.

Our old friend, James Carey, had the glad hand and a glass for every one. His roses, carnations and violets are very fine.

At the Lakeside Inn another lunch was served. After a number of speeches Mr. Rackham, in behalf of the club, presented our ex-president, Robert Watson, with a gold chain and charm for services rendered.

Club Meeting.

The meeting of the Florists' Club held at the Michigan Cut Flower Exchange November 1 showed a fine increase in attendance. The main feature was an exhibition of cement and tile benches and posts. The most complete exhibit was that made by the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., Guy Bate mentioning a number of the good points of the bench. L. Bomb showed cement slabs, each having one end turned up to form the sides of the bench. E. A. Scribner showed a rapid and inexpensive way of constructing a bench. After stretching a wire net across the top of the posts, which were made of ordinary drain tiles set on end and filled with cement, he spreads about one inch of cement over some burlap laid on the wire. James Taylor uses common building tile, split in half. The Tuffa tile was shown by William Dilger. Ed Beard showed a bench and supports made of cement and sand, the proportion being about one to four. The legs and cross pieces were made in one piece, the cement being put into a mold of wood, placed where the post is to remain. Ordinary slabs of cement are used on top, the sides being attached.

The verdict of the judges, Gus Taepke, J. F. Sullivan and B. Schroeter, is to be made known at the next meeting. C. H. Pease was elected a member.

Various Notes.

In a recent trip made by Charles Tuson to Brampton, Ont., he was very much impressed by the general appearance of both the place and stock of the Dale estate.

Ferdinand Zube, employed by B. Schroeter, received a broken rib and other internal injuries by falling into a cellar.

Philip Breitmeyer has returned from New York.

S. S. Skidelsky reports a heavy sale of the rose pink Enchantress, and regrets that the supply of cuttings is limited.

While returning home from the club's outing Thursday night O. A. Stoll, of Oxford, was severely cut about the face and hands in a collision of two cars.

MILWAUKEE.

The Milwaukee Florists' Club had a largely attended meeting this week and final business pertaining to the flower show was taken up. A considerable number of entries came in and many more are expected before the opening of the show. The show will be held in the Gim-bel building, located in the center of the city, and everything points to a successful show. A banquet will be given all visiting florists Thursday evening, November 16. A delegation of about twenty-five members of the Florists' Club will attend the Chicago show Thursday. For premium list, entry blank or any matter pertaining to the Milwaukee show address H. V. Hunkel, secretary, or C. C. Pollworth.

KANSAS CITY.

The Market.

Business has been good since last report, showing a decided increase over last week. The weather continues cool, and the quality of stock coming in is much better. Chrysanthemums are taking the lead now, although there is a good demand in all lines. Some fine roses are being offered. The prospects for a successful season were never better.

Various Notes.

The chief interest in trade circles centers round the flower show, which opens Monday. We are all looking for something unusually fine and the indications are that we will not be disappointed. There is such a demand for space that the time for making entries has been extended to Friday, November 10.

L. A. Goodman is attending the St. Louis show this week and W. L. Rock is at the Chicago show, getting pointers for use at the coming show.

Ed Humfeld has one of the prettiest store windows in the city. He is displaying some unusually fine Appleton mums this week.

From the appearance of Samuel Murray's stock he will certainly carry off his share of the premiums this year.

W. J. Barnes is another local florist who will have a nice display at the show.
KAY-SEE.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

Chrysanthemums are the whole show, and have been for the past two weeks. Roses and carnations were short the greater part of the week, but even this could not keep up the prices on the mums. Where one could afford to buy them in large lots the price, even on the finer stock, was shamefully low. This was the wholesalers' tale of woe, but among the retailers things were going with more snap. All of them seemed busy and several of them had just about all that it was possible for them to do.

Various Notes.

David Frazier, gardener for H. C. Frick, reports his show larger and better than ever, and says the public are taking advantage of the open house which is extended them. Mr. Frazier keeps Mrs. Frick supplied, while she is in New York, with flowers from her own conservatory in Pittsburg.

A. W. Smith is making improvements in his store in the way of rearranging his offices to get more privacy.

Another street stand has been opened on Fifth avenue. One of the odd things is that there are only three street stands in the city and all inside of 100 feet.

Good Asparagus Sprengeri seems to be scarce in this section, as most of it is short and rubbishy. This green has become so popular that it seems to be hard to keep up a supply.

We are now ready to declare Ed McCollum a real foot ball player. His team has not been scored on this season.

T. P. Langhans, of the Pittsburg Cut Flower Co., has just returned from a trip up the Hudson, where he visited violet growers.

Wm. Bessinger, manager of the Calla Cut Flower Co., Calla, O., was a recent visitor.
Hoo-Hoo.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The fine weather, the election and the big flood of mums made the underpinning of the market shaky early in the week and a rather depressed condition was manifest. Next week the horse show will lift things and then comes Thanksgiving and prosperity for all.

Violets are holding their higher plane very creditably, $1 to $1.25 being realized easily for prime stock on Monday. There were few left-overs and there is little danger of a slump until after the holiday. The violet growers up the river are in high spirits over the additional outlets for their products and after all there will be less demoralization than in the season of 1904-5.

Orchids are advancing, but there are plenty of vandas, oncidiums and cattleyas. Soon there will be no surplus and their growing popularity in the larger cities outside New York will be felt here seriously as the winter advances.

Mums are exceptionally early this year and the stock was never finer. They have had a most satisfactory season to date and prices have been reasonable at all times. Fine roses of all kinds may be had at from $5 to $6 per hundred. The demand for Killarney and Richmond is persistent. A great winter is assured these new and popular varieties. Mrs. Oliver Ames is asserting itself deservedly. Beauties hold at $30 per hundred for the best, and next week the horse show will boost them to $50 without a doubt.

Carnations continue to improve and prices are firm, with an upward tendency. Election week has always been a menace and prices have always fallen. Possibly this one may be no exception to the rule. Meantime we will possess our souls in patience and so be ready to enjoy with grateful consciousness of abundant blessings, the reunions and contentment of our annual Thanksgiving.

Various Notes.

On November 1 the business of Wm. Ghormley, 57 West Twenty-eighth street, was purchased by H. E. Froment, who has been in charge of the financial department of the house since its inception. Mr. Froment is well and favorably known by the trade and is universally popular and respected. James Coyle continues with the firm and participates in the management. The best wishes for the success of the new house are tendered Mr. Froment in his venture. He begins his business career as a wholesale florist with an established trade and a large circle of growers, customers and friends.

The Limprecht Florists' Supply Co., on West Thirtieth street, has a large stock of evergreens and holly on hand for Thanksgiving and has over 500 large boxes already engaged for the Christmas holidays.

Charles Millang says his importations are all disposed of and he could have sold many times the quantity. Next year he will quadruple his purchases in Europe. He is now devoting his entire personal attention to his mum shipments, which make a grand daily display in his conservatory, which he has set aside for their accommodation.

Phil Kessler is quite delighted with his new quarters in the Coogan building.

Traendly & Schenck are handling superb Chatenay and an endless stream of high grade mums is flowing in and out of their big store all day.

Great interest was taken in Tuesday's election by the wholesalers, and some of them were too excited over it to eat. Julius Lang is an enthusiastic Jerome man and was not afraid to let the other fellows know it.

Wm. Ghormley has the sympathy of all in his serious and incurable illness. There is no hope of his recovery. He has made a brave fight during the past year, maintaining his geniality and hope to the last and bearing his suffering with rare patience and courage.

Pierson's Glenview was the best dark mum at the Tarrytown show, a heavy, well built bronze flower of remarkable size and beauty. Their unnamed yellow seedling is early, with size and foliage of the Appleton order, and as early as Robert Halliday and October Sunshine. Their new pink is a brilliant flower, very early, close to Glory of Pacific and ahead of Coombes. A big display of elegantissima fern goes to the Chicago and Kansas City shows. Robert Craig was a recent visitor at Tarrytown and says he is growing and making money this year on Piersoni. Mr. Pierson was loud in praise of Winsor carnation; a bread winner he calls it.

A. J. Guttman is at Chicago this week, exhibiting Victory. This week Victory was shown at Philadelphia, Boston, Columbus and Chicago, and word has come that at each place it gained the highest award. Last week it was shown at Lenox, Red Bank, Tarrytown, Orange, Poughkeepsie and Tuxedo, getting special prizes at several and the highest recognition everywhere. Victory ought to be pretty well known by the end of the show season if enterprise will make it so; and it will.

The Parker-Bruen Co. report their factory at Harrison, N. J., very busy on the manufacture of their novelties. Their business has advanced very rapidly since opening their city office, 1133 Broadway.

Wadley & Smythe officiated at the Castle wedding at Sparkill last week. White and yellow mums were used profusely, the canopy of oak foliage festooned with oncidiums. These orchid weddings are growing very popular. Judging by the exhibits of this prince of flowers at the New York show, there will be enough to go around and no weddings will have to be postponed.

The John Young Co. has the pleasure of securing the first wedding in the rebuilt St. Thomas church, that scene of so many of the most brilliant weddings of the past quarter of a century. This is the Moore-Fargo event, and an autumnal decoration, palms, autumn foliage and chrysanthemums, being used. Bridgman says it will be a triumph of his skill.

Henry Siebrecht, Jr., and Charles See are spending a few days and dollars down at Mt. Pocono on a shooting expedition. Siebrecht & Son had a dinner decoration at the Holland House on Saturday and used 1,000 of their own cattleyas and nearly as many Killarney roses.

W. H. Donohoe's store at 3 West Twenty-ninth street is now complete and takes its place with the other bon-ton shops of New York. This week Mr. Donohoe has the elaborate decorations at the Meadow Brook Hunt Club, of Westbury, L. I.

Fleischman opened, at Fifth avenue and Forty-third street, on Wednesday, one of the most complete and beautiful stores in the world. A fine conservatory at the rear is its best feature, but the size, richness and style of the whole combine to place it a step in advance of any to date.

Warrendorf opens another store this week, at Seventy-second street and Madison avenue, in the style of the Ansonia shop, one of the best in New York.

David Clarke's Sons go steadily onward at their great place on upper Broadway, where their motto, "Nothing but the best," still prevails. With their own greenhouses in the Bronx to draw upon, they are ready for all requirements. They are counting on a big Thanksgiving. Four weddings in one day this week show which way the wind blows.

Thos. Young, Jr., has opened his fine new wholesale store at 43 West Twenty-eighth street with complete conveniences of every kind. On his list of growers is John N. May, of Summit, who has returned to his first love, with large shipments of his specialties in roses and carnations.

Jos. S. Fenrich was justly proud last week over his showing of Alice Byron, Enguehard and Bonaffon mums. Totty's Richmonds here are fine and abundant. Joe will "receive" his friends with turkey at his store on Thanksgiving eve.

One standing in front of John Young's last week with but little stretch of imagination could see Christmas speeding hitherward. Lots of grand holly trees in full berry were on exhibition, the advance guard of 400, ranging in price from $6 to $12 each. New York will use them all and some of them are in demand for Thanksgiving.

The Geller Supply Co. reports a fast increasing business and are quite satisfied with their location in the heart of the wholesale section.

The New York Club meeting next Monday will be even more important a gathering than anticipated. Not only will there be a large exhibit of chrysanthemums, but it has been decided to make this the final ladies' night of the year. Prof. Nugent, the authority on gastronomy, will round out his two years' service with special creations. John Young, secretary, will care for all exhibits of plants and flowers shipped here for the event, and the largest attendance of the year should be in evidence.

Burnham's show at Bloomingdale's was free and consequently crowded all last week and now everybody knows an orchid when she sees it.

November 13, our big horse show begins, and no more violets that week for Chicago, remember. Mr. Lynch and Mr. Pieser may be well fed, but we don't propose they shall feed their market with our violets if we can help it.

Starke & Kleine have added another greenhouse to their storage capacity. These young men are doing a fine shipping trade and growing rapidly.

Wertheimer & Co. believe in indestructible Christmas bells, and have two styles to offer this season, the demand for which has already begun.

J. K. Allen's early bird experiences have caught many a worm, and a faithful lot of steady customers these last twenty years. No wonder that "six o'clock every morning" rooster has learned what to crow.

Perhaps a prouder man than either Lager or Hurrell at the big show was James McManus, who handles all the orchid output of this firm in New York, as well as that of many other growers, and who was quite certain first prize had gone where it belongs.

Echoes of the Show.

There is a rumor that Macy's exhibition hall will not be available another year for the flower show.

Dr. Hexamer was worn out Friday night, after a most anxious and laborious week. Whatever glory attaches to the management of the exhibition may justly be accorded him.

What happened Friday to wake up the people? It was the only day worth calling a good attendance. The two acres were actually filled for hours in the evening with a greatly interested crowd.

Siebrecht's rockery was a neat piece of Leo Osternei's work, and a drawing card, and their great displays of cattleyas and Farleyense were most attractive and creditable to their orchid grower.

Ellwanger & Barry's apple and pear display was in keeping with this great nursery house's reputation.

Among Julius Roehr's great orchid collection were three plants worth $600.

A. Herrington had his new adiantum, a distinct novelty, reminding one most of Croweanum.

R. Vincent, Jr., & Son made a grand showing of pompons and were both present. Mr. Vincent is still full of his European trip.

Rudolph Fischer, of Great Neck, has a bread winner in his fine carnation, Abundance, most appropriately named.

John Lewis Childs was one of the largest exhibitors at the mum show. Mr. Jaenicke was in charge and in the display was a fine group of his own seedling caladiums. His dracenas were also superb.

Arthur T. Boddington's exhibit, "Everything for the Garden," won the silver medal, and Harry Bunyard was as proud of the honor as if he wore it.

The Cottage Gardens' exhibit reached the whole length of the big building. It was only a drop in the bucket from their 100-acre nursery, where they have 40,000 rhododendrons, 100,000 peonies and $200,000 worth of conifers and nursery stock in every size and variety. In their carnation display Craig, Alma Ward, Peary and the seedlings were all grand stock.

J. AUSTIN SHAW.

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The new greenhouses on the grounds of the Department of Agriculture were opened evenings of last week for the department's annual chrysanthemum show. Some very fine specimen plants were shown, as well as a collection of single-stems, embracing nearly all the new sorts and a number of varieties not to be seen elsewhere.

The Great Central Market.

The market held remarkably firm last week. After the busy horse show period a slump seemed almost certain, but dark weather tended toward light receipts and demand continued active, with the result that there was little change in the market up to Saturday. Since then demand has fallen off to a considerable extent, especially for the lower grades of stock, and the market is weaker. The demand now is for the very best material and top prices are holding steady, but low grades are on the bargain counter.

The chrysanthemum has at last become the predominant factor which it usually is at this season. We have had a remarkable period of strong demand and excellent prices for chrysanthemums, but this week supplies are considerably ahead of demand. This is particularly true of the poorer qualities. There are thousands of flowers which are well sold at from $5 to $10 per hundred, and enough of all the other grades. It is noticed that a great many of the flowers drop their petals on very slight provocation.

American Beauties are once more equal to all demands. Quality in general is very good, size of bud, color, stem and foliage being all that the most critical could ask. Red roses continue more abundant than pink or white. In previous years red roses have usually been worth more money than any other color. It is not so this season. Some very fine Brides and Maids are seen, but crops are only at a beginning with most growers, and the supply will very largely increase with a few days of sun.

Last week up to Friday it was almost impossible to find white carnations, so quickly were they taken up upon arrival. This week there are enough of all colors, and prices have weakened except upon extra fancy stock.

Harrisii and callas are to be had for all funeral requirements and valley is abundant. On Saturday there was a flurry in violets, but the demand has subsided, and the best goods are well sold at $1 per hundred. A few Roman hyacinths and Paper White narcissi appeared on Monday. Daisies are abundant. A few sweet peas are coming in, but not enough to have a place in price lists.

There has been an active call for green stock this week. The demand has turned from smilax since prices stiffened and asparagus strings are being used in quantity for decorations.

The Winandy Matter.

The trustees in the Winandy bankruptcy matter have things now in pretty fair shape. They find liabilities of practically $86,000, $22,000 being secured by mortgage. There are other mortgages included in the remaining $64,000, which action has been taken to set aside on the ground that they were given for the purpose of preferring certain creditors. In the few weeks of the receivership a loss of $1,600 was made, the receiver was allowed $1,000 in fees and $1,000 for his attorneys, with the result that the court now has a claim for $3,600. Since the appointment of the trustees, Messrs. Day, Reinberg and Ekas, the plant has about met expenses, but there seems not much in sight for the unsecured creditors.

A Christening.

John Monson, of Minneapolis, has decided to distribute his new light pink seedling rose the coming season. The rose has been seen at a number of exhibitions and is well known and liked, on the order of La Detroit and Wellesley. The rose was christened for Miss Kate Moulton with appropriate ceremonies at a supper at the Union Wednesday night. E. H. Hunt will disseminate the rose.

Various Notes.

August Lange has just closed a lease on a store at 40 Madison street, in the Heyworth building, to which he expects to remove before January 1. The store is splendidly located and he will put in entirely new fixtures. This is almost on the site of the Anderson Floral Co.'s store which went out of business a year or so ago.

Bassett & Washburn, with their new heating plant, have a vacuum system designed by Otto Kroeschell. A test was made last Sunday, during which steam was circulated through 100,000 feet of pipe on five pounds steam pressure. Mr. Washburn states that their present consumption of coal is from sixty to seventy tons per day. They burn the Illinois product.

The Brant & Noe Floral Co. has increased its capital stock from $40,000 to $100,000.

A number of the growers are on the anxious seat because of railway blockades, which are preventing the delivery of coal as rapidly as they would like. The coal men and railroad people are all urging large consumers to take in as much coal as they can get in anticipation of freight blockades, labor troubles, etc.

Weiland & Risch report that their crop of Killarney is just about a week too late for the local exhibition. They say that they will have a magnificent crop with a few days of sun and expect to stage Killarney at Indianapolis and Kansas City next week.

If you are a retail florist ask C. M. Dickinson to take you into the red room at Hunt's. It is especially fitted up with Christmas bells, and it makes as handsome a showing as could be desired. The Hunt bell is made of curled crepe paper and the larger sizes are fitted with electric lights.

The Chicago Rose Co. is sending its first cut to the E. F. Winterson Co.

F. F. Benthey states that they have a call for fully four times as many Killarney as they are able to supply.

C. M. Dickinson, of Hunt's, returned Saturday from a two weeks' trip to New York. He was pleased to find Mrs. Dickinson very much improved in health. She suffered a severe surgical operation just before his departure.

Wiector Bros. count on sending a fine lot of stock to the Kansas City show next week. N. J. Wiector will go to stage the stock and Leonard Kill expects to go to look after the Peter Reinherg exhibits. Pochlmann, Bassett & Washburn, Weiland & Risch, Benthey-Coatsworth Co. and others will also be represented.

Simon Grochowski, 1342 Wolfram street, does a local trade, with a little wholesale business in Boston ferns. The greenhouses will be remodeled in the spring.

The Market.

The feature of the market this week is the increased demand for violets, chiefly due to the football game of next Saturday. The supply is rather scarce; prices in consequence have advanced. The other items on the list have not shared in the prosperity of the violet. Chrysanthemums are suffering from an over-supply of fine blooms, the medium grade flowers bringing better prices in proportion than the fancy. Enguehard is probably the best pink, Duckham not being up to market requirements. Pink Ivory is coming in small quantities. There are one or two new whites, the Queen and Timothy Eaton being the most prominent. Of yellows, Mrs. Jerome Jones, as seen at the Flower Market, was very fine. Maj. Bonnaffon is also improving. Of reds, the Leo Niessen Co. has G. W. Childs, while W. E. McKissick has Black Hawk and Cullingfordii. There is, however, no special demand for these dark reds. Roses have fallen off a little in price; the quality is very fine. Carnations are more plentiful than a week ago, with indications of a decidedly heavy increase in the cut of many of the principal growers. Mignonette can be seen at at least two of the commission houses. Gardenias are plentiful and lower in price. Cattleyas are becoming scarce. Oncidiums are in oversupply. Valley is plentiful and very fine.

The Riverton Nursery.

The brakeman on the Trenton accommodation did not know who owned the greenhouses near Fish House, but volunteered the information that Dreer had a very fine nursery at Riverton, so to Riverton Phil went, though it must be confessed not unexpectedly. The place was in fine order. It always is, no matter how large the business is that may be going on at the time, and there was evidence that the business had been very large during the previous days. The shed was filled with a very fine lot of kentias in decorative sizes, about to be sent out on hurry orders to some of the leading retailers. So good has the demand been for palms this fall that many thousands of young seedling palms are now potted that are usually obliged to wait until December or January.

Next to palms, the demand for nephrolepis in the various varieties has been most marked. N. Scottii is the leader. Mr. Eisele feels that his confidence in this variety has been fully justified. It may be seen in all sizes, from 3-inch to 10-inch, in very fine shape. A number of houses are planted with stock plants for next season's orders, as it is believed there will be a heavy demand during the spring and early summer. N. Barrowsii is also justifying the confidence expressed by Mr. Eisele in these notes some months ago. The original plant, which has been to Washington and has stood considerable hard usage, looks remarkably well. The fronds stand well, and do not easily break down, as is the case with N. elegantissima, when subjected to too much water or rubbing the fronds. The 6-inch plants of this variety (Barrowsii) are most attractive in appearance. The new variety, N. Whitmanii, is here on trial. It is dwarf and resembles N. Barrowsii in many ways, the chief differences being the height and the fact that the older fern sometimes reverts to the straight leaf type, which is never seen in N. Whitmanii. Mr. Clark very justly remarked that it would be a mighty difficult thing to pick out these varieties when well mixed. Each has, however, its distinct qualities, and to an expert like Mr. Clark, these qualities, good and bad, are well known.

The fall importation of half-hardy plants is now being potted. A house about 30x150 is filled with a beautiful lot of bay trees, in excellent condition. The block of houses used last spring for hardy roses is now filled with azaleas, nicely budded rhododendrons, with deep green foliage, Aucuba Japonica, Laurus cerasus, the cherry laurel, familiar in the gardens of England, and worthy of being better known here, and old-fashioned box, so dear to our grandfathers.

Returning to the warmer houses, four long tables completely filled with Cocos Weddelliana were a very pretty sight, the plants being clean and well grown. Some of these are intended for immediate sales, some for shifting into 3-inch pots, and others into larger sizes. The small and medium size kentias occupy their usual places, and appeared as thrifty and vigorous as ever. Their number is legion. Latania Borbonica has been gradually reduced in number until the proper level was reached. There is now quite a little demand for this once popular palm and it is probable the supply will be slightly increased next season. Some very pretty specimens of the new variegated bougainvillea which the Dreer Co. will send out for W. K. Harris were seen. There were lots and lots of other things of interest, but I will only mention one, the new begonia, Turnford Hall, which is in full bloom, besides Gloire de Lorraine, and makes a pleasing contrast to the older sort.

Various Notes.

The meeting of the Chrysanthemum Society of America, held in Horticultural Hall last Wednesday afternoon; the bowling contest, at the Casino alleys on the same afternoon, and the annual show at Horticultural Hall lasting through the week, have attracted many visitors to the city.

The Henry F. Michell Co. states that the demand for tulips and daffodils has far exceeded that of any previous year.

Arthur Zirkmann, of M. Rice & Co., has just returned from a very successful business trip.

Edward Reid is receiving some very fine Adiantum Croweanum from several growers.

Paul Berkowitz, of H. Bayersdorfer & Co., bears that cheerful demeanor that bespeaks splendid fall business. Mr.

Berkowitz is generally cheerful, but when the cases are coming in in hundred or 200 lots, and going out fast enough to make room for the next steamer's invoice, he is particularly cheerful.

The Leo Niessen Co. is handling some of the finest Beauty, Bride and Bridesmaid roses seen in this market this season.

M. Rice & Co. will have a very fine stock of holiday goods from abroad.

Thomas B. Meehan, president of the Florists' Club, held a reception at the November meeting of the club, last Tuesday evening.

Geo. Parsons, of the H. A. Dreer Co., states the Japanese lilies have arrived in excellent condition. Spiræas are in the custom house, but lily of the valley will be late, owing to heavy rains in Europe. They are not expected before November 20. PHIL.

DENVER.

The Market.

Business the past week has been all, and a little more, than we anticipated. With the closing of last week indications were such that we looked for a quiet trade for at least a few days, as the first snow of the season was upon us, making it disagreeable to go out. However, it developed into a lively business by the end of the week and apparently everyone was satisfied. Cooler weather since has stimulated retail demand for all kinds of seasonable merchandise, improving the tone of business, where there had been more or less irregularity. The florists all report a gain over October of last year.

Values hold firm in every line. Beauties are fine, especially in color. They were never better and the demand is nearly up to the supply. The cut of Brides and Maids is not nearly as large, perhaps on account of the cooler weather, but some nice stock is being cut, as well as some fine Chatenay. Liberty is in generous supply, as well as Richmond, which is improving and looks better than it did on its first appearance.

While there have been enough carnations to fill all orders, none have gone to waste. The quality of stock on the whole is good. Enchantress leads in sale, followed by white. Lawson is coming in better, having longer stem and good flowers. Fiancee looks a winner and just now is one of the best on the market and in some of the shops is selling for $1 per dozen.

Chrysanthemums have been much in evidence, the only shortage being in yellow. Violets are very much in demand and hard to get. E. E. Peterson is, perhaps, cutting the finest in the city, good flower and long stem.

Various Notes.

Potted plants sell well and command good prices in spite of a department store that sells 6, 7 and 8-inch chrysanthemum plants at 25 and 35 cents.

R. S. Mahan, of the Alpha Floral Co., was down town a few days ago, for the first time since his illness.

Quite a number of dinners were given on Hallowe'en, which made business for the decorators. The most elaborate was the Moffat dinner at the Brown Palace hotel, the work being done by B. E. Gillis, of the Park Floral Co.

The Market.

Prices have held up fairly well during the past week, better than might have been expected with chrysanthemums at their flood tide. Roses have been harder to move and prices on all grades have softened a little. Carnations remain about the same. About $2 is a fair price for average stock. Extra select has brought $4 and in a few cases $5 has been realized by Fiancee and Prosperity. Violets are of very good quality. Doubles show a marked improvement. Prices vary from 50 cents to 75 cents per hundred.

Chrysanthemums run all the way from $3 to $12 per hundred, some extra fine flowers of Pennsylvania, Eaton, Enguehard and a few other sorts realizing $3 a dozen. Bonnaillon is now seen in large quantities. Balfour as a pink is the favorite, being preferred commercially to Duckham and Coombes. Shrimpton and Intensity are leading crimsons. Miss Alice Byron, Ivory, Mrs. Jerome Jones, Western King and Mutual Friend are leading whites. Appleton, Nagoya and Kate Broomhead are also popular sorts. There cannot be much money in mums at prevailing prices. Those who handle the early kinds largely come out the best. Quite a number of pot plants of mums are seen, but are not especially well grown, the foliage being very poor on most of them.

Cattleyas are now abundant. These, however, are rarely seen in the markets and commission houses, going direct to the stores. A few Cypripedium insigne are arriving. Small quantities of callas, stevia, Paper White narcissi and marguerites are seen. Green stock is of good quality and unchanged in price.

With Framingham Growers.

A flying visit to one or two Framingham growers last week found things in fine shape for the coming season. Our first call was on William Nicholson.

Several divisions of chrysanthemums were yielding some excellent flowers. Pennsylvania was especially well done. Other sorts grown in quantity included Eaton, white and yellow; Nagoya, Cheltoni, Intensity, Shrimpton, Balfour, Yanoma, Jeannie Nonin and Dr. Enguehard. Large numbers of white and yellow marguerites are grown here and prove a paying crop. White feverfew in thousands were noted in propagating beds to come along for Decoration day.

Principal interest centered in the carnations which are the chief feature here, many of the new sorts being grown. Fair Maid is this season being grown much more largely than Enchantress. It is said to hold its color better, although not producing nearly so fancy a flower. Fiancee looked splendid, being a mass of bloom and buds. If it continues to produce as at present it should prove a winner. We hope its color will hold out. In whites, a batch of Lieut. Peary looked quite promising, as did Lady Bountiful. Gov. Wolcott was, however, producing far finer flowers. None of the whites, however, could at all approach The Queen for quantity. The flowers were carried on stiff stems and were of fine size. Mrs. Patten is the leading variegated sort grown.

In scarlets, Victory seemed to take the lead, a small batch looking fine. Robert Craig was promising but John E. Haines did not look well. We did not care for Christmas Eve, of which a batch was noted. Only a few Flamingo have been grown this season. Crimson Glow showed up exceedingly well and should be heard of more in the future. Harlowarden carried some fine flowers, but for quantity Harry Fenn was easily the leader, the flowers being of excellent size. Witterstaetter's new varieties, Aristocrat and After Glow, were making remarkable growth and giving some fine flowers but it is too early in the season to judge them.

At S. J. Goddard's the leading attraction at present is a large house of the new variety, Helen Goddard. The plants were producing a wealth of flowers of fine quality and a few weeks later will be a grand sight. Color, form, stem and calyx are as near perfect as possible and we looked in vain for any trace of disease. The work of propagation is now under way. Orders are coming in from all parts of the country. A small batch of Fiancee looked extremely well. Enchantress is much preferred to Fair Maid, giving more flowers of better quality. The Queen stood head and shoulders above all other whites. Other sorts grown are Fred Burki and Mrs. W. L. Lewis. Cardinal is very well liked as a scarlet. Flamingo is still retained and a good number of Manley. Harry Fenn looked well, giving a wealth of flowers. Mrs. Patten is grown for variegated. A number of very promising seedlings are under trial. A general assortment of miscellaneous stock is handled. Some very good varieties of pompon chrysanthemums were seen.

We were pleased to find J. T. Butterworth in good health once more. Here we found two fine houses of carnations, The Queen, Enchantress, Boston Market, Harry Fenn and Fair Maid being the sorts grown. Callas in pots fill one house and Asparagus Sprengeri another. A house of Bonaffon, Yanoma and other late mums will be right for Thanksgiving. Bulbous stock and valley are very largely grown. Orchids are now, however, the leading feature here and we were surprised at the vigor of many of the plants. Cattleyas are grown in quantity. A large number of C. labiata were in bloom. We noted many carrying six flowers to the sheath and in one case seven flowers. One extra good specimen had forty-four flowers. Many fine forms were included.

C. Percivaliana was represented by some splendid baskets carrying twelve to twenty sheaths each. Equally fine C. gigas, C. Mossiae and other sorts were noted. Laelia elegans was also in fine shape. Dendrobium nobile and D. Wardianum were seen in quantity, being ripened off. Oncidium varicosum

Rogersii was nearly all out. Laelia anceps and L. autumnalis were sending up a good crop of spikes. Some 500 Cypripedium insigne are grown and are without exception the best batch we have ever seen. Many of these are large pans carrying forty to fifty flowers each. Some pretty seedling cypripediums were in flower, Mrs. J. T. Butterworth (C. Pollettianum x C. Tityus) being quite striking. A good many Cœlogyne cristata are grown and were pushing large numbers of spikes. We were pleased to note the vigor possessed by so many of the plants here. They reflect great credit on Mr. Butterworth.

Various Notes.

Houghton & Clark decorated for the Warren-Bradley wedding at Trinity church on November 4. It was strictly a chrysanthemum wedding, pink and white colors being used. At the house yellow and white were the prevailing colors.

Denys Zirngiebel, the veteran Needham florist, had a serious paralytic shock on November 3. His many friends hope for his early recovery.

The members of the Park street market are getting out a very neat catalogue which will contain advertisements, etc., restricted to members of the market. Profits will be used on the occasion of the coming visit of the American Carnation Society.

Thomas Pegler is again in the market with quantities of fine double violets. Sim Kidder and other large growers of singles are now shipping very fine flowers.

While many chrysanthemum growers are complaining of poor prices this season, Thomas Roland, of Nahant, who grows the early sorts in quantity, says he has had an extra good season with them.

Prof. B. M. Watson, of the Bussey Institution, will address the Gardeners' and Florists' Club on November 21 on "Botany for Young Gardeners." December 18 will be ladies' night, for which there will be special attractions. Applications for membership continue to pour in.

Wilfred Wheeler and W. H. Heustis are independent candidates for directors at the annual meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on November 18.

Owing to unforeseen circumstances, the North Shore Horticultural Society will not hold the chrysanthemum show as planned.

Alexander McKay is cutting extra fine carnations and chrysanthemums at his new South Framingham establishment. He is making many improvements. We extend congratulations on his recent inheritance.

John Barr, who is one of our best carnation growers and who introduced The Queen, has that popular variety in grand shape. We doubt if any other white sort can at all approach it as grown by him.

Patten & Co. are trying a batch of 1,000 Variegated Lawson in comparison with Mrs. Patten this season and like its behavior so far.

William Nicholson is shipping extra fine mignonette of Dailedouze's strain to the Park street market.

W. N. CRAIG.

WASHINGTON.

Everyone seems to be busy with decorations, weddings having the call. Good mums are scarce; also violets.

J. R. Freeman has opened a branch store on F street, around the corner from his Thirteenth street store.

Z. D. Blackistone reports business especially good.

The Industrial Home School has been cutting some very fine chrysanthemums, due to the skill of Mr. Miller, the grower. Small gets the bulk of them.

The S. A. F. medal for school garden work was presented to the Dennison school with appropriate ceremonies November 3. Wm. F. Gude made a characteristic address and supplied a large quantity of flowers for the occasion.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

NEBRASKA reports a considerable drop from a full delivery on quite a few varieties of muskmelon.

A SURPLUS of onion seed of the Italian varieties is being offered by some of the American seed growers.

THE high price of onion seed is putting a damper on the customary fall purchasing of seed by the onion set growers.

AT latest reports S. D. Woodruff, Orange, Conn., was convalescing from his recent attack of heart failure.

S. M. ISBELL & Co., Jackson, Mich., are rapidly extending their operations in the growing of farm and garden seeds.

VISITED CHICAGO: A. A. Berry, of A. A. Berry Seed Co., Clarinda, Ia.; Chas. P. Guelf, with Jerome B. Rice Seed Co., Cambridge, N. Y.

THE weather in Wisconsin woods continues unfavorable for picking of green. Supplies are likely to equal legitimate demand, but prices are reasonably certain to be high.

THE Maine Agricultural Experiment Station reports this season an unusual number of complaints against wire worms in potato fields. Fall plowing for at least three successive years is recommended as the best remedy.

A. E. McKenzie, of A. E. McKenzie & Co., Brandon, Manitoba, left Chicago by the limited freight last Saturday evening in charge of two car-loads of onion sets. This is a novel method of insuring safe carriage of onion sets, but Mr. McKenzie thinks it a good one.

THERE seem to be very few reliable reports as regards beans. The growers up to the present time report being unable to give definite information as to probable deliveries. It is thought that the crop will be as disappointing as the pea crop when all the returns are in.

THE situation on peas is getting worse right along. The deliveries from the farmers are falling below anything that was anticipated, and the milling and hand-picking shrink the crop heavily. It is quite apparent that on the whole the pea crop is the shortest that has been harvested for many years. From all reports it looks now as though there will not be a variety that can be delivered in full, and some kinds will drop to almost nothing.

ALBERT McCULLOUGH.

Albert McCullough is one of those seedsmen who keep everlastingly at it eleven months in the year, and for that reason find all the greater pleasure in the recreation to which the other four weeks are devoted. Mr. McCullough is now in Florida on his annual outing, hunting and fishing, for he is not far less enthusiastic than Grover Cleveland, at one time also head of a seed business, in his fondness for the rod and gun.

At Cincinnati they regard Albert McCullough as one of the choicest products of the town, for he was born there, in 1851, when the place was not big enough to even peep out from behind its bluff, and has grown and prospered and been identified with its business life until, at least in the seed trade, to speak of McCullough is to speak of the big town on the Ohio, and to speak of Cincinnati is to speak of the McCulloughs.

Mr. McCullough was favored with a college training, a boon not common to the youth of his school days, just after the civil war. After college he was taken into the seed business founded by his father, J. M. McCullough, to which he has devoted the full of his energies. Now associated with the firm are H. B. McCullough and his son. They do a very large counter and catalogue trade, as well as a considerable wholesale seed business and have a large wholesale cut flower department.

Mr. McCullough has been a member of the American Seed Trade Association since its organization. He was its secretary and treasurer for three years, SEED ADULTERATION.

The U. S. Secretary of Agriculture has issued a circular, No. 14, a part of which is as follows:

Wibolt's Snowball Cauliflower

No. 34 SEED No. 34 is the best of all Snowballs. Demand it through your seed firms or direct from E. Wibolt, Nakskov, Denmark

A strong grower, with fine substantial foliage, stem robust, twenty-five to thirty inches long, bearing a large, bold, cup-shaped flower most beautifully colored with rosy salmon lilac and a distinct green center.

These two sterling novelties bloom about the middle of May, the stems never break, the flowers keep very long and travel perfectly; adding to these qualities their hardiness, the length of the stem and the exquisite beauty of the flowers, they may be considered as the finest May flowered tulips recently offered and the best for market.

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

Cut flowers at the wholesale market are very scarce and have been the past week, owing to the dark weather, of which we are having more than usual for this time of the year. This scarcity, with an increased demand, has caused the prices to stiffen so that roses are going at prices ranging from $3 to $8 per hundred, according to quality. Carnations are holding steady at $1.50, $2 and $3. Mums bring from 75 cents to $2.50 per dozen. Single violets are plentiful at 50 cents per hundred, but New York doubles have a good run at 75 cents and $1.

Various Notes.

The Cleveland Cut Flower Co. has posted a removal notice in the windows, stating that they will move to 111 Huron street about November 15, the new store being directly in the rear of the one now occupied. This will give them a floor and basement for their cut flowers and supply business and the second floor for the wire work department, the capacity of which they have recently doubled and if the future demands they can give employment to ten men on that class of work. Altogether they will have about three times the floor space now occupied.

The writer recently spent a pleasant and profitable half day, going through the Lake View Rose Gardens at Jamestown, N. Y. It really takes that long to go through the houses and view the stock. Mr. Roney, the manager, acted as guide. He explained the steam heating system and how he heats this very large place with two 500 horse-power boilers, doing away with the battery of eight smaller ones, saving one-half the labor and a good many car-loads of coal in a season. Two large pumps take care of all the condensation and return it to the boilers. The steam gauges registered 100 pounds on the boilers and by a system of reducing valves the gauges on the mains showed four pounds pressure. All this went to convince the writer that he had been extravagant in his boiler room and that many of us are spending too much money for coal without getting adequate returns. A house of lilies was the finest I ever saw and one can readily see why they make a specialty of lilies, growing over 100,000 bulbs. The roses, mums and violets were good, but the carnations were not as fine as those grown last season, owing to the cold, wet spring.

Smith & Fetters are sending out a very pretty announcement of their fall opening, November 7 and 8. In past years the display of flowers and plants at these openings has been very fine and I am sure this will be no exception.

Mr. Harrison, manager of the Ohio Floral Co., reports business as being very good and judging from the up-to-date touring car he is using I think he is correct.

A visit to Detroit found everything in a prosperous condition and everyone prepared for a busy season. The Michigan Cut Flower Exchange is without doubt one of the best equipped wholesale cut flower houses in the country, and Mr. Dilger has cause to feel proud. The finishing touches are being put on the Breitmeyer building. It will be ready for occupancy about December 1.

A visit was made to B. Schroeter's greenhouses to see the dark pink sport of Enchantress. It is identical except in color, which resembles Fiancee.

On November 2 the annual outing of the Detroit Florists' Club took place. They had as their guests the Toledo Florists' Club. A special car was waiting when they arrived and the journey to Mt. Clemens was commenced. There were mums at Breitmeyer's that will certainly be heard from in the near future. Mr. Klagge has a white seedling carnation that was well liked and it has a fine record so far. Richmond and Killarney roses as grown here have

A Visit to Mt. Clemens.

On November 2, fifteen members and guests of our Florists' Club took a trip to Detroit, where about forty Detroiters took charge of us in a special car for Mt. Clemens. A stop was made at Mr. Sullivan's place, where everything was in good order. Our pictures were taken here, with Norman Sullivan as man behind the gun. Arriving at Mt. Clemens the whole party went to the Breitmeyer place. There everybody went sightseeing and they found what they were looking for, house after house of roses, carnations, mums and violets all in the best shape, except the latter, of which all the former violet kings of Mt. Clemens are decidedly tired. The bell called everybody to lunch and such a lunch. The Breitmeyer hospitality is well enough known not to need any comment.

The next place visited was Mr. Klagge's. Here, as at every other, everything was in apple-pie order. Some houses of roses were extra good. At Stevens', Taylor's and Carey's the story repeated itself. Refreshments were served nearly everywhere. The coffee and doughnuts at Taylor's hit the spot.

At the Otis place we saw some fine lettuce ready for market, and also some Chinese vegetables that were certainly curiosities. The name of a variety of lettuce written in Chinese characters on a label puzzled William Dilger very much. He finally admitted that he could not read it, but thought if he had his flute along he would be able to play it.

Pressing business at home compelled the writer and four other Toledoans to break away while the party was at the Carey place. The rest of the party visited the Von Boeselager place and wound up with a banquet where everybody enjoyed himself to the limit.

At George Rackham's place in Detroit we saw some elegant cyclamen, a sample of which the proprietor promised to send to the next club meeting, November 15, at Liberty hall. His carnations and roses were also good.

Various Notes.

Business is good with almost everybody. Mrs. H. Luder reports business up to the limit.

George Bayer feels proud of the mum half of the 700-foot houses. The cut is beginning to start heavily.

At the Scottwood greenhouse the Lorraine begonias are showing up fine.

GRAND RAPIDS, MICH.

With the advent of cloudy weather carnations seemed to suddenly forget how to open. They are scarce, all colors bordering onto the famine stage. Roses are equal to all demands and are improving in quality. Beauties are in abundant supply, which is unusual for this season of the year. Mums, of course, are in their glory and occupy the center of the stage to the detriment of roses.

Nathan Smith & Son, of Adrian, have had a few blooms of their new pink Rosiere on exhibition at Smith's. It is a fine flower and a good keeper.

A new insect has made its advent among the mums. It is a small brown bug, very partial to dahlias. It attacks the bud and flower of the mums, eats enough out of one side to disfigure the flower and cause it to rot. One firm lost fully thirty per cent of its flowers in this manner.

Henry Smith has given a free chrysanthemum show at his store, which was very attractively arranged and drew a large crowd. He staged fifty varieties of mums, cut and in pots.

It is probable there will be a good crowd attending the Chicago show. Smith, Cross, Crabb, Hannah, Schols and Freyling are mentioned as going.

G. F. C.

COLUMBUS, O.—The Columbus Florists' Club will give a flower show at the City Hall November 10 and 11, the proceeds to go to charitable institutions. Several Chicago growers are expected to send exhibits.

ZION CITY, ILL.—The people of the community are so opposed to tobacco that they object to its use in any form for fumigating in the greenhouses here. They can detect the odor on the flowers for days after its use.

PACIFIC COAST.

MLLE. CECILE BRUNNER.

Though rarely seen in the florists' stores of the east, the sprays of buds and blooms of this charming polyantha rose are largely used by the florists of the Pacific Coast. The flowers are a pretty shade of light pink and the buds are long and pointed. Though the individual buds and flowers are small they are borne in graceful sprays, and these are ideal material for the floral artist. I have seen bouquets and other arrangements for debutantes containing this rose alone that were superior in effect to anything I have heretofore noted. And in the store of Sievers & Boland, in San Francisco, a hamper filled with these sprays struck me as the prettiest thing in their large display.

I understand that these sprays are cut from plants growing in the open, and do not know whether blooms could be forced in eastern greenhouses, but certainly every florist who grows flowers for his own use should have a dozen or more plants of Mlle. Cecile Brunner rose for summer cutting. And if it could be produced as a pot plant in good bloom it would be a money-maker at any time, and especially at any of the various holidays. GEO.

SPOKANE, WASH.

At a glimpse of trade conditions in this section the two impressions conveyed are the fine quality of roses and carnations, though the grower has to contend with poor soil and very little sun, and the absence of Beauties and violets, which the public would certainly demand in quantity could they be grown successfully. Chrysanthemums are plentiful and bring good prices, being the salvation of the trade, as they last until March and from a grower's account are the chief standby of the holiday season.

At Miss Wright's, the pioneer grower and retailer, carnations and chrysanthemums are in fine shape. Bulbous stock will be plentiful at a later date. From a small conservatory of a few years ago Miss Wright has, by her energy and industry, built up a fine trade and has now 12,000 feet of glass, an evidence of the success of women in the trade.

A practically new place is that of H. E. Reimer's, who has about 10,000 feet of glass devoted to roses and carnations, all superb in quality. It is Mr. Reimer's intention to make a specialty of blooming plants and by selling at wholesale he has filled a growing need and laid also the foundation for a thriving and profitable business.

With the recent cold weather trade has improved and the doors of society have opened, the first decoration of the season being at the Country Club, in which Bridesmaids and smilax were used abundantly. KENNEDY.

kinds of bignonias and tecomas that succeed in the open in the southern portion of this state will not withstand the frosts in the latitude of San Francisco. I have, however, appended a list of the best sorts grown here:

Tecoma grandiflora, the common deciduous form; grandiflora atrosanguinea, also deciduous; Capensis, bright red, not very hardy; jasminoides, hardy, white; jasminoides alba magna, also a hardy white; Mackenii rosea, lilac, with yellow throat.

Bignonia alba, hardy, very strong grower; adnophylla, tall growing; argyreo-violascens, purple; Chamberlaynii, white; Lindleyi, light purple; magnifica, crimson with yellow throat; speciosa, mauve and purple; Tweediana, yellow, not hardy; venusta, orange yellow, not hardy.

The varieties I have noted as not hardy do well outside only in the southern portions of this state. G.

planter has discovered that bulbs of this nature do not succeed well after the first year, and to handle them at all to advantage requires that they be dug up after their flowering season is over, putting them in a situation where there is no danger from too much moisture. The majority of private gardeners do not make any effort to keep these bulbs dry a certain portion of time during the year, and as a consequence the bulbs do not usually amount to much after the first blooming.

In this climate it is impossible to grow hyacinths, tulips, narcissi, crocuses, ranunculus or anemones with any satisfaction after the first season unless they are kept away from other material which must be watered through the summer. It does not matter how much moisture the bulbs receive before the foliage dies down, but after that they should receive but a very small amount of moisture. They naturally have a long resting season and when there is a superabundance of moisture at this time the bulbs deteriorate at a wonderful speed and if there is anything left for the following season they are generally so weak that they amount to nothing.

Although both the hyacinths and tulips grow naturally in a climate even colder than that of California, with much more moisture in the summer, it is a fact, as I have already stated, that they should be grown in a bed entirely by themselves, when their allotment of water could be regulated. Where this is done and the soil is not of too heavy a nature there is no difficulty in growing them with excellent results. Cultivation between the rows appears to be one of the best factors to induce a growth of new bulblets, and I have seen Roman hyacinths grown here from transplanted bulblets that were much larger than anything we are able to import. With narcissi and daffodils the same rule applies, and to have really good success with them they should be kept away from moisture during their resting season. G.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues dry and warm. Business is fair, although a good down-pour would liven things up. Flowers continue plentiful, with the exception of violets. Mums continue to be the most popular flower and the price has fallen a little. Roses are not plentiful. Maid is the only variety shown in quantity. They cost the retailers from 50 cents to $1 per dozen. Carnations are fully up to the quality and are becoming more plentiful. Valley is scarcer, as are longiflorums. Sweet peas are getting very short of stem. Other outside stock has almost disappeared, although some of the growers are bringing in good cuttings of gaillardias, stocks and cornflowers. Maidenhair fern is becoming shorter and smilax longer. Other greens continue in good supply.

NURSERY NEWS.

AMERICAN ASSOCIATION OF NURSERYMEN.

Pres., E. Albertson, Bridgeport, Ind.; Vice-Pres., Orlando Harrison, Berlin, Md.; Sec'y, Geo. C. Seager, Rochester; Treas., C. L. Yates, Rochester. The 31st annual convention will be held at Dallas, Texas, June, 1906.

THE business in hardy perennials has been very good this fall.

THE grafting machine is making very slow work of displacing the old-fashioned method.

THERE is complaint of poor packing on consignments of peonies from Holland growers.

IN the southeast, Kieffer pear orchards gave good and profitable crops the past season and quickened the sale of trees.

LANDSCAPE architects operating in the middle west, report considerable work for fall and very much more in sight for spring. The orders in most cases are small but numerous.

THE high price of apples confirms the report that there is a shortage in the crop. Even the Ben Davis is selling at 50 cents a peck—to unsuspecting customers.—Chicago Tribune.

ENGLISH apple growers, alarmed at the rapidly increasing importations of American fruit, are organizing marketing associations for the purpose of putting the home product on the market in the most attractive form.

A NURSERYMAN has been operating in the vicinity of Scranton, Iowa, with a contract which provides for cancellation only on the payment of a large percentage of the gross amount of the order. The buyers have found their orders swelled, and the cancellation clause has secured a number of settlements. Others have combined to resist collection.

THE nurserymen are all pretty well pleased with the fall season. On account of the warm weather in early autumn it was late before digging could be begun on many items, but large deliveries have been made, particularly by wholesale growers, who find that each year more and more of their customers are equipped with storage facilities and like to get their stock in the fall instead of in the spring. A number of the wholesalers say that there is now little difference between the volume of invoices for spring and fall deliveries. If freezing weather will hold off a little longer digging operations will be well out of the way, with good supplies under cover. It was a good growing season everywhere.

NAME OF TREE.

I enclose sample leaves taken from a small tree. Will you kindly tell me through the REVIEW the name of the tree? J. W. S.

The leaves enclosed are of Ginkgo biloba, also called Salisburia adiantifolia and maidenhair tree. This is of considerable value as a lawn specimen and is also being increasingly used for street planting, more especially in Washington, D. C. It is hardy as far north as Canada. W. N. C.

THE HYDRANGEA.

For beauty and attractiveness as an ornamental shrub but few hardy plants equal and none excels Hydrangea paniculata grandiflora when well cultivated, closely trimmed and properly cared for, especially as regards an ample supply of water. While the hydrangea will successfully withstand the severest winters, it appears it cannot be grown to its greatest perfection in many of the northern states. In the central west it seldom exceeds in size the lower classes of shrubs. A success in certain parts of New York, in other sections not far distant it is apparently a failure. In Jamestown the hydrangea grows to perfection. In Buffalo it is not a great success.

One of its favorite habitats is northern New Jersey, the environments appearing to be particularly adapted to its growth and development. There it is quite common, growing luxuriantly, not only in the rich soil of well kept ornamental grounds but in a majority of the dooryards whose owners have a love of flowers. We illustrate herewith a hydrangea grown at Brookside, on a small country place near Little Falls, N. J., which is thought to be as large and attractive as any to be seen in the vicinity of New York. It is probably twenty-five years old and, before the blooms reach their maturity and become so weighty, the tree stands over sixteen feet high, with a diameter of from seven-teen to eighteen feet. The upper and outer blooms, in their highest perfection, measure ten to twelve inches in length and seven to eight inches in diameter.

It is difficult to fully appreciate and impossible to describe in words, the charm and beauty of the tree when at its best, in August and September, carrying several hundred pure white graceful blooms. Standing, as it does, but a short distance from one of the magnificent highways, so common in New Jersey, largely traveled by automobilists, it attracts great attention. Recently when the tree was trimmed, the blooms after removal, were counted and tallied 363. W. A. S.

RAILROAD TIES.

In order not to be dependent upon lumber shipped from territories far from the line, the Pennsylvania railroad is planting 600,000 locust seedlings on the company's properties, at a number of places along the Susquehanna and Juniata rivers. In the last two years the road has set up about 800,000, and the next year propose to plant about 300,000.

Owing to the increase of vast railroad operations the forests near the railroads have been stripped so that ties for the most part have to be brought from a distance and every year the distance grows greater, for it requires about 620,000,000 cross ties to furnish the railroads of the United States annually, and to fill this demand about 200,000 acres of woodland are yearly wiped out.

CALIFORNIA PRIVET.

Could you give me some information as to the time for trimming California privet? One of my customers has a hedge of this kind and wants it pruned this fall. It is six or seven feet in height now. It was cut back a few years ago to the height of four feet and has had no other attention since. Will it hurt it if it is cut back to three feet? D. C. N.

We cannot recommend pruning California privet hedges at this season. Wait until the plants have started to grow in the spring, say about the end of May, and then cut them down to the desired height. To keep the hedges in good condition they should not be allowed to grow so long untrimmed. It will pay to give the hedge another trimming about the end of July. This will keep it in nice shape. W. N. CRAIG.

CLEANLINESS.

The following was written for English nurserymen but the advice is so good, and so applicable to many American nurseries and greenhouse establishments that it is recommended for an especially careful reading:

"A writer in a contemporary wonders why nurserymen do not as a rule take more pride in the appearance of their grounds. He thinks they would have more pleasure in life, and also find it more profitable.

"As we read these lines, we recalled, with a pang, two or three places we have lately visited, which we left with a sickly feeling. Now, where is the common-sense of it? Those men hoeing in a bed of twitch-grass up to their knees—we are well within the mark in saying that they would have gone over the ground thoroughly, four times with the same time and labor, if they had only been started at the proper time. This is tantamount to saying that this particular ground might have been pulled over eight or twelve times during the summer, instead of two or three at the same cost.

"We do not like to think of the proprietor's feelings, when he escorts a visitor round a wilderness of this sort; but what about the foreman and the men under him? Are they not liable to lose their self-respect and energy, and sink to lifeless drudges? Then as to the stock—it seems a waste of time to remind practical men of the difference in growth and appearance between trees grown in a well-cultivated nursery, and those found at lifting time in a fox-cov-ert. All the same, the necessity for dining it in strikes us in far too large a proportion of the places we visit.

"We have expressed the opinion before and endorse it afresh, that many of our nurserymen would be better off, if they laid half their land down to grass, and put their labor and manure on the rest. We might add a word as to the effect of appearances on the buyer. More than half those who call to look at trees, know very little about them, and are as much impressed by the general look of the establishment as by the stock they wish to purchase. Clean land, neatly trimmed fences, and grass roads regularly mown, all impress the visitor with the idea that he has got into a place where the owner is up-to-date, and knows his business, and that he may safely entrust his interests to his care. The reverse conditions naturally induce suspicions as to the business ability of the owner, and the buyer, if he places an order, wants to see his name on every tree before he leaves, and probably thinks the seller a kind of man who may be safely bullied out of a big discount off catalogue prices."

ORANGE, N. J.

The regular monthly meeting of the New Jersey Floricultural Society took place on November 3. The floral display, as usual, contained many noteworthy specimens. The Cattleya labiata of William Barr, grown by Arthur W. Bodwell, which gained the first prize at the recent show, was again entered in competition and received 95 points in the contest for the annual prize. It was conceded by the orchid experts to be the finest specimen they had seen, the flowers measuring nine inches from tip to tip. Chrysanthemums made up the greater part of the display, save the vegetable section, which covered a large space. These were from John Crosby Brown, grown by Peter Duff, and Douglas Robinson, grown by John Gervin. A specimen adiantum, grown by Dr. Kindsgrab, and a sport from Carnation Enchantress, from the Colgates, grown by William Reid, were also shown. The report of the secretary showed the flower show held October 30 and 31, in East Orange, to have been a financial success. Mathew Peterson, under gardener for O. D. Munn, was elected a member and Col. H. A. Potter and George Simpson, of East Orange, and Frank Drew, gardener for Thomas A. Edison, were placed in nomination.

NEW ORLEANS.

November 1, the day in which more flowers are sold in New Orleans than at any other time in the year, is gone and this year sales have been larger than ever before. Scarcity of stock and maybe also a few more new deaths during the past summer, was no doubt the cause. Prices have been good. Home-grown outdoor chrysanthemums not less than $2 a dozen; northern flowers $4 to $5 a dozen and more, some paying as much as 60 cents for one flower. Carnations were $1.50; short roses $2. Every florist was entirely cleared out of his white stock. Anything which looked like a flower was disposed of at a good price. Small chrysanthemums, greatly used to make bunches, were very scarce. Now we are getting ready for the show, which opens next week.

ROCHESTER, N. Y.

The Market.

We have had a remarkable fall, with plenty of sunshine. It was very late that the growers were favored with a good frost and the long season for garden flowers kept the price of indoor stock lower than last season. Now we are beginning to get more seasonable prices. Carnations are bringing $2 and $3 per hundred, with not any too many to go around. Some think that when the cool, dark weather sets in there will be a shortage, as a good many of the growers complain of the good weather working off the buds. Chrysanthemums are in abundance and find good sale at satisfactory prices.

Various Notes.

G. Hart, formerly with Salter Bros., opened a commission house here last spring. He reports business very satisfactory. Most of our growers are now taking him their entire cut and say they get better returns than they did when they sold their own stock.

Charles Fry, our largest carnation grower, reports business good. He has remodeled quite a number of his houses, besides building a new residence.

James Bishop has been cutting some fine chrysanthemums. His carnations are also doing finely.

N. A. James has had an enormous crop of roses. He said his carnations never looked better and he has been cutting more mums than he could use at his retail business, which he reports is on the increase every day. H. M.

HAGERSTOWN, MD.—Joseph R. Freeman, of Washington, was the judge of the floral exhibits at the Washington county agricultural fair held October 11 to 14. He proved an expert in his line and most favorably impressed the management.

ABUNDANCE (White)

The phenomenal yielder, the freest, earliest bloomer in existence, the most profitable carnation ever offered to the trade, easily gives four times as many flowers as the freest bloomer already introduced; a bench planted Aug. 31 is now in full bloom to which there will be no let up until thrown out next summer; come and see it. It will pay you if you are in the market for a carnation that will give you plenty of flowers at all times and not only at certain times. A good size, long stemmed flower. You can make no mistake by stocking up with it. Price for well-rooted cuttings, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate; cuttings delivered as soon as rooted; send in your order early as orders are filled in strict rotation. Unrooted cuttings at same rates with 25 extra on each 100. Cash before delivery.

NECESSITIES FOR THE FLORIST

No. 1—Model Extension Carnation Support. Light, strong and easily applied. Every grower of Carnations should use these.

No. 2—Model "Extension Ring" Carnation and Plant Support. This is a stake with "Corkscrew Anchor." It has an extension ring which can be extended or contracted as desired and has a spring which clasped around the stake will hold the ring firmly in place at any desired height as shown in cut.

No. 3—Model Glazing Points. Made of Zinc. Durable, practical, indestructible. No rights or lefts. Try them and you will use no others.

No. 4—New Model Extension Carnation Supports. This new model support is in every way identical with our model supports with the only exception of the anchor. It is preferred by some growers on account of the lower price and corkscrew anchor.

No. 5—Model Pot Hanger. Adjustable to pots of all sizes up to ten inches. Can be put on quickly and taken off easily. The only practical device for converting ordinary flower pots into hanging baskets. We also have a pot hanger for pots up to five inches.

No. 6—Model Corkscrew Anchor. Looped-top stake.

NOTICE—Our Model Tomato and Heavy Plant Support is the same as No. 1 and No. 4. It is made of heavy galvanized wire, and growers of tomatoes cannot do without it.

The various garden fixtures manufactured by the Parker-Bruen Mfg. Co. are so well known to the trade that comment as to the quality of the product is unnecessary. A few of our most popular articles are here illustrated and it is requested that dealers send for our catalogue and price list.

DES MOINES, IA.

The Des Moines Florists' Club met October 24 at the Iowa Seed Co.'s store and completed organization. President Lambert occupied the chair. By unanimous vote the following were admitted to membership: J. T. D. Fulmer, superintendent Union park; Capt. James A. Brewer, superintendent Woodland cemetery; Miss Etta Hanson and Miss Anderson.

An amusing incident occurred at this juncture. When Mr. Fulmer realized that he had been voted into the club, there was pathos in his voice as he said: "To think that I should see the day when I should be voted into the Des Moines Florists' Club." He was secretary of the first florists' club in the city, organized in 1894, but now considered nonexistent. Mr. Fulmer failed to get to our first meeting through the failure of Uncle Sam to deliver the notice in time. It might be said in this connection that Mr. Fulmer is the father of Miss Fulmer, who, though not a florist, has attended the last eight national conventions, and contributed toward the enjoyment of the occasion by the rendition of vocal solos. Mr. Fulmer took the situation of his being "voted" in philosophically and in a very appropriate speech presented the new club with the records of the old one, also turning over to C. N. Page, the new treasurer, a balance of $1.95, which, according to the old records, must have been in his possession for eleven years. This act won the applause of the meeting.

The chair requested Mr. Wragg to prepare a paper for the next meeting, under the title of "How Can We Best Improve the Surroundings of the Home." Peter Lambert will read the history of the florists' business in Des Moines up to the present time.

WHITE PERFECTION

THE MOST PERFECT WHITE CARNATION

THE LARGEST OF ALL

NO VARIETY EQUALS IT IN SIZE AND PRODUCTIVENESS

PHOTOGRAPHED FROM WEST END OF HOUSE

This house was planted late in July without the loss of a plant. In the short time of four weeks every plant had produced six to eight flowering stems which were cut back. Its early and free flowering habit was again shown in the equal number of flowering shoots produced in a short time, and the above cut taken November 1 has been the condition of the house from the time we began cutting blooms six weeks ago. This variety will produce a continuous cut of bloom through the entire season. PLANT WHITE PERFECTION: For—Quality and quantity; For—Very early bloom; For—Large pure white flowers; For—A healthy and free-growing habit; For—A variety that is always in bloom. WHITE PERFECTION will be a good investment. It is in line of improvement with the other white varieties we have offered in past years. We have a large stock and will guarantee to supply well-grown and well-rooted cuttings. Place your order now. Delivery to begin early in January, 1906.

The Market.

Business continues good, but not quite up to last week. Every wholesale house is receiving mums in large quantities and they are selling very well this year. The top price is $3 per dozen and from that they can be had down to 50 cents. Roses are in heavier supply and white show a tendency to drag a little. Carnations remain scarce and are sold out quickly. Other stock, such as valley, baby primrose, snapdragon, etc., sells well. Violets are not coming in very large quantities as yet and sell quickly. Green goods of all kinds are good property.

Various Notes.

Saturday will be our annual chrysanthemum show day and from the present outlook it will be right up to the highest standard of former years. Besides our home exhibitors, there will be several displays from out of town. Frank Huntsman, of Fort Thomas, Ky., has a seedling rose of his own production which is a very fine thing. It is the result of a cross between Chateau and Cusin and is a dark pink, with good stem and foliage. It is certainly a beautiful rose, and I expect it to be heard from in the future. L. F. Benson, of Newport, Ky., has been on the sick list. It was a bad cold and he is about again. John Evans and Theo. Bock were visitors during the past week.

Albert Duebendorfer met death in a remarkable manner November 1. He slipped and fell while superintending the construction of a new greenhouse, striking his chest on one of the joists. It was the same sort of blow that is known to pugilists as the "solar plexus punch," only the contact was so severe that internal hemorrhages followed and death resulted. Mr. Duebendorfer was worthy chaplain of the aerie of Eagles, and a member of the Knights of Columbus.

PROPAGATING LILIES.

Coming across, in my garden, a scale from Lilium auratum, which was literally smothered with minute bulbs, suggested a few notes on another method of propagation. Scales, as generally managed, and embedded in orthodox fashion in very sandy soil, usually produce one bulb, and on more than one occasion I have discovered discarded portions on the rubbish heap making a gallant attempt to reproduce their species. Experience teaches us that the scales should be laid horizontally on the soil, and very lightly covered with equal portions of sand and fiber, and the cultural treatment for the bulbs when formed is precisely the same as for those from flowering stems.

I understand that the Dutch propagate their hyacinths by lacerating the basal portion of large bulbs, which induces a fine crop of young bulbs to form, this may be termed express-culture, as compared with the ordinary and natural production of offsets. I may mention that I experimented with three liliiums a couple of years ago, namely, L. auratum, L. lancifolium rubrum, and L. auratum rubro-vittatum, in like manner, and, while the original bulbs were destroyed, quite a hundred bulbils were produced, the lacerations being crowded.—Gardeners' Magazine.

CAPACITY OF BOILER.

I have a Scotch marine boiler eight feet long and forty-four inches in diameter. It contains nineteen 3½-inch flues. The large flue is twenty-four inches in diameter and the grate is 24x44 inches. How much 4-inch pipe will it supply with hot water? F. C. A.

From the dimensions given I judge your boiler will supply heat for about 750 lineal feet of 4-inch pipe. L. C. C.

MINERALIZED RUBBER CO., NEW YORK.

Gentlemen:—Send me 50 feet of hose, same as before. My greenhouses are 125 feet long, with cement walks, and the Anchor Greenhouse Hose, which I purchased of you in 19'3, has been dragged over these walks every day and is just commencing to give out. I am more than pleased with it and can truthfully say it has outlasted any hose I ever bought before.

Very truly yours, [Signed] W. L. FARQUHARSON.

HEATING.

We have three adjoining houses which run east and west. The south house, which we will call No. 1, is 17x61 feet. We need 60 degrees here when it is 20 degrees below zero outdoors. In No. 2, sixty-four feet long, we need 54 degrees and in No. 3, also sixty-four feet long, we need 56 degrees. The houses are all five feet to the gutter. The first and second houses are ten feet to the ridge and the third nine feet.

Along the east end of the three houses there is first an office, then a lean-to 13x64, and then the boiler shed. We wish to heat with hot water. The boiler has a large dome with a 4-inch opening at the top. At the bottom there are two 4-inch and one 3-inch openings. We have on hand some 2-inch and 3-inch pipe for flows, 520 feet of 1½-inch for house No. 1 and 1-inch pipe for all the rest. Will you please tell us how much will be needed in each house? Can the main flow, passing through the lean-to, be raised at the farther end, where it enters the office, and drop the branch flows of the main flow to the far end of each greenhouse? Our supply tank is made of boiler iron and is above the boiler house. We also used it as an expansion tank. Is this wasting fuel? R. B.

You fail to give the width of house No. 2 or No. 3, but I have assumed them to be about the same as No. 1, i. e., seventeen feet, and have made calculations accordingly. House No. 1 should have at least nine returns of 1½-inch pipe supplied by one 2-inch flow. Houses No. 2 and No. 3, if of the same size as No. 1, should have a like amount of piping, while house No. 4 should have eight returns if 1½-inch pipe is used. I would not advise the use of 1-inch pipe for hot water, even under the pressure system, but if you elect to use it houses No. 2 and No. 3 will require thirteen lines of pipe each, besides a 2-inch supply, and house No. 4 will require eleven lines of 1-inch pipe. There is no objection to giving the main flow pipe a gentle up-hill grade through the lean-to house. If this is done I think it would be well also to maintain the up-hill system in the flow or supply pipes in all the houses. I fear the runs are pretty long for hot water, and with the 1-inch pipe I anticipate some difficulty in securing and maintaining a circulation. If you arrange the plant so as to run it as a steam plant during severe weather the small pipes will give satisfaction. If possible it would be well to carry an independent riser from the boiler to each house. There is no objection to using the supply tank as an expansion tank. L. C. C.

POT MAKERS FOR 140 YEARS

A. H. HEWS & Co. Inc.

CAMBRIDGE, MASS.

FLORIST WARE OF EVERY KIND

NORTHERN TEXAS.

Another fine rain followed by warm sunshine has given things a new start in this section. Roses are in full bloom and dahlias are at their best. Mums at most of the places visited are of good form and size, but in most instances badly blistered by the sun. Carnations are coming on in good shape, Enchantress, Lawson, Estelle and Boston Market doing much better than other varieties. In roses, Meteor, Malmaison, Gould, La France and Cochet are good but Kaiserin does best of all. Bride, Maid and Perle are a failure, the excessive heat and dryness of the atmosphere burning them up. The cool rain has put vincas out of business, but stocks will soon be in bloom and will become the staple article for funeral work. Quite a number of decorations have been reported from the different towns, keeping the florists busy. There has been, I understand, a good demand for mums around Dallas, and I have been informed that as high as $20 per hundred wholesale has been paid.

In lilies, Harrisii are reported being in first-class condition, while considerable loss is being reported with the callas. Bulbous stock is in good condition. Prices in the smaller towns are: Roses, 50 to 75 cents per dozen; carnations, 50 cents. Violets, which are coming fine, sell for from 35 to 50 cents per hundred, while mums bring in an average of from $2 to $4 per dozen. The reports from larger towns are a shade in advance of these prices.

Mr. Farley's plant at Denison was visited last Sunday. Being cramped for room, Mr. Farley cannot make the display that he would like to, but the near future will see him in the front rank.

Mr. Munson, of Denison, has some of the finest Rex begonias seen for some time and he has quite a fine display of roses. NARCISSUS.

TRENTON, MO.—B. A. Barnes has 3,500 feet of glass and is very successful growing vegetables for the home market, with a small surplus to ship.

SHELDON, ILL.—E. C. Robb has for several years been badly troubled with rust on his chrysanthemums but this season has clean plants. He attributes the difference to the use of different water.

PACKING PIPES.

I wish to use some cast-iron pipe for heating and should be glad to have you publish directions as to how to make satisfactory joints. A. M.

There are a great many mixtures used for calking metallic joints. The two here given may prove as satisfactory as any. After placing the pipes in the desired position place a roll of oakum around each pipe and with a calking tool pack it firmly into the hub of the pipe, then fill the remaining space with one or the other of these preparations:

- Sal ammoniac 2 oz.
- Sulphur 1 oz.
- Clean iron filings or borings....12 lbs.
- Iron filings..... 4 lbs.
- Fire clay 2 lbs.
- Powdered potsherds10 lbs.

Add enough water to form a paste. Make into a paste by adding strong brine. L. C. C.

PIPING NARROW HOUSES.

I have four houses 9x100 feet. Will eight runs of 1-inch pipe be sufficient to maintain 60 degrees when the temperature outside is 12 degrees to 15 degrees below zero? There are two benches each three feet six inches wide in each house and I plan to put four runs of 1-inch pipe under each bench, or in other words 3,200 lineal feet in the four houses. J. B.

If these houses are independent, or disconnected houses, it would be best to provide each with ten runs of 1-inch pipe. If they are connected, built on the ridge and furrow plan, I think the eight pipes as you have planned will be sufficient. L. C. C.

WHY BUILD BIG?

We believe thoroughly in the large even span house for cut flower growers. Believe in them so strong that we have made this little diagram just to show you our reasons. To start with, the single house (A) has the same amount of glass surface as houses B-B, yet heated with less fuel. (A) has 26% additional air space—more uniform degree of temperature and moisture—increased circulation of air, better ventilation. The greater mass of heat is a protection against sudden outside changes—gutter, ridges, sash, header, roof of one B shades other B greater part of the day (see diagram C). Last, but the one on which the entire matter really hinges, a saving of from 15 to 20% in fuel, some even claim 25%. Of course We build any form of house you prefer. If you intend building this spring take the matter up with us NOW so you will be ready THEN. Send for Catalog J-G.

VICTORY

THE BEST SCARLET CARNATION

HERE ARE SEVERAL REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD GROW VICTORY.

It is a money maker, being remarkably prolific.

Its vigor of growth is second to no other, and way ahead of its rivals.

It is a Fancy, in the fullest sense of the word, and sells for highest prices—its color being a brilliant scarlet.

All those who saw VICTORY growing are unanimous in their opinion that it is absolutely the best scarlet carnation today.

As a keeper and shipper VICTORY is a "Globe Trotter" and has no equal, having traveled such long distances as Chicago, St. Louis, Louisville, Indianapolis, Milwaukee, Columbus, Toronto and Kansas City. At each of these exhibitions VICTORY has secured the highest possible recognition.

THE EXHIBITIONS

KANSAS CITY.

The third Kansas City flower show was opened to the public at 7:30 p. m. November 13. The show this year surpasses any of the shows previously held, both in the number of exhibitors and in the quality of the stock exhibited. The handling of the exhibits and the arrangements are unexcelled. Superintendent Goodman and Secretary Shouse have been the busiest of men, placing exhibits and attending to the numerous duties incidental to the handling of one of the largest and best flower shows held in this country.

One of the most attractive exhibits of the entire show is a large display of Begonia Gloire De Lorraine, shown by Samuel Murray. This exhibit was one of the features of the show and attracted much attention. The C. A. Shaeffer Floral Co., recently organized here, made an exhibit and carried away several prizes. Among the out-of-town growers exhibiting were: E. G. Hill Co., W. J. and M. S. Vesey, F. R. Pierson Co., H. W. Buckbee, Wiator Bros., Nathan Smith & Son and Vaughan's Seed Store. All these had fine displays and it was a difficult matter to decide which was the best. The local florists captured their share of the ribbons, W. L. Rock taking thirty-one prizes, Samuel Murray thirty-one and W. J. Barnes ten.

The single judge system for each class was tried at this show for the first time. The judges were W. J. Stewart, Boston, and J. N. May, Summit, N. J. The following awards were made Monday:

White Chrysanthemum Plant—First, H. W. Buckbee, Rockford, Ill.; second, Vaughan's Seed Store, Chicago; third, S. Murray, Kansas City.

Red Chrysanthemum Plant—First, S. Murray; Kansas City.

Yellow Chrysanthemum Plant—First, Vaughan; second, W. L. Rock, Kansas City; third, H. W. Buckbee.

THE EXHIBITIONS

KANSAS CITY.

The third Kansas City flower show was opened to the public at 7:30 p. m. November 13. The show this year surpasses any of the shows previously held, both in the number of exhibitors and in the quality of the stock exhibited. The handling of the exhibits and the arrangements are unexcelled. Superintendent Goodman and Secretary Shouse have been the busiest of men, placing exhibits and attending to the numerous duties incidental to the handling of one of the largest and best flower shows held in this country.

One of the most attractive exhibits of the entire show is a large display of Begonia Gloire De Lorraine, shown by Samuel Murray. This exhibit was one of the features of the show and attracted much attention. The C. A. Shaeffer Floral Co., recently organized here, made an exhibit and carried away several prizes. Among the out-of-town growers exhibiting were: E. G. Hill Co., W. J. and M. S. Vesey, F. R. Pierson Co., H. W. Buckbee, Wieter Bros., Nathan Smith & Son and Vaughan's Seed Store. All these had fine displays and it was a difficult matter to decide which was the best. The local florists captured their share of the ribbons, W. L. Rock taking thirty-one prizes, Samuel Murray thirty-one and W. J. Barnes ten.

The single judge system for each class was tried at this show for the first time. The judges were W. J. Stewart, Boston, and J. N. May, Summit, N. J. The following awards were made Monday:

NEW ORLEANS.

On account of bad weather the opening of the flower show at New Orleans was postponed until Saturday, November 11, the exhibition being held in a tent. Mayor Behrman, in the presence of a large assembly, opened the show. His address was responded to by Miss Helen Pitkin, president of the Louisiana Sunshine Society. P. M. Chopin, president of the New Orleans Society, welcomed the audience in behalf of the florists.

Although the weather has not been so far what we would wish, the show is to be a success, judging from the first two days. At previous exhibitions we had better specimen chrysanthemums. The season has been somewhat against them this year and less competitors have entered the field. The cut flowers were fine and proved once more that, as well as anywhere else in the United States, New Orleans can produce perfect mums under glass.

The competition in ferns was great, every commercial variety being represented by splendid specimens. Groups of palms, araucarias, crotons, pandanus, ficus and dracaenas were numerous and, in fact, the whole tent, 80x250, was packed, leaving just space enough for the visitors to pass around.

In plants, the principal exhibitors and prize winners were P. A. Chopin, Abele Bros., M. M. De Lapouyade, J. A. Newsham, Henry Kraack, Chas. Eble, E. Valdejo, J. H. Menard, Geo. Mahn, C. W. Eichling.

The judges were: George Thomas, E. E. Weller and John Eblen.

BOSTON.

Neither in quality nor quantity of exhibits could this year's show be classed as up to the average so far as chrysanthemums are concerned. The date set was about ten days too late for cut blooms, which in many cases had a half faded look on the opening day. Pot plants were good, but less numerous than usual. The cut blooms averaged smaller than usual. This is not surprising, as on many of the large private estates smaller sizes are now demanded and commercial growers find it more difficult to dispose of their largest sizes. An increasing taste for medium size flowers and for sprays, not only of the Japanese, but also of anemone and pompon varieties is noted.

An interesting class in the cut bloom section was one calling for a representative collection of classes labeled in accordance with the classification of the C. S. A. D. F. Roy won, with a fine assortment, Geo. F. Fabyan, James Stuart gardener, second. For twenty-five blooms in twenty-five varieties there was a strong competition. E. D. Jordan, H. A. Abraham, gardener, was a good first. Some of his best flowers were, Donald McLeod, T. Carrington, William Duckham, T. Eaton, Goldmine, Henry Barnes, Col. Appleton, Mrs. Coombes, Merza, Leila Filkins, Mme. Gustave Henry, Mrs. Peabody, S. T. Wright, General Hutton and Maynell. Thomas Doliber, N. Byrne, gardener, was second, and D. F. Roy third. For six vases in six varieties ten blooms each, Thomas Doliber was first and M. F. Plant, T. W. Head, gardener, second. D. F. Roy was the only exhibitor of twelve incurved, taking first prize. For twelve Japanese, there was a keen tussle. Peter B. Robb led, with excellent blooms of Mrs. G. Mileham, C. J. Salter, M. Cahuzac, Mrs. Swinburne, T. Eaton, Wm. Duckham, Sir George White, Frank Hanford, W. R. Church, Charles Longley, Yellow Eaton and Duchess of Sutherland. E. O. Jordan was second and D. F. Roy third. The last named won for twelve reflexed, twelve anemone and twelve sprays pompons.

For six new introductions, Peter B. Robb was first and M. F. Plant second. For ten blooms red and long stems, Geo. F. Fabyan and Thos. Doliber won in order named, each showing John Shrimpton. For pink, Thos. Doliber won, with Dr. Enguehard; James Nicol second, with the same variety; A. F. Whitin, Thos. Howden, gardener, third, with W. Duckham. For white, T. Doliber won, with Nellie Pockett; M. F. Plant second, with Merza; Mrs. John Shepard third, with Eaton. In yellow, Mr. Doliber again led, with Appleton; M. F. Plant second, with Mrs. W. Duckham; A. F. Whitin third, with Appleton. For any other color, G. F. Fabyan was first, for T. Carrington; T. Doliber second, for Kate Broomhead. Some extra fine Mrs. Jerome Jones and its yellow sport were shown by A. F. Whitin in the special Lane memorial class for this variety. In fact, they were the best of the large blooms in the hall.

For eight specimen plants, J. S. Bailey, J. Nylan, gardener, was first with a fine lot of plants, hardly equal to what we have seen in previous years, but still better probably than would be found at any other show in America. His varieties were M. Richardson, T. Carrington, Mrs. J. R. Tranter, Golden Trophy, R. H. Pearson, Black Hawk, Mrs. F. A. Constable and L. Boehmer, very fine. E. W. Converse, Robert Marshall, gardener, was second, with fine plants of Mrs. J. G. Bear, Shrimpton, Broomhead, L. Boehmer, Black Hawk, R. H. Pearson, Mrs. F. A. Constable and Mrs. J. R. Tranter. The same two exhibitors divided the other specimen plant class prizes between them. For twelve plants naturally grown, without disbudding, arranged with palms or other foliage plants, the second prize went to E. W. Converse, third to Mrs. J. L. Gardner, Wm. Thatcher gardener. The entries in this class were rather disappointing. For six plants grown with six flowers each, not over 7-inch pots, D. F. Roy was first and second.

There was a fine display of carnations in the small hall, the quality extra good for so early in the season. For twenty-five crimson, W. Nicholson was first, Backer & Co. second, S. J. Goddard third, all showing Harry Fenn. For dark pink, G. N. Black won, with Lawson. For light pink, Enchantress took all the prizes, these going in order named to Nicholson, Goddard and Backer & Co. The Cottage Gardens had the best scarlet, showing Robert Craig. W. Nicholson won with fine Wolcott for white, H. A. Stevens Co. second, with Lady Bountiful. Backer Exhibits in the Class for Twenty-five Varieties at Boston, November 8 to 11.

First Prize Group of Eight Plants Shown at Boston by J. S. Bailey.

& Co. had the best yellow, showing Eldorado. In the class for white variegated, S. J. Goddard won, with Prosperity; Nicholson second, with Mrs. Patten; G. N. Black third, with Prosperity. There being no class for any other color, Prosperity came in competition with Patten and other striped varieties.

Numerous seedlings and novelties were staged. Guttman & Weber showed a grand vase of Victory. Geo. B. Anderson had a very fine scarlet of large size with stiff stems. If the flower does not burst and is supported on longer stems later in the season it will be valuable. H. A. Jahn showed a number of good seedlings. One of shrimp color received honorable mention. From the Peirce Farm, Topsfield, Mass., came Marion Peirce, a flesh pink, which received a similar award. Backer & Co. had the same awards for a deep pink sport from Enchantress and a clear yellow seedling. They also had a number of other promising sorts. Patten & Co. showed Pink Patten, which was the only sort to receive a certificate of merit. H. A. Stevens Co. received honorable mention for a sport from Lawson of Enchantress color. Other varieties shown included State of Maine, from L. C. Goddard; Mikado, from Patten & Co.; Aristocrat, Afterglow, Crimson Glow and Fiancee, the latter extra fine, from W. Nicholson. Helen Goddard was staged in fine shape by S. J. Goddard and was much admired.

For display of cut orchids, J. G. Rothwell, Emil Johansson, gardener, staged over 125 bottles, including many valuable sorts, and secured the Appleton silver gilt medal, Col. Chas. Pfaff, Geo. Melvin gardener, taking the silver medal.

There were numerous miscellaneous displays. E. McMulkin had a fine group of foliage plants in which a number of cattleyas were used; also cut cattleyas. Julius Roehrs Co. had a table of orchids and foliage plants. Lager & Hurrell had a nice assortment of orchids. J. E. Rothwell had a fine specimen plant of Cypripedium insigne Sanderæ and H. W. Wheeler a white form of Cattleya labiata. Farquhar & Co. had an extensive collection of coniferæ in pots and tubs, also palms and other foliage plants; awarded a silver medal. Mrs. A. W. Blake had a display of chrysanthemums and palms. Mrs. E. M. Gill had a table of chrysanthemums and H. H. Barrows & Son, Nephrolepis Barrowsii and their beautiful new compact form, N. Whitmanii.

Alexander Montgomery had a fine vase of Wellesley rose. R. Vincent, Jr. & Son had over 100 varieties of pompon chrysanthemums which were one of the best features of the show, attracting more attention than the big blooms. These were awarded a silver medal, in addition to a gratuity. Some of the best sorts noted were Hijos, Prince of Wales, Sunset, Miss Julia, Blanche, Jeanette, Queen of Whites, extra fine; Lady May, another fine white; Miss Roe, Mrs. Vincent, Sheridan and Rhoda.

There were fine displays of seasonable fruits and vegetables. Excellent attendances were recorded each day, due in large part to the superb weather.

W. N. CRAIG.

PHILADELPHIA.

High as is the standard of cut flowers of chrysanthemums at our show, the Chrysanthemum Society of America raised the standard this season. To this society and to its members we owe the lion's share of praise for the most wonderful collection of cut flowers ever seen in this city. Among new varieties Mrs. Wm. Duckham, from Thos. W. Head, of Groton, Conn., won the silver cup. The same variety from A. Herrington, of Madison, N. J., captured a silver medal.

This sort is a magnificent exhibition flower of great depth. The color is yellow. R. D. Foote, of Morristown, N. J., R. Vince, gardener, won the Pierson silver cup for six varieties, six each.

Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., received a silver medal for a grand pink seedling of a pleasing shade, which they named Mayor Weaver. E. G. Hill Co., of Richmond, Ind., exhibited a handsome white named Adelia.

Among the finer varieties noted besides Wm. Duckham, pink, already mentioned, exceedingly large and handsome, there were, in white, Nellie Pockett, Merza, T. Eaton, D. V. West and Fidelity; in yellow, Col. Appleton and Gen. Hutton; golden, Yellow Eaton, Mrs. T. D. M. Carduza, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Beauty of Lehigh, Mrs. W. Mease and a good seedling from F. R. Pierson Co., Tarrytown, N. Y.; in pink, Mrs. Potter, Vivian-Morel, Mlle. Liger, Bentley, Orizaba, Filkins, Dr. Enguehard, Lucy Evans, Etherington and BRIGHTHURST; in red, W. R. Church, Lady Hopetoun, Matchless, S. T. Wright, Black Hawk, darker than others; in bronze, Brutus, J. H. Doyle and Lord Salisbury.

The exhibit of W. Wells & Co., of Surrey, England, of twenty-five varieties, one bloom each, short stems, carried remarkably well and created much interest. This was a fine exhibit.

C. H. Totty, Madison, N. J., included among his exhibits half a dozen Japanese sorts with curious combinations of color, very striking in appearance. There were two large exhibits of pompons that were well staged and very popular, one of twenty-five named varieties from Henry F. Michell Co., the other of over fifty distinct sorts from Thos. Meehan's Sons.

In the plant classes, Gordon Smirl captured a majority of the prizes. His specimen pink was A. J. Balfour; yellow, Golden Age; white, Mutual Friend. In the class of three plants, three varieties, he exhibited Golden Age, Peter Kay and Georgiana Pitcher. Another good trio was Mrs. Nathan Smith, Wm. Duckham and S. T. Wright. Four plants, four varieties, were Golden Age, W. Duckham, J. C. Neville and Geo. W. Childs. The same exhibitor received a silver medal for Mrs. Nathan Smith, white, one of six varieties. The other five were Balfour, T. Carrington, Garden Queen, Geo. W. Childs and Golden Age. John McCleary received first for best plant, new variety, for Mrs. Wm. Duckham. He also exhibited a good plant of Brutus, bronze.

In the classes for foliage plants, John Thatcher had a number of fine specimens. Two of them were mentioned in the last report. Joseph Hurley exhibited twelve well grown specimens, also a large group of flowering and foliage plants. John Wilson had a group of beautifully grown crotons trained into perfect shape. His varieties were Sunbeam, Queen Victoria, Mortii, Evansianum, Hanburyanum, Hookerianum, Baron Rothschild, Interruptum and Andreanum.

The H. A. Dreer Co. filled the stage with an exhibit of new and rare plants correctly labeled. A few of the plants of special interest were Aralia Chabrieri, Nephrolepis Whitmanii, Alocasia macrorrhiza variegata, Begonia Turnford Hall, Kentia Belmoreana auricalus, Anthurium metallica, Adiantum Mairisii and A. tenerum. Wm. K. Harris exhibited a half-dozen beautiful Begonia Gloire de Lorraine in 8-inch pans. Ernest Schreiber had a half-dozen cyclamen in 6-inch and 7-inch pots. Robt. Craig & Son had a specimen begonia, Mrs. James Neal, with large single scarlet flowers. Arthur Mallon had a window box of heliotrope, six plants each, grown to a single stem three feet high, large flowers, a revelation to many. He also exhibited two window boxes of chrysanthemums, one Rustique, the other a white variety. Pandanus Sanderi from several exhibitors was well colored. Asparagus Sprengeri trained on a trellis was very pretty. The ferns were a feature of the show. Thos. Long exhibited twelve fine specimens.

H. H. Battles, Thornhedge Nurseries, sent Adiantum Farleyense, perfect specimens that reflected great credit on Frank S. Jackson and his assistant. F. R. Pierson Co. sent six fine specimens of Nephrolepis elegantissima.

In orchids, the Julius Roehrs Co., Rutherford, N. J., and Lager & Hurell, Summit, N. J., exhibited collections of plants in bloom and dormant. George Field, Washington, D. C., made a handsome exhibit of orchid blooms cut. His Dendrobium formosum was exceptionally fine, on long stems. He also had D. phalaenopsis and Vanda caerulea.

The rose exhibit was small. Joseph Heacock captured both American Beauty prizes. F. & H. Mergenthaler won first on Bride. Ernest Ashley, of Allentown, Pa., showed Killarney. R. D. Foote was first for Perle. All the above were excellent. There were a number of other varieties, including Richmond, Kaiserin, Gate and Maid. Myers & Samtman captured first on their new pink rose described previously. It is a pretty pink.

In violets, T. H. Norton, Hightstown, N. J., was first with Lady Campbell. Jacques Gilmet was first on Luxonne in two classes. R. D. Foote was first with Princess of Wales.

The carnations were very fine. The Cottage Gardens were first with fifty superb Robert Craig, scarlet; first with six vases of twenty-five each, the varieties being Enchantress, Lieut. Peary, Rachel Thompson, Mrs. Lawson, Mrs. Patten and Octoroon, crimson, hardly to be guessed by the name. John E. Haines, South Bethlehem, Pa., exhibited his new seedling named after himself, also Imperial, a showy striped variety, and a Lawson-colored sport from the latter. William Kleinheinz made an excellent show of four varieties, twelve each, Fiancee, White Lawson, Harlowarden and Enchantress. Mr. Kleinheinz also had some good roses, as had John Little.

The Henry F. Michell Co. had a most artistic Japanese garden, beautifully arranged by Philip Freud. The center was filled with bulbs, each sort by itself, with a Japanese Adam and Eve planting them and making you feel that you must plant some, too. Around this was a walk and outside, in horse-shoe form, a table of jardinières, pretty tubs, pot covers and all the finishing touches for a house garden of bulbs. Electric lights lent enchantment to the scene.

The Weathered Co., New York, erected a neat conservatory about 10x16 feet, showing all their construction ideas to advantage.

The Wm. H. Moon Co., Morrisville, Pa., had a choice collection of evergreens in tubs.

Robert Craig & Son had a well grown lot of Otaheite oranges full of fruit, also a plant of Bady chrysanthemum trained into fan shape.

The Burnham-Hitchings-Pierson Co. exhibited photos of their greenhouses and boilers.

The H. A. Dreer Co. showed fine bay trees.

A. W. Cox made a wonderful column of vegetables and fruit.

There was a splendid collection of vegetables and of fruit. John McCleary was a bright particular star here.

I have omitted two very fine collections of geraniums in full bloom, six plants each in 8-inch pots. The winner of first prize, Wm. Robertson, must have had at least three dozen fine blooms on some, if not all his plants.

The attendance was large and appreciative, and it is a pleasure to close with a word of well earned praise for the management. Secretary Rust had the cards ready for each exhibit on Monday, the judges did their work conscientiously and on time and the awards were all on the exhibits before the doors were thrown open on Tuesday evening.

Among the out-of-town visitors were Arthur Herrington and Chas. H. Totty, Madison, N. J.; Thos. W. Head, Groton, Conn.; F. R. Lotze, Glen Burnie, Md.; Fred H. Lemon, Richmond, Ind.; Wm. Nicholson, Farmington, Mass.; Alex. Montgomery, Natick, Mass.; Paul Dailledouze, Flatbush, N. Y.; R. Vince, Morristown, N. J.; John E. Haines, South Bethlehem, Pa.; Ernest Ashley, Allentown, Pa.; Ferd Heck, Reading, Pa.; John N. May, Summit, N. J.; W. A. Manda, South Orange, N. J.; Elmer D. Smith, Adrian, Mich.; F. R. Pierson, and Jas. T. Scott, Tarrytown, N. Y.; C. B. Weathered and Alex. Wallace, New York; J. L. Dillon, Bloomsburg, Pa.; Albert M. Herr, Lancaster, Pa.; A. N. Pierson, Cromwell, Conn. PHIL.

The Philadelphia exhibition, from the standpoint of number of exhibits, was a great success, some classes, notably the Wells gold medal competition, bringing out ten or more competitors. The show managers could have filled an additional hall with cut flowers had such been available, so closely did the cut flowers have to be packed to get them all in. The quality was the best that Philadelphia has ever shown. This was generally conceded.

R. Vince, gardener to R. D. Foote, Morristown, N. J., was the chief exhibitor and took first in every class he entered. He won the Wells gold medal, the Pierson cup, the Totty prize, the May prize and several others in the regular schedule. It is a tribute to the varieties of recent introduction to say that with the exception of Appleton all the flowers shown by him were varieties introduced the past two years. A. Herrington won the C. S. A. silver cup with W. Duckham, which makes his third time of winning this coveted trophy. Thomas W. Head won the Buckbee cup with Mrs. W. Duckham, was second in the gold medal competition and for the Totty prize.

A very interesting exhibit was the Wells exhibit, which came over from England and consisted of some twenty-four varieties, the most prominent of which were E. J. Brooks, Merstham Crimson, Mrs. G. Heaume and others of the season's novelties that have been spoken of in these columns. The flowers were fresh and good, Merstham Crimson particularly so, showing splendid color. E. J. Brooks was a monster flower, also Beatrice May. Mr. Wells deserves every credit for his enterprise in going to the expense and trouble of sending an exhibit over every year to help along the national society.

C. H. Totty had some thirty-four novelties on exhibition, most of which were duplicates of the varieties sent over by W. Wells, Mrs. John E. Dunne, Mrs. H. Partridge, Mrs. F. F. Thompson and Mary Ann Pockett being especially commented on.

F. R. Pierson Co. had on exhibition Glenview, an immense variety certified last year, and several other seedlings. They would have competed had not several boxes of flowers been smashed by the express company.

E. G. Hill Co. was ably represented by Mr. Lemon, who won the class for twelve varieties, five of each, and scored well in other classes. It is a tribute to western enterprise and packing that his flowers traveled perfectly.

Elmer D. Smith was on hand, good natured and genial as ever, but unfortunately for him most of his flowers had been ruined by being left in a warm room all night when they would have been better off in the boxes. He won the Pennsylvania silver medal for the best seedling in the show and also his own prize for best American seedling.

The meeting was slimly attended on the second day, but some good work was done, and the future is bright. Mr. Duckham, in his unavoidable absence, was re-elected president. His address contained several valuable suggestions, not the least important of which was as to ways and means of increasing the membership and usefulness of the society. Wm. Kleinheinz was elected vice-president and is the right man in the right place, for he is an enthusiast on mums and an excellent cultivator generally, as any one knows who ever saw his splendid work at Ogontz, in growing gardenias, roses and carnations. Mr. David Fraser, of Pittsburg, was elected secretary and that he will make a good one goes without saying.

It would be highly discourteous to close without paying a tribute to the genial and wholesouled hospitality shown at all times by the members of the Pennsylvania society. The Brave Old Duke went up and down the hill, the punch was on tap as usual and the never-failing assistance of Secretary Rust smoothed the path whenever things were not just right. C. H. T.

President Duckham's Address.

A year has passed since you greatly honored me by an election to the office of president. I am grateful for the honor, and have much enjoyed my year of service. It is a thousand pities that I must begin this brief address with an apology. A combination of circumstances, over which I seemed to have no reasonable control, made it necessary for me to depart for Europe for a short visit, before our society met in annual session. I had looked forward with great pleasure to this meeting, hoping to enjoy a pleasant fellowship with colleagues who have done their fair share in furthering the interests of this society, and of the superb flower which it represents to the world. I am denied the pleasure and must ask you to excuse my absence and accept from me a written, rather than a spoken address. You will, I am sure, not ascribe my absence to any lack of devotion to our cause, and will accept my apology in the spirit in which it is offered. As your president makes no pretension to being an orator, perhaps the ideas which he wishes to express may be as well written, and presented to you by the kind offices of a reader.

Let me first of all discharge the pleasant duty of expressing thanks, not mine only, but yours also, to the ancient and honorable society which has joined forces with us in this exhibition. We have had superb assistance in former years in other cities, but surely nowhere could we hope for a finer hospitality than this gracious historic city has to offer, or for a more efficient co-operation than the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society has proffered. Its praise is among all lovers of flowers, and its history is writ large in the story of American horticulture. I am sure that we shall not fail, in this place at least, to remember that not far away the never-to-be-forgotten John Bartram founded the first horticultural garden that America ever knew. That was in 1728, and in that early day he began hybridization, for the first time upon American soil. Some of his trees are still growing in the little park which most appropriately bears his name, and we shall do well to have his memory in remembrance. Little did he dream of the achievements of modern hybridizers, and nothing at all did he know of the "Queen of the Autumn." We have indeed made tremendous strides since then, but it was he who laid the foundations on which successive generations have builded. Well indeed would it be if we could lay some foundations ourselves, and build a better structure than we have yet reared.

It seems to me that we need first of all to emulate the example of the men who have made the Pennsylvania Horticultural Society a power in this great city, and proceed to make the Chrysanthemum Society of America a far greater influence than ever before. My distinguished predecessor, Mr. Herrington, has made suggestions some of which have already been accepted and have borne fruit. This is well. But our work has only begun. The society has only 180 members. Therein lies our real weakness. With this vast country as its territory the society ought easily to treble its membership in the course of another year. As a necessary preliminary to a campaign for a larger membership let me recommend that the society order the list of members and their addresses to be printed. When this is before us every member will see at a glance the many unfilled gaps in his own immediate vicinity, and may solicit his personal friends to join. Believe me, my friends, no other method is so sure, so easy and so prompt. No advertising, no exhibitions, no parade of claims is ever so effective in the upbuilding of such a society as personal solicitation.

But while the society is not so large as it should be, nor so influential, yet we may justly pride ourselves upon its achievements. If it had done nothing more than to influence by precept and example the growing and showing of chrysanthemums in the smaller localities it would have been well worth its cost in time and care. When this society became genuinely active in 1902 the local shows lacked almost every element of competition, even in those places where other flowers had been successfully exhibited. I may perhaps be permitted to say that in those days one or two men might be able to produce exhibition blooms where now a dozen such growers are to be found. The growth of the local shows has been phenomenally rapid. I need only remind you of the impressive displays at Orange, and Oceanic, at Tarrytown, at Madison and at several other similar places. It is in such local shows that we must seek much of the future extension of the chrysanthemum's popularity, for every one of them is a radiating center of influence upon its immediate neighborhood. There is nobody so obscure as not to know the rose; we must make it our goal to give the chrysanthemum just such a prominence as the far older flower now enjoys.

But, gentlemen, I think we may take even greater encouragement still than this. We may look about us with pride and amazement when we think of the rapid progress in the development of new exhibition varieties and in their successful cultivation since this society first began to exert its influence. We dare not claim indeed that we have had so large a share in this progress as we ought. We are still drawing upon Europe and especially Australia for new varieties, but we have a share in the progress, and shall do well to encourage ourselves by thinking how great and how rapid it has been.

What varieties were grown prior to 1902? It is perhaps not the easiest thing in the world to name representative ones, but it will be safe to say that Iora, Vivian-Morel, Chenon de Leche and Minerva were among the best of them. We used to think they were great flowers. But when we set over against them General Hutton, F. S. Vallis, W. R. Church, Mary Inglis, Ben Wells and Wm. Duckham (as grown in the east), how wonderful has the progress been in these few years! But the end is not yet. This present year is no exception to the rule, for it also has provided its novelties from which much may justly be expected. I shall not venture to name many of them, but there is not much risk in saying that Mrs. J. Dunne, T. Richardson, Mme. G. Rivol, Viola and Beatrice May will carry on the flag of progress.

But I have said enough. I congratulate you who have labored in the interest of this exhibition, who are now enjoying the fruit of your labors. I am sorry not to be with you, but I hope to visit the chrysanthemum show at Edinburgh and on my return may perhaps have some message of hope or instruction to communicate to you. Meanwhile I thank you for your kind support during the past year, and wish you a continued and an increasing success.

ST. LOUIS.

The St. Louis flower show, which was held under the auspices of the St. Louis Florists' Club, opened under very favorable conditions on Wednesday morning, November 8. The exhibition was held in Westminster hall, which is located in the west end. The furnishings of the hall and the rooms, which are quite elaborate, added considerably to the beauty of the show and it needed no further decorations of any kind. Taken altogether, the exhibition was very complete in every detail and Fred H. Meinhardt, the superintendent, and the committee of arrangements, deserve a great deal of credit for the management of the show. All the displays during the week were a credit to the exhibitors and the visitors were greatly pleased with everything they saw during the week.

Visitors from out of town were: Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, president-elect of the S. A. F.; David Scott, Buffalo; J. D. Thompson, Joliet, Ill.; Alex. J. Guttman, New York; Mrs. M. S. CHICAGO.

The success of the Chicago show left very little to be desired. The weather cleared and the last four days were ideal. The attendance was more than three times what it was last year and the entire affair was on a scale which will be a great help in setting a new high mark next fall. Commercialism was relegated to the background, every feature was high class and it appears easily possible to make succeeding shows as popular socially and as largely attended as the horse show. The paid admissions this year were over $12,000 and the passes, outside of members' tickets, were only five per cent of the paid admissions.

In the later days of the week the withered exhibits were removed and the cut blooms replaced by chrysanthemums bought in the market. Some of the growers were invited to put in tables for display and both Peter Reinberg and Bassett & Washburn took advantage of the opportunity. The latter had a very fine table including Beauty, Bride, Maid, Chatenay, Gate, Kaiserin, Perle, La Detroit and Carnot. Reinberg is entitled to special mention for exhibiting so largely as he did in the circumstance.

As the days passed the retailers awakened to an appreciation of the hit they were making with the public. As they saw the interest the crowds were taking in their displays they refreshed and improved their exhibits until on Saturday they were much more elaborate, and also much more attractive than they were at the opening of the show. It cannot be denied that to the retail florists is due a large part of the success of the exhibition, but they never before secured so good advertising. Some of them complained that no effort was made to award premiums for these displays, but it is better so, and it is safe to say that if any of the retailers who participated in this year's show do not care to repeat the performance next year, there will be many others who will be only too glad to take their places.

Carnation Day.

The carnations were staged November

Dorner's Seedling Chrysanthemum, No. 11, Yellow.
(Winner of the Silver Cup at the Chicago Show last week.)

9. The showing was not small, considering the condition of carnation crops in the vicinity of Chicago. There were four or five entries in several of the classes for 100 blooms but not nearly so large a show as we have sometimes had. Quality was nothing to brag about. Nearly all the flowers were asleep on Friday and were thrown out on Saturday. Not many of the novelties were in competition. Dorner had a vase of 100 of his new white, White Perfection, but it arrived in poor shape. Guttman & Weber had Victory, 1,000 miles from home and easily the best red exhibited. J. D. Thompson says that his young man was struck by a team while crossing the street in Chicago, dropped the box and the 100 blooms of Robert Craig were run over by a heavy truck. J. C. Rennison, of Sioux City, had a red sport from Lawson.

J. E. Haines was seen and S. S. Skidelsky had a vase of Schroeter's rose pink sport of Enchantress, which was well liked. Melody was a winner.

The rule with regard to no exhibitor taking more than one premium in a class had an effect on the awards. On 100 white the judges gave first to Gov. Wolcott and second to The Belle and when they opened the envelopes found that both entries were from Poehlmann Bros. Co. Second was then given to Lady Bountiful. The rule also simplified the awarding of the sweepstakes. In class 8, for six blooms one variety of chrysanthemum, yellow, darker in color than Bonaffon, the judges on Tuesday gave both awards to Nathan Smith & Son, first on Montigny and second on Appleton, but later reconsidered their action and gave second to the E. G. Hill Co. on Appleton.

Sweepstakes for best vase of 100. Poehlmann Bros. Co., first, on Enchantress; Guttman & Weber, second, on Victory.

Awards on Seedlings.

There was a very limited showing of carnation seedlings on Friday. Only two entered in competitive classes scored high enough to get certificates. These were Robert Craig, 88 points, and Rachel Marie Thompson, 90 points, both from the J. D. Thompson Carnation Co. The latter is a pink of the Lawson class and won the silver cup for sweepstakes.

Other seedlings shown were: No. 25, white, from Miss Louise Fuller, Geneva, Ill.; White Perfection, from Dorner & Sons Co., Lafayette; No. 2651, white, from J. D. Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet; No. 135, light pink, from H. Weber & Sons Co., Oakland, Md.; No. 20, red, and No. 10, red, from Bassett & Washburn, Hinsdale; No. 569, pink, from Thompson Carnation Co., Joliet; Winnemac, yellow variegated, from Anton Then, Chicago.

R. Witterstaetter, Cincinnati, sent a very fine vase of Aristocrat and H. Weber & Sons Co. showed My Maryland and Jessica. These were not for competition.

The seedling chrysanthemums included some splendid sorts, especially No. 11, yellow, Appleton type, first seen at the World's Fair show a year ago. It scored 96 points, took the premium for best dark yellow and the silver cup for sweepstakes. Golden Eagle is suggested as a name. Dorner also had a light yellow, No. 96-03, which scored 86 points and took the premium in its class. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., had Mayor Weaver, pink, Duckham type, which scored 88 points and took first in its class.

Dorner also showed No. 2-03, pink, and No. 16, light pink. Smith & Son also had No. 29-4-02, white; No. 11-20-03, blush pink, and No. 27-2-03.

Other Awards.

W. F. Kasting, Buffalo, was first on violets.

Bride's and bridesmaids' bouquets, F. E. Butler Floral Co., first; Andrew McAdams, second.

Basket of roses, C. A. Samuelson, first, using Liberty.

Basket of carnations, Anton Then, first, using Enchantress.

Corsage bouquet, F. E. Butler Floral Co., first; Anton Then, second.

The judges commented on the retailers' booths as of "inestimable decorative value" and great interest. Of the nursery exhibits they said they were "educational in the highest sense." They recommended medals or gratuities for each. Special mention was made of the park exhibits, the table decorations, E. G. Uihlein's conifers, Lincoln park's chrysanthemum seedlings, J. Rosenfeld's palms and Thuya nana. Honorable mention was also made of Mrs. Marshall Field, Miss Kate Moulton, Baby Rambler and Etoile de France rose exhibits, Pierson's fern and the mushroom bed.

J. A. Peterson, Cincinnati, asked a review of class No. 48, for five decorative plants, where his exhibit had been passed, supposedly because the judges took Pandanus Veitchii and P. Sanderi to be identical because of little color in the latter. The judges reaffirmed the previous awards.

Table Decorations.

On Thursday the table decorations were given a space, in the main hall. Bohannon & Canger had an exceedingly attractive decoration of Killarney roses, a low centerpiece with small twig baskets between the plates. Mangel used Uncle John roses. Friedman had Carnot with green electric lights surrounding his pond of gold fish. Frauenfelder used lily of the valley, Liberty roses and Sprenger. J. L. Raske used Sunrise roses.

On Friday Bohannon & Canger and Mangle used Beauties in low centerpieces. Friedman had cut sprays of Baby Rambler bordering his pool of fish. J. L. Raske had a red table, using carnations and Christmas berries. Frauenfelder used a vase of Enchantress.

On Saturday Mangle's table had cattleyas, with violets for corsages. Bohannon & Canger used valley, white orchids and adiantum. J. L. Raske had a Board of Trade table, wheat and corn on the cloth, yellow mums in the vase, bulls and bears between the plates. Friedman's pond was banked by valley and Baby Rambler roses. Frauenfelder used a birch bark basket of violets, with smaller baskets between the plates, connected to the central one by purple ribbon.

As is always the case the table decorations were among the most popular features of the show.

The Popular Lectures.

The popular lectures in the Coliseum Annex drew surprising crowds. It was a very unfavorable place for the speakers, the movement of the crowds in the main hall rendering it most impossible for one to make himself heard. Prof. J. C. Blair spoke on Friday evening and on Wednesday Mr. Vaughan read C. B. Whitnall's paper, that gentleman being unable to be present. Mr. Routzahn is always an interesting speaker on gardening topics and it is to be hoped that this feature can be continued in future years under a little more favorable conditions. The stereopticon views added to the interest.

The Banquet.

The annual banquet of the Chicago Florists' Club took place in the Coliseum Annex on the evening of November 9. About 150 were present, nearly two-thirds being guests from out of town. When the cigars had been reached, W. N. Rudd asked for quiet, the hall, a handsome one, being exceedingly difficult for speech making because of bad acoustics. Mr. Rudd introduced Wm. F. Kasting, of Buffalo, president-elect of the S. A. F., as the first speaker.

Mr. Kasting called attention to the somewhat unusual circumstance of the diners including the first president of the S. A. F., the present president and the president-elect. He said that he hopes it also included the next president and stated that he took pleasure in expressing his wish that P. J. Hauswirth may be his successor. He said that he feels that he owes it to Chicago that he was elected at Washington. He urged everyone to come to Dayton and asked united support in making the 1906 convention the banner one in the history of the society.

John Thorpe, first president of the S. A. F., was introduced and spoke of the widening circle of activities and influence of horticulture. He expressed the opinion that in spite of the great strides made, American horticulture is still in its infancy.

Prof. J. F. Cowell, of Buffalo, said that in his opinion all of Chicago's famous institutions of learning never did more in a single week to educate and elevate the public taste of the city than the Horticultural Society and the Chicago Florists' Club did last week.

John T. Temple, of Davenport, Ia., told stories and pointed to what harmony had done to make the 1905 Chicago exhibition the greatest flower show ever held in the United States.

Prof. A. C. Beal, of Champaign, asked united effort to secure recognition for floriculture in the form of an appropriation from the next Illinois legislature for experimental greenhouses, and J. D. Carmody made a characteristic address.

The speaking was interspersed by solos by Frank Carter and "Down Mobile," "Steamboat Comin'," and other popular melodies by the Chicago Indians' Glee Club.

After the adjournment a telegram was sent to William Scott, who is ill at Buffalo: "We drink to you and miss your smiling countenance."

Chicago Show Notes.

Manager Asmus is entitled to the fullest measure of praise for his handling of a very large and difficult task. The work is more than most men would care to undertake purely out of public spirit. There are few who can handle an affair of this kind with as little friction as has occurred in the two shows managed by Mr. Asmus. One of his troubles was a strike by the band, which he settled at 3 a. m. Nic Miller's experienced help was no small assistance.

P. J. Hauswirth, in charge of admissions, also had a good sized job, which was handled in his usual thorough manner.

HY. LICHTFELD.

GLEN COVE, N. Y.

On November 1 and 2 the first annual exhibition of the Nassau County Horticultural Society was held, and proved in all respects a great success. The stage was artistically decorated by a choice collection of foliage plants from the Elsinore gardens, T. Harrison, gardener. Groups of foliage plants and chrysanthemums occupied the center of the hall, while arranged on side tables were all the cut flowers, fruits and vegetables.

In the competition for group of foliage plants, Felix Mense won first, and Alexander Mackenzie, gardener to Percy Chubb, second. For a group of chrysanthemums, A. Mackenzie was first and John F. Johnston, gardener to Paul Dana, was second. A. Mackenzie also staged some beautiful bush plants of chrysanthemums.

In the classes for cut blooms of chrysanthemums, A. Mackenzie stood pre-eminent, his exhibit in the class for twelve distinct varieties being superb. It was, however, closely followed by that of Geo. Ashworth, gardener to Walter Jennings, Cold Spring Harbor. Other chrysanthemum prize winners included Henry Matz, gardener to L. J. Busby; Valentine Cleves, gardener to F. S. Smithers; W.

Willesen, gardener to H. F. Noyes; F. Mense and John F. Johnston.

In the carnation classes, the successful competitors were P. Ewen; W. Eccles, gardener to J. H. Schiff, Oyster Bay; Fd. Boulon, Sea Cliff; W. Willesen, A. Mackenzie and Jas. Holloway.

In roses, A. Mackenzie was again prominent. Both double and single violet classes were well represented, Jas. Holloway, gardener to the Pratt Estate, and Fd. Boulon being successful exhibitors.

Fruit exhibits were large and, of course attractive, and the section for vegetables brought out many competitors.

A vase of Robert Craig carnation, from the Cottage Gardens, Queens, L. I., was awarded the society's certificate of merit.

William Anderson, South Lancaster, Mass.; John Scott, Brooklyn, and John McNichol, Lawrence, were the judges.

J. T. J.

This was unnatural. Growing outdoors, these crowns are not above the ground but just beneath it, so that freezing and thawing are gradual, and so it will be under the conditions I have tried to describe.

Beauty for Pots.

Those who planted some American Beauty plants in the spring, with a view to lifting them in the fall and forcing for Easter, should have them potted by the middle of the month. Some years ago we were so eminently successful in this operation that if properly done we are convinced there is no grander rose for Easter forcing than American Beauty. No hybrid perpetual will give such fine or abundant bloom.

After potting, a week indoors in a cool house will do no harm, but later a cold frame is the right place for them. Don't prune them hard when you lift them. Leave the canes eighteen inches or two feet long. More severe pruning can and must be done when you bring them in to force. We have seen more than one failure with these roses just because they were subjected to a hard freeze and the roots were almost dust dry. It was not the freezing that hurt them, but they could not stand it with their roots dry. It is a common fallacy that shrubs and trees like to be dry at the roots in cold weather. Our forests and orchards and nurseries all suffer when they go to sleep with their roots dry and so our fine batch of Beauties in 6-inch pots were ruined for the want of watering.

Chrysanthemums for Profit.

I am not supposed to have anything to say about the glorious flower of autumn, which has brought us so many delights this past few weeks and is still with us, but in my somewhat lengthy career, I have never admired them more or taken a keener interest in what the public admired and bought, and do think I can give the small commercial grower, retailer or wholesaler a little bread and butter advice. Make up your mind now which is the best half-dozen mums to grow and grow lots of them. It is perhaps a wild assertion, but I have noticed this year that with many small growers, if of all the mums grown, one-half were Ivory he would have been money in pocket. Your patrons will look at Nellie Pockett, or Princess, or Gen. Hutton and exclaim, "How beautiful!" but if they want a dozen it is Ivory they want. Let the other fellow grow the wonders and you stick to the commercial varieties.

Geraniums.

You should find time just now to give your young geraniums a "stand over." If you only give them the slightest more room, rub off the yellow leaves and above all stir up the surface of the soil, the improvement in the growth will be wonderful. You have plenty of room now that your Ivory are all gone.

WILLIAM SCOTT.

HANDLING CUT MUMS.

We are having trouble with our chrysanthemums after they are cut; they wilt quickly and the flower hangs down over the stem. We cut our stock in the morning and send direct to the store, only a mile away. They are put into water right away and set in the ice-box. After they come out of the ice-box they begin to wilt. It is the same if we do not put them in the ice-box. Could it be that the stem is too hard and will not

MISCELLANEOUS SEASONABLE HINTS.

Storing Roots.

This has been such a fine fall, and very severe frost has kept off so that some may have left tender bulbs and roots in the ground. Others may have dug them up and got them as far as the potting shed. Where to winter the roots may be a question with some. Growers of acres of gladioli or an acre of cannas have their root houses or frost-proof sheds, but many florists have only their greenhouses and boiler shed. We have kept gladiolus roots in excellent order in flats beneath a cool bench, or in the potting shed, where there was little or no heat from the furnace. We remember putting several thousands in the basement of our dwelling, where there was a hot-water heater and, although it appeared cool, the bulbs were sadly shriveled by spring. Dahlia roots will do very well beneath a cool bench; in fact, where potatoes will winter, so will dahlias. Have it as cool as you like, but no frost.

The canna is a very important plant nowadays, with all of us, and I have seen many lost through carelessness during winter. Lay down a floor of old boards beneath a carnation bench and there the canna roots will keep finely. The boards are very essential, for however dry the floor of your house may appear, it is moist enough to start them growing toward spring and the good strong eyes will break and grow and these are the eyes that would make your strong plants when potted. A drip from the bench is very injurious to canna roots and much of it will soon rot them, but from November on to March the watering of the carnations should not be so copious as to cause drip.

We always found Caladium esculentum bulbs kept finely placed on the ground beneath a rose bench. They like the temperature and the small amount of moisture rising from the ground suits them.

Lily of the Valley.

Valley pips will soon be arriving and should be unpacked and put in their winter quarters without delay. Again I must say that large growers have their own cold-storage, and some of the large importing houses manage the storage business well, judging from results we have experienced late into the fall. The grower of 10,000 who forces them all between New Year's and Easter needs no cold-storage, but keeps them on his place.

The first thing to do after unpacking is to see that the roots are not dry. If at all dry, dip the little bundles of pips in a pail of water; roots, crown and all will not hurt for a few moments. The next thing is to have a number of boxes and pack away in each box as many as you will want to force weekly. They are pretty sure to be frozen and it is much handier to bring in the whole box and let it thaw out. These boxes should be two or three inches deeper than the length of the roots and crowns. Put an inch of soil in the bottom of the box and then place in your bunches of roots until there is a row across the box. Then bank up against the roots an inch or so of soil and then begin with another row of the bundles, until you have in the number of pips you intend to bring in at once. Then cover the crowns with two inches of soil and they are ready to place in the frame.

Sphagnum moss or sand may be just as good as soil for packing the roots, but we have found a loamy soil answers the purpose well. The frame should be covered with sash or boards that will keep out the rain or melted snow because a continual wetting of the crowns is injurious to them. Some growers believe that freezing the pips is a necessity to successful forcing. It may be; anyway, let them freeze. You can bring in the whole box and let it thaw out in the shed.

Hardy as the roots and crowns are we once saw a box with the pips unprotected exposed over night to 20 degrees of frost and in two days the pips were rotten.

let the water up? Or do you thing we have kept them too wet on the bench and made them soft? Duckham seems to be troubled worse than any other. H. M. B.

I would suggest that if, instead of cutting the flowers and shipping direct to the store, you cut them and leave them in water over night in a cool cellar or some such place, you would probably find that the flowers would stand up all right. The store is only a mile away and it would seem to me that if the ends of the stems were recut before the flowers were placed in water and the receptacle holding the water was large enough to permit of the stems standing straight up, they should not wilt.

Ice-box treatment, however, is not what a chrysanthemum likes, any more than a carnation. Keep them in a cool place and keep the stems straight, so that the water can be drawn quickly up the stem and there is no reason why a flower should not keep a week.

It is true that some kinds, like Merza, have stems so hard that they want careful handling to get the water up the stem, but these kinds are not so numerous and W. Duckham is not one of them.

Flowers that are to be shipped any distance should be in water forty-eight hours and when so treated can be shipped 1,000 miles and win prizes over stock grown at home and not allowed to soak up before being staged. C. H. TOTTY.

I would not advise thinning out the Maids and Brides. It is sometimes beneficial to cut out the smaller wood of such varieties, as Ivory and Golden Gate, when the wood becomes too dense.

Regarding watering, this is a very difficult subject to give advice on, as the many different classes of soil require special study to determine just how much moisture they will absorb and how long it is retained, but it is safe to keep the soil in such a condition that it will remain plastic and not crumble if squeezed in the hand. With the drainage as described there is little danger of the soil becoming sodden, and when watering is done the bench should be thoroughly watered, so that it will be equally moist throughout. RIBES.

GRUSS AN TEPLITZ.

Will the Gruss an Teplitz rose force for Easter as easily and as well as Ulrich Brunner? A. R.

Gruss an Teplitz can be forced into bloom for Easter, although it is not one of the best adapted for this class of work. By potting them now and placing them in a temperature of 45 degrees for a few weeks, until root action commences, and then gradually increasing the temperature until it reaches 52 degrees at night and 65 degrees in daytime during bright weather, fair results may be obtained. The worst trouble to contend with is in keeping the foliage in good shape as they are so subject to the attacks of mildew. By keeping a careful watch on their progress during the spring and using good judgment in raising or lowering the temperature as occasion requires, they can be brought into bloom for the occasion. RIBES.

BLIND WOOD.

I have a house of Bridesmaid and Ivory roses, some of which have made fair growth, but a large percentage of which come blind. I had the same trouble last year, which was my first experience with roses. Part of them are on benches, with good drainage, and I have one solid bed which has eight inches drainage of broken stone, topped with cinders. The soil is a medium heavy clay sod, composted early last spring, with one part cow manure to four of sod. They were planted June 10, young plants from 3-inch pots on benches. The solid beds were planted with stock from benches which were forced last year and given four or five weeks' rest. I have been very careful with ventilation and heat. The temperature has been 58 to 60 degrees at night, with a crack of air when possible. I have been allowing the soil to become dry before watering and perhaps have been too extreme in this respect. Would this cause the blind growth? Would it be best to cut the blind growth back to a good eye? How dry ought the soil get before watering? J. P. K.

This question of a surplus of blind wood is very annoying and especially so to a beginner, as when the stock shows a tendency to this character of growth it is always a loss of a few weeks' time to bring it to a check.

From a careful perusal of the letter I cannot find a sufficient single cause for the trouble, and think it must have arisen from more than one cause. The temperature is a little too high for this class of roses, 56 degrees at night being the ideal, and, whenever possible, with a good supply of air on.

The compost is all right and the general care of the house seems to be about right also, but care should be taken not to allow the branches to trail on the bench. Keep each shoot tied in an upright position and do not feed with any material containing an excess of nitrogen. Rather use a light top-dressing of lime, alternating with bone meal once in three weeks.

INSECTS AND BACTERIA.

I am sending some carnation blooms and some cuttings. Please tell me what the trouble is. R. A.

You do not give enough data for anyone to form an intelligent opinion. Some varieties are in the habit of blasting a bud occasionally upon the least excuse, sudden check, for instance. Sometimes when plants are left out in the field until a heavy frost has occurred, the buds on the plants will partially develop and then rot the inner petals just as these two blooms have done. Sometimes thrips will cause it, but in that case you would find many blooms with the edges of the petals bruised. If you keep down these insect pests and keep your plants growing steadily it will no doubt disappear.

The light spots on the cuttings are caused by bacteria. Opinions differ as to the cause of this trouble. All agree that it is a breaking-down of the cells in the leaf. Some claim that it is always caused by the sting of some insect, while others do not agree with that theory. We have seen many instances where a small batch of a variety was planted between other varieties and only that one variety would show it. The argument that the insects might be partial to that variety does not hold good, because every variety of carnation, when badly infested with greenfly, will show similar spots and if one variety is so badly infested as to show so much of this spot the insect, if it is an insect, would most likely be operating on the neighboring varieties, too. I do not mean to deny that in many cases it may be brought on by insects; in fact, I know it is, but I do maintain that it is not always the case. Varieties that are in the habit of showing these light spots every winter during the dark days invariably grow entirely out of it in the spring, when the sun becomes stronger and the days longer. While, on the other hand, if you allow your plants to become infested with aphids at any time of the year, the leaves will bear these marks.

I am not prepared, however, to advance any theory as to their origin, except that it is a sickly condition of the plants. Possibly the insufficient light causes the plant to become unable to assimilate the food brought to it by the roots. We know that when the soil is kept slightly on the dry side and the soil is not extremely rich there is much less of this bacteria than there is when heavy feeding and liberal watering are practiced. I think that all this goes to show that the trouble is an internal one and not brought on by the sting of insects.

PHILADELPHIA.

The Market.

The demand for violets noted last week continued until Saturday, when the wholesale houses were sold out. It was reported, however, that some of the retailers overbought, but the market this week has been fairly steady. Hudson river violets brought even more than quoted prices for some extra fine stock. Roses are fairly plentiful. Beauties have fallen a little in price but the quality of all varieties is improving, some really magnificent stock being offered. Carnations are more plentiful and, excepting in the case of fine stock, prices rule lower. Really fine stock, however, finds a market at very good figures. Immense quantities of chrysanthemums are sold at prices a little lower than those listed, the supply being too heavy at times for the demand. The leading varieties this week are Mrs. Jerome Jones, both white and yellow; Timothy Eaton, white and yellow; Maj. Bonnaffon, white and yellow; Maud Dean, pink, and G. W. Childs, red, in limited quantities. Orchids are a little easier in price, and in good demand. Gardenias have advanced slightly. The Leo Niessen Co. has pansies. Their specialists in this line have put in a telephone and can be depended upon to meet any reasonable demand. Paper Whites are very fine; Romans have made their appearance. Both these were seen at W. J. Baker's. Calla lilies are coming in just in time to replace the Easter lilies, which seem likely to go off crop. Asparagus is good and very plentiful. W. E. McKissick is making a specialty of sprays in bunches.

A Walnut Hill Wedding.

Hugh Graham had a very elaborate wedding decoration last Thursday, which was of more than usual interest. The bridal canopy was made entirely of ferns and white orchids, presumably Dendrobium formosum. The house was lavishly decorated with white chrysanthemums throughout, only the choicest flowers being used. The porches were decorated with oak leaves, the dining-room with American Beauty roses. The whole effect was extremely handsome.

A Beautiful Showcase.

H. H. Battles' showcase this week contained a flower picture in a gilt frame, on one side a bunch of the blue orchids, Vanda cœrulea, on the other a bunch of Perle des Jardins roses. The combination of soft blue and yellow was very effective. On each side of the frame were bunches of Adiantum Farleyense, with a green sash matching in color thrown carelessly across the front. The effect was exquisite.

Various Notes.

The Chrysanthemum Society of America elected William Duckham, Madison, N. J., president; William Kleinheinz, Philadelphia, vice-president; David Fraser, Pittsburg, secretary, and John N. May, Summit, N. J., treasurer.

A wag said that Philadelphia had a great opportunity to look over the chrysanthemum kings from Head to Foote.

The Millbrook-Lee Greenhouses made a very fine carnation exhibit at the show. Queen Louise, Enchantress, Mrs. Lawson, and Mrs. Patten are their best varieties.

Myers & Samtman sent in a vase of their new pink seedling rose to show on Thursday. It was much admired.

William J. Muth was greatly delighted with the violet exhibit at the show. The bunching especially pleased him.

The Flower Market held a special meeting last Tuesday, in the secretary's room at Horticultural hall. The number of the directors was reduced from nine to five. The officers elected by the directors for the ensuing year were: President, W. K. Harris; secretary, Alfred Bergen; treasurer, Charles E. Meehan. The other directors are David Rust and J. W. Young.

R. G. Palmer has accepted a position with Eugene Bernheimer.

William K. Harris considers Ivory and Maj. Bonnaffon as two of the best chrysanthemums grown today.

The Germantown Horticultural Society held the November meeting last Monday. There was a good exhibit of chrysanthemums. The remedies for insects were discussed.

The Chestnut Hill Horticultural Society held the annual chrysanthemum show on Tuesday and Wednesday of this week. It was a very fine exhibition.

Robert A. Stewart has his new store on Thirteenth street, below Walnut, in nice running order. Sweet violets and orchids are his specialties.

The Century Flower Shop is making a specialty of pot chrysanthemums this week. Frank Gaul, the manager, claims that they have sold more Uncle Theodore than any place in town.

NEW YORK.

The Market.

The market last week grew more and more depressed as the week advanced until, on Saturday, it had maintained its yearly reputation as one of the worst weeks of the season. Election week never fails to make this record. Weather conditions, too, were against improvement, the delightful temperature still prevailing. The week opens with every sign of storms, however, and the wholesale prayers for frost seem likely to be answered. Now, if the horse show and the football matches do their duty the week will see the beginning of a long period of prosperity too long delayed already.

The chrysanthemum shipments are lessening somewhat and prices are fairly steady. A few grand flowers have reached $5 a dozen, but from 10 cents each down to zero covers the general demand. Roses went down twenty-five per cent from last week's quotations, grand Beauties touching $15 per hundred at times, the supply being often beyond the demand.

Orchids continue to advance. Fine crops are in the market. Violets do not go above $1.25. The demand expected Monday did not materialize. A good many remained in the "strong boxes" of the wholesalers. But the week is very young and there will be none to spare before it ends. Everything indicates a satisfactory Thanksgiving.

Death of Wm. Ghormley.

Wm. Ghormley died on the night of November 8. He was born in Chillicothe, O., in 1839. In 1871, before the great fire, he was in the dressmaking and importing business in Chicago. He removed to New York and built up here one of the noted centers of this industry in this city. He retired with a competency and found in the wholesale florists' business a work that appealed to his tastes and an opportunity for agreeable employment. A partnership, formed in February, 1900, with John J. Perkins, was dissolved in September of the same year and from that time until a short time before his death he conducted one of the largest wholesale cut flower enterprises on West Twenty-eighth street. H. E. Froment, who was associated with him during these five years as bookkeeper and manager, purchased the business on November 1 and will continue it at the same address.

Mr. Ghormley was a genial, whole-souled, progressive man and much esteemed by all who had the pleasure of his intimate acquaintance. He had been ailing for over a year, but bore his sufferings with rare patience and his hope and good nature were always in evidence. A widow and one son survive.

Club Meeting.

President Traendly occupied the chair, Monday night. The attendance was encouraging, considering the threatening weather, many ladies being present on the last evening of the year devoted to the fair sex, and altogether over seventy-five of the members and their wives and families arrived before the program ended. Messrs. Coyle, Hansen, Hoffmeyer and Ernshaw were elected to membership and nominations included the members of the J. M. Keller Co., A. E. Froment and L. W. C. Tuttle. A committee was appointed to draw up suitable resolutions on the death of Wm. Ghormley.

The report of the nominating committee, A. S. Burns, chairman, was read, and the following members nominated for the club's offices: For president, John Scott, C. H. Totty; for vice-president, J. H. Pepper, R. Koehne; for treasurer, C. W. Weathered, L. B. Craw, L. W. Wheeler; for secretary, John Young, S. S. Butterfield; for trustees, Julius Roehrs, Jr., J. K. Allen, J. B. Nugent, C. H. Totty, Robert Simpson, John Birnie, A. H. Langjahr.

The exhibit of mums, carnations and novelties was extensive and creditable and the hearty thanks of the club were enthusiastically tendered the enterprising exhibitors. The committee on awards, Patrick O'Mara, chairman, made its report as follows:

A. A. MacDonald, Somerville, N. J., exhibited a magnificent assortment of chrysanthemums from the Duke Farm, including Merza, Mrs. E. Thirkell, Jeanne Nonin, Mrs. Swinburne, Guy Hamilton, Mary Inglis, W. R. Church, Dr. Enguehard, Gen. Hutton, Brighthurst, Matthew Smith and T. Carrington, certificate for culture. Louis Dupuy, Whitestone, L. I., Bouvardia Humboldtii grandiflora, Chrysanthemum Mme. Jeanne Nonin, certificate for culture.

F. R. Pierson Co., Variegated Enchantress, judgment suspended until the committee visit the greenhouses at Tarrytown. R. C. Pye, Nyack, Carnation Senator Crane, a large handsome pink, also to be visited by the committee. Robert Craig, from the Cottage Gardens, and Victory, from Guttman & Weber, for exhibition only. Theo. Hentzenberg, seedling carnations, also to be visited by the committee.

A vase of sweet peas of fourteen varieties by A. C. Zvolanek, Bound Brook, N. J., to be passed upon later by the committee. Among them were handsome white, lavender, yellow, blue and purple varieties and a splendid pink, named J. K. Allen. Mr. Allen is handling all of Mr. Zvolanek's shipments and some grand cypripediums from Mr. Towell, of Paterson, N. J.

After the business session of the club the evening was devoted to a musical feast, followed by a collation in Nugent's best style.

Prof. Hopwood presided at the piano and sang songs of his own composition. Mrs. John P. Cleary, Mrs. Fogey and Miss Nugent sang sweetly and were heartily encored and added greatly to the pleasure of the evening. Messrs. Plumb, Scott, Nugent, Wallace, David Smith and Butterfield were all in fine voice.

at 38 West Twenty-ninth street, to be known as the Dutchess County Violet Co. Although intending to handle all kinds of cut flowers, violets will be the specialty. The members of the firm are Wm. Gaston Donaldson, of Barrytown, N. Y.; C. A. Plumb and M. A. Purdy, of New York City. Mr. Plumb will be the New York representative and Mr. Purdy, who has had considerable experience in the wholesale cut flower business, will be the manager.

Slinn & Thompson are among the largest handlers of violets in the New York wholesale market, daily average now over 30,000. On their staff of shippers are some of the best of the Rhinebeck experts.

It was the Thos. Young Co. that had the first wedding in the new St. Thomas church. The John Young Co. is not in the retail business, as incorrectly stated in my last letter.

Reed & Keller have a great line of novelties and inventions for the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.

Arthur T. Boddington reports a fine demand for his Easter flowering gladioli.

Thomas H. Jackson, at one time in the flower business on Lexington avenue, is now in charge of the Cut Flower Exchange and is making a reputation that the officials of the market are proud of. Millang, Bonnet, Smith and Siebrecht are on deck daily from six to six at the Exchange, and seem to be always busy.

Harry Hoffmeyer met with a painful accident last Monday, the breaking of a large jar of mums cutting his arm seriously.

Donohoe, on West Twenty-ninth street, had the family orders for the funerals of C. Gray Dinsmore and Mrs. Demming last week. Palls of violets, valley and white roses alone aggregated over $1,000 in value.

The Department of Parks of the City of New York has awarded the contract for the following greenhouses to John A. Scollay: Two orchid houses, one aquatic house, one stove house, located at Prospect park, also two plant houses, 15x200 each, at Forrest park, and the installing of a new steam heating apparatus in the offices of the Park Department for the Borough of Brooklyn, in the Litchfield mansion. The above work embodies using four of the largest size Scollay Invincible boilers.

Very few New Yorkers attended the chrysanthemum show at Philadelphia last week. Henry Dailedouze was there, and C. B. Weathered.

The lady who dropped her opera glasses on President Traendly at the Wier-Smith festivities in a Brooklyn theater last week gave as her excuse for nervousness her discovery of the handsomest man in the audience and the modest wholesaler blushingly forgave her. But it was a narrow escape for the genial "Prex" and his "O! such a headache" had an excellent reason all the week after. He is now convalescent.

The election brought some ducats to the retail florists, quite a demonstration being made in honor of some of the winning candidates. Over in Brooklyn Davy Mellis proved his title to the "floral blacksmith" in the horse-shoe line with some elaborate effects.

Friends of Thos. Sharkey, of the Thos. Young Co., will be glad to hear of his recovery from a severe illness of several weeks' duration.

Prince Louis, of Battenberg, and his ship are the lions of the week. Monday he attended the horse show and society and the plebeian host crowded the big garden to the walls. He is a great card

CHICAGO.

The Great Central Market.

The market weakened perceptibly last week and opened on Monday in a state of more or less depression. The total of business foots up fairly well but the demand lacks the snap it has had for the past two or three weeks. Last week the retailers were in search of novelties and fancy stock for their displays at the flower show, but business was light locally. Shipping demand called largely for fancy stock for exhibition purposes.

A week of beautiful weather had the result of increasing receipts to a perceptible extent and weakened prices, particularly on the lower grades, which are always the first affected. Chrysanthemums have been very abundant and are selling at moderate prices. It has been possible to clean out each day and wholesalers in general are satisfied with the business. The stock most in demand at present is that which sells at about $1.50 per dozen.

American Beauties are of splendid quality and the supply is equal to the demand. The best long stock, the kind people want for flower show purposes, with stems five feet long, brings as high as $5 per dozen. Roses have felt the stimulating effect of the sun, have improved in color and substance, and teas are much more plentiful than a week ago. The market has weakened in this department to a greater extent than elsewhere, with the possible exception of chrysanthemums. Richmond sells better than Liberty.

Carnation cuts are slowly increasing, but prices are still held firmly and the average returns must be a source of much pleasure to the growers. A change to cold weather on Monday will serve to check production again.

Violets have been in light supply this week, doubtless due to horse show activities in New York, but the demand has not been large. Quality now leaves little to be asked. Valley is in demand but up to the requirements. There is little call for Harrisii or callas. Some fine Paper Whites and Romans are seen.

There is an active market for green goods, including practically everything on the list. A new addition to the popular items is boxwood sprays. These are being used to make wreaths, where galax was formerly employed, and are also used like Sprengeri for filling in all sorts of floral arrangements.

Thanksgiving.

All the growers talk of good crops for Thanksgiving but, in view of the conditions which have prevailed for a month, if a word to the wise is sufficient, buyers will not be slow to place orders. There is little chance of carnations being plentiful and roses are likely to command higher prices than advance quotations unless the weather is favorable. Quality will doubtless be good all along the line.

Various Notes.

Chicago is well represented at the Kansas City show this week. Among those who are there are George Asmus, P. J. Hauswirth, Leonard Kill, N. J. Wieter, J. Q. A. Turnbull and Phil Shoup, the latter of Budlong's, who will visit customers in St. Louis, Louisville and other cities before returning.

C. M. Dickinson went to St. Paul Monday night to take a look at John Monson's new rose at home. It is anticipated that E. H. Hunt will introduce this novelty next spring.

The Garland family at Des Plaines, Sol, Warren and Frank, are right in line with chrysanthemums. Their crop is of medium size sorts and Percy Jones, who manages the cut, says it sells much more quickly than the larger grades.

C. N. Thomas, of the A. L. Randall Co., was one of the jurymen in the O'Neill breach of promise case which has occupied so large a share of public attention the past ten days.

A. L. Vaughan is on duty but suffering from stomach trouble.

C. L. Washburn says that Bassett & Washburn were among the considerable number who imported stock of the new red rose, Etoile de France. But he says they do not like it. The buds are nearly all bull heads.

P. J. Hauswirth took time from his flower show duties last week to put up the decoration for the Commercial Club's banquet at the Auditorium Saturday night.

Mrs. Frank Beu is again at her stand in the market after having spent the summer in Europe.

Kennicott Bros. Co. is mailing its new catalogue, listing wire work and a large line of supplies, with an interesting page on peonies.

Mrs. Oscar Weber died November 10. She was known in the market as Tinie Tebbins and was married and left business only six months ago.

The Republic Floral Co., 209 State street, will open about December 1.

Emil Buettner is indignant. While enjoying a little ramble in his automobile Sunday afternoon a policeman stepped in front of his machine and Mr. Buettner, in order not to seem discourteous, had to stop and be arrested, charged with speeding. He says he will take the case to the highest court rather than pay a fine, for he wasn't going fast. Those who know Mr. Buettner's conservative ways will be inclined to believe the policeman exaggerates.

L. Baumann & Co. are very busy shipping Christmas orders. They say that business is good in all departments.

John Zech was busy last week, between Zech & Mann's affairs, the flower show and the church fair at Rose Hill, for which Mr. Zech published the program and in which many florists took part.

The Moninger Co. is already running on the bars for the Poehlmann Bros. Co. addition for next spring. Part of the material is to be delivered during November and December. As stated in the REVIEW several weeks ago, this is to be the largest single addition ever built by the Poehlmann Bros. Co., the plans calling for a total of 280,000 square feet of new glass.

The E. F. Winterson Co. recently made a good sized shipment of stock for a wedding decoration at Manchester, N. H. The distance is 1,300 miles but the stock is reported to have arrived in perfect condition.

Joe Foerster, manager of George Reinberg's city salesroom, says that last season cannot long be referred to as their best season if they have a few more months like October and the first half of November.

A. L. Randall Co. finds shipping trade holding very steady. They are handling large quantities of New York violets again this year.

C. W. McKellar reports a very active demand for cattleyas this week.

BALTIMORE.

The Market.

Business in cut flowers has been so changeable since the last report that one can hardly realize the irregular conditions of the market. Saying that chrysanthemums are plentiful is putting it mildly; they have been a glut the past two weeks and in order to move them in any quantity one had to give special low figures. Roses have also been more plentiful and quite a number were carried over, which the next day would go to the street men, and that means low prices.

Carnations seem to be the only flower that has been short in supply, which is not often the case at this season of the year, when chrysanthemums can be had in any quantity and of almost every grade. Best single and double violets can be had at 60 cents per hundred and more could be handled. There are enough greens to meet the demand.

Various Notes.

MORRISON, ILL.—This city has a number of cucumber growers whose combined area is five acres under glass and the average daily output in the winter is three wagon-loads of cucumbers. Chas. D. Gallentine has built a new range of houses and has just completed a 90-foot chimney.

CLEVELAND, OHIO

CLEVELAND.

The Market.

The prices of cut flowers remain about the same as quoted last week, but with a better demand and everything cleaned up before closing time. Stock, as seen at the wholesale houses, is improving in both quality and quantity.

Various Notes.

The Essex Greenhouses are sending some very fine carnations to the Cleveland Cut Flower Co. and they are always ordered in advance. Their early mums are all cut, and it will be a week or more before they will be able to ship the large and finer varieties that they have grown so successfully in past seasons. Mr. Kennedy, who now has charge of this place, as manager, assisted by Mr. Merriman, is highly pleased at the way everything is growing on the place, and they both expect good cuts from now on.

Anderson Bros., of Rocky River, are cutting some very fine Enchantress and white carnations. Mr. Simon Anderson was with the Gasser Co. for many years, having charge of the carnation houses, where he grew some of the finest carnations seen in the Cleveland market.

Robert Kegg, of Rocky River, is cutting good mums and carnations, and his houses are in fine condition for the coming season of hard work.

Andrews Bros., on Detroit street, Lakewood, are changing their plant from hot water to steam, and expect to get much better results the coming season. Their houses are filled with carnation plants and present indications are for a good cut.

Collins & Harrison report business good, with orders booked for future work.

The Gasser Co. has a very fine window display of mums. Business is good with them.

The florists in both arcades say that last week's business was fine and shows a decided improvement over the previous week.

Smith & Fetter's Opening.

Last Tuesday and Wednesday, November 7 and 8, saw one of the finest retail flower shows we have ever had, when Smith & Fetter's gave their annual fall opening in their new store. The display was magnificent, and the attendance was most gratifying. This store, with its handsome decorations of green, gold and white, was a fitting setting for the stock shown. The window was exceedingly well dressed both days. The back of the window was draped with Nile green velvet, caught back with large parrots. Large baskets of cattleyas and Sprengerl were suspended between the arches. Huge vases of chrysanthemums tied with ribbon made a fine background for the violets, valley and orchids arranged in fancy baskets and vases that decorated the front of the window. The long mirrors were artistically decorated with sprays of cattleyas and Sprengerl. The large center ice-box had a beautiful fall decoration of corn, and the skylights were screened with oak branches.

The table decorations were much admired. One was a dinner decoration of Bonnaffons and violets arranged with tall vases and sprays of Bonnaffons and corsages of violets. The sprays were tied with yellow and orange ribbon, in all one of the most stunning effects for this time of the year. The other table was arranged with a large silver loving cup, filled with the Killarney rose, with corsages of the same, tied with pink satin ribbon. This table, while not so elaborate, was charmingly simple and artistic.

Bassett & Washburn, of Chicago, sent as a compliment some of the finest mums ever seen in this city. F. R. & P. M. Pierson, of Tarrytown, sent a large bunch of their finest long-stemmed Beauties. Reep Bros., Caspar Aul, the Cleveland Cut Flower Co., Wm. Lee & Son, C. Hagenburger, H. Carleton, J. Wilson, A. Schmitt, C. Merkel & Son and Robt. Kegg, of this city, sent beautiful chrysanthemums and plants to show their appreciation of the efforts of this firm.

This firm has three weddings and numerous luncheons and dinners on hand for this week.

THOMPSONVILLE, CONN.—D. W. Brainard is building a new greenhouse 26x60 feet.

TOPEKA, KAN.—The ladies of the West Side Forestry Club held a very successful chrysanthemum show last week, the proceeds to go toward improving a small public park. The exhibits were sold.

MARSHALL, MO.—The Marshall Floral Co., Imanuel Wittrup, manager, has bought the entire stock and greenhouses of D. H. Heskett & Son. The two places will be operated separately this winter, but next summer both will be rebuilt in one first-class establishment of about 17,000 feet of glass.

PREPARE FOR THANKSGIVING!

Are you sure that you are going to be able to properly supply the demand for Thanksgiving flowers?

Don't guess about it—it is too important to you now and hereafter. A florist is judged by his ability to "deliver the goods."

Don't let some competitor take your profit away from you now and get a lead on your customers' future business by "beating you to it" this Thanksgiving.

We have made the most extensive preparations in our history to prevent this happening to our customers and you can profit by these preparations.

Nothing that experience could suggest or enthusiasm or energy can perform will be left undone in this establishment to prove that this house is ready at all times to supply better quality of flowers, prompt shipment and more reasonable prices than you can secure elsewhere.

Cut this adv. out, you may want it tomorrow. You can't afford to risk disappointment—and our proudest claim is that we never disappoint a customer.

CINCINNATI.

The Market.

Business the past week was very good and was generally distributed among all branches of the trade. Several first-class decorations used up a large quantity of stock. Funeral work also was in good demand. The wholesale houses were kept cleaned out of almost everything save mums.

Mums are selling well this year and bringing prices that are very satisfactory. This market is well supplied with all kinds. The best sellers are those that can be had from $8 to $12.50 per hundred. The very large varieties move slowly. There are large quantities of small, bunched mums for work and, while there is a very good demand for this kind of stock, yet the supply is so heavy that it is hard to move them all.

Roses continue to improve in quality. Beauties are especially fine and sell fast. Carnations, though still scarce, are coming more plentifully. They sell well and at good prices. Prospects are for a fine Christmas crop. Valley is in good demand and scarce. Violets, also, are scarce and selling quickly. Green goods are not very plentiful, with a good demand.

The Show.

Our annual chrysanthemum show was held November 11. There was not as much stock on exhibition as is usual, owing no doubt to the number of large shows taking place in this section of the country this week. Nevertheless, the quality was there and the 5,000 people who viewed the show went away well pleased. Richard Witterstaetter made his usual good display. Besides several vases of finely finished mums, he staged many vases of carnations in fine form. His Aristocrat was worth going a long way to see. Among other varieties staged were J. A. Valentine, a light pink which has been heard of before; No. 1021 J 1, scarlet; No. 1021 I 2, dark pink; Lillian May, white; No. 1021 I 4, a medium shade of pink, and No. 1003 C, shell pink.

George & Allan staged several vases of nicely grown stock. H. T. Schmidt, of Oxford, staged two vases of mums, which did him great credit. Chas. Pfeiffer exhibited a vase of very finely grown Appleton. Geo. Bayer, of Toledo, sent twenty-five blooms of Bonnaffon, right up to the best. The prizes were awarded as follows:

Twelve blooms white, H. Schmidt, first; R. Witterstaetter, second; George & Allan, third.

Twelve pink, H. Schmidt, first; R. Witterstaetter, second; George & Allan, third.

Twelve yellow, Chas. Pfeiffer, first; R. Witterstaetter, second and third.

Twenty-five Bonnaffon, R. Witterstaetter, first; Geo. Bayer, second.

Best general display, R. Witterstaetter, first.

Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., sent a seedling to be passed upon by the chrysanthemum committee. It was a fine exhibition variety, very large bloom, fine form, incurved, white shading to pink in the center. It was named President Roosevelt.

The judges of the show were R. Sunderbruch and C. E. Critchell. The prize blooms were sold for the benefit of the society.

The regular monthly meeting was held in the evening. Ben George and J. W. Rodgers both asked for the endorsement of the society for the position of park superintendent under the new administration. After some discussion the society decided to keep out of politics.

Various Notes.

Thomas Windrum has just returned from a hunting trip in Florida and reports having had a fine time.

George Walker and George Murphy are going on a hunting trip next week.

Ben George was in Louisville, acting as judge at the show last week.

J. A. Peterson went up to the Chicago show.

BOSTON.

The Market.

It is rather hard to give the exact status of the market, as it has been so variable of late, some days good and others druggy. On the whole, however, it shows an improvement over a year ago. Chrysanthemums are now arriving in less number and, with these removed, prices on other stock will improve quickly. Prices remain about the same on chrysanthemums, except on whites, which are in rather short supply. Some growers are now holding back supplies for Thanksgiving. Roses are in abundant supply. Best grades sell fairly well, but many of the smaller sizes are sold very low. Carnations hold their heads up well and even show a slightly hardening tendency.

Violets are abundant and of fine quality, at last week's quotations. A little bulbous stock is coming in and rather more stevia is seen. Asparagus and adiantum are unchanged.

Various Notes.

The chrysanthemum show brought in the usual large influx of gardeners and florists from a distance, quite a number coming from other states.

A fire at N. F. McCarthy & Co.'s establishment at 84 Hawley street, damaged sundries to the extent of $700 on November 7.

Considerable interest is being taken in the coming election of trustees of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on November 18. Among others W. H. Elliott is one of the regular nominees, while Peter Fisher and A. H. Fewkes are running as independents.

The exhibition to be given by the American Rose Society next March promises to far eclipse the one held last March. More special prizes than ever will be offered and a magnificent show is assured.

Galvin is receiving some extra fine Zygopetalum Mackaii from Reed, of Whitman. He had a very attractive window of orchids the past week, which included Vanda cærulea, cattleyas, Epidendrum vitellinum majus, oncidiums and zygopetalums.

John McFarland has, as usual, several thousand very fine poinsettias. Some of them are now nearly ready to cut, also a good lot of Cypripedium insigne.

Robert Montgomery is selling some splendid Bride, Maid and Liberty roses at the new market. He is also trying a few Richmond, which are doing well.

A rousing meeting of the Gardeners' and Florists' Club is assured for November 21. In addition to Prof. Watson's lecture and the annual election of officers, there are other attractions which should draw an attendance of over 100. A considerable accession of new members will again be one of the features.

A good number of chrysanthemum plants are seen at the stores and markets at present. With few exceptions they are not well grown, being of a poorer shape and carrying very little foliage. Plants are usually field-grown and potted up in September. If the growers would keep them in pots all the time or plant in a greenhouse bench and pot up with good balls, some presentable plants might be seen. The singles, anemones and pompons should prove profitable if flowered in 6-inch or 8-inch pots and treated as suggested.

Alexander Montgomery and Wm. Nicholson report a splendid show at Philadelphia and excellent promises of support for the coming meetings of the carnation and rose societies.

Galvin is showing some very fine spikes of zygopetalum grown by Reed, of Whitman.

We have an idea that New England has at least one rose house larger than the "largest in the world." For full particulars apply to Wm. H. Elliott, Brighton, Mass., or better still, call at Madbury, N. H.

Members of the New England Cemetery Association held a field day at North Easton on November 8. The Ames Shovel Works and the estates of Mrs. Oliver Ames and F. L. Ames were visited.

N. F. McCarthy & Co. held auction sales of hardy roses and other Dutch grown stock on November 3 and 7. Very fair prices were realized.

Three additional independent candidates are in the field, all for trustees for three years, at the coming election of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society on November 18. They are Peter Fisher, C. W. Parker and A. H. Fewkes. W. Wheeler is not now a candidate.

Mrs. A. W. Blake exhibited a handsome specimen of Zygopetalum Mackaii at Horticultural hall on October 28, which received a cultural certificate.

Stockholders at the Park street flower market elected the following officers at the recent annual meeting: President, W. C. Stickel; vice-president, Wm. Nicholson; treasurer, Geo. Cartwright; directors, E. Sutermeister, L. W. Mann, W. W. Edgar, Alex Montgomery, A. Kidder and Allen Peirce.

Pres., W. H. Grenell, Saginaw, W. S., Mich.; First Vice-Pres., L. L. May, St. Paul; Sec'y and Treas., C. E. Kendel, Cleveland. The 24th annual meeting will be held at San Jose, Cal., June, 1906.

VISITED CHICAGO: Adolph Corneli, of Shisler-Corneli Seed Co., St. Louis.

THE prospects for the seed trade in the southwest are unusually bright this season.

THE Leonard Seed Co., Chicago, is enlarging its dealing in flower seeds in wholesale quantities.

SEARS, ROEBUCK & Co., Chicago, general mail order house, are offering florists and seedsmen a surplus list of bulbs.

FROM Sedalia, Mo., comes word of the incorporation of Archias Seed Store, L. H. Archias president, L. A. Kipping vice-president, L. Archias secretary.

ONION growers in the vicinity of Bloomington, Ill., have become discouraged because of repeated crop failures and very few gardeners here will plant onions next year.

BETHLEHEM township, Clark county, Indiana, is the great sunflower-seed producing locality, the yield this year approximating 100 tons. Edward S. and Charles E. Pernet handle the bulk of the product of the community.

JEROME B. RICE SEED Co., Cambridge, N. Y., is distributing a pamphlet containing descriptions of the leading varieties of onions with half-tone illustrations. They say Southport Red Globe is the only red onion to grow for profit.

THE flat varieties of seed used for onion set growing are scarce enough, according to reports, to warrant the following prices for good-size quantities: Yellow, $1; red, $1.10; white, $1.40. Smaller lots go at an advance of 10 cents per pound.

WATKINS & SIMPSON, London, say that two years' experience has confirmed them in the belief that there is a great want of high class half-tones for illustrating seed catalogues. They have just issued their third catalogue of such illustrations. It is a fine piece of printing.

THE seedsmen from whom the U. S. Department of Agriculture bought those lots of adulterated clover and grass seed with one voice arise to explain that they bought that seed from so and so, and that they didn't know it was mixed. Why didn't they know?

S. ALBILSON, of the L. L. Olds Seed Co., Clinton, Wis., says that "After some years' experience we find large appropriations and a large number of papers of general circulation do not net in returns anything like what it did a few years ago, that is, for the amount of money expended. At the present time we think it best not to increase the appropriation and to use only those papers that we find paid in direct returns."

FORT SMITH, ARK.—The flower show held in Lee's seed store, November 9 to 11, by the lady managers of the Belle Point Hospital, for the benefit of the hospital, was a decided success, this being the third annual flower show held there.

THERE is no let up to the demand for dependable stocks of the Globe onions. Seed of these varieties is in active demand at $2.50 to $3 per pound. Reports from the localities where onion growing for market is scientifically practiced prove that growers there will pay fancy prices for the reliable article.

As reported in the REVIEW some time ago, there is quite a quantity of the canners' varieties available for seed in the hands of people not formerly growers of seed sweet corn, but who were led into growing it on account of the high price two years ago. This fact, it is thought, will have considerable bearing upon the price of sweet corn next spring.

It is reported that many of the onion set dealers are oversold. The cleaning up process and a general rounding up of the quantities supposed to be still available shows a shortage where a surplus was thought to exist. January shipments are likely to show a still greater shortage, as the sets now in the warehouses are bound to shrink more than usual on account of the dry rot in the whites and a sprouting in the yellows and reds.

THE receiving of beans at the growing stations has begun in earnest. The farmers report that the fall has been an unusually good one for thrashing and that very little loss has taken place while the beans have been in the straw. They feel that all the beans there were at harvest time will show up in good shape after passing through the thrasher. A considerable shrink is often caused by rainy weather after harvest and it is fortunate that this will not be the case this year.

WITH the completion of the new four-story brick warehouse now in course of erection, the Texas Seed & Floral Co., Dallas, will considerably widen their operations. They will have half an acre of floor space, side track, power cleaning machinery, etc. The first floor will be used for storing heavy field seeds and shipping heavy freight orders. The second floor will be used for mail and express orders and the general offices. The third floor will be for the storage of implements, poultry and bee keepers' supplies and reserve stock. The fourth floor for the storage of seeds and sundry supplies.

GOOD SEED CORN.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture has published, as Farmers' Bulletin No. 229, the Production of Good Seed Corn, by C. P. Hartley, with an appendix on the selection and care of seed corn. In the opinion of the writer, the farmer who will produce a productive strain of corn adapted to his section will be able to sell good seed at a price profitable alike to himself and to those who buy, and will become a public benefactor.

"The object of this bulletin is to outline as simple a method of producing well-bred seed corn of high productive character as present experience and experiments have proved possible. This method is especially adapted to the production of seed corn on a considerable scale either for the use of the grower or for sale to others whose soil and climatic conditions are similar. Of course it is not recommended that every corn raiser follow the method here outlined, but it will pay any farmer who grows corn on a considerable scale to adopt this or some similar method unless he is able to secure improved seed from some reliable local seed-corn breeder. Those who grow less than twenty acres of corn may find it cheaper to pay $3 or even $5 per bushel for well-bred seed, if it can be obtained, than to follow a careful method of corn improvement simply in order to produce their own seed."

The Market.

The past week was a trying one for the local florists. Quite a number report a big week's business and the show kept them on the jump during the day and evening. Stock at the wholesale houses is fairly plentiful, especially chrysanthemums and roses. The fancy grades of mums are coming in much more freely, while the poorer grades are plentiful. They move slowly at cheap prices. Among the best seen are Eaton, Pink Ivory, Mme. Perrin, Col. Appleton and Duckham. Only the special grades bring $4 per dozen.

Carnations are selling quite well, though handicapped by the increased quantity of mums. Some extra fine stock of Mrs. Lawson, Enchantress, Boston Market, Lady Bountiful and Estelle can be had. Roses, too, are in fine shape but sold very slowly the past week. Beauty, Richmond, Bride and Maid are included.

California and double violets have a big call and are about the only clean sellers at present. Prices on extra fancy single go up to 75 cents per hundred. Lily of the valley has some call, but plenty of it is in the market. Smilax is selling slow. Other greens are plentiful.

Various Notes.

The Shaw banquet was given under the will of the late Henry Shaw, by trustees of the Missouri Botanic Garden, Wednesday evening, November 8, at the Mercantile Club, to florists, nurserymen and market gardeners. The banquet hall was neatly decorated by Fred Pope. Covers were laid for 100 and Prof. Wm. Trelease was toast-master. The following florists were in attendance: J. F. Ammann, C. A. Kuehn, A. Jablonsky, Emil Schray, F. J. Fillmore, R. F. Tesson, Phil Gieble and J. J. Beneke. The toasts responded to were "The Gardens," by George E. McClure; "The Florist," by President J. F. Ammann; "The Nurseryman," by E. A. Riehl, of Alton, Ill.; "The Pomologist," L. A. Goodman, president of the American Pomological Society; "The Market Gardener," by L. C. Davis, of Old Orchard, Mo.; "The Federated Interests," by Prof. H. C. Irish, of the National Council of Horticulture; "School Gardens," by Prof. W. J. Stevens; "Playgrounds," by Gerard Swope, and "General Civic Work," by Henry T. Kent, president of the Civic Improvement League. The banquet was voted the best given in years.

The Missouri Botanic Garden is giving a chrysanthemum show at the garden, to which the public is invited free.

George Waldbart made a grand display of chrysanthemums the past week at his place on Grand avenue, which attracted a great deal of attention from passersby attending the local show.

A. Jablonsky is sending in a fine lot of carnations and roses. Henry Braun, his foreman, says that his stock is as fine as any of the stock shipped from Chicago and other points.

Swan Peterson, of Gibson City, Ill., had on exhibition during the show a fine lot of seedling carnations.

Joseph F. Dickmann, formerly of the firm of Dustard & Dickmann, seedsmen, is now in the real estate business.

Harry Young, Will Young, W. J. Pilcher and W. E. Burrows, who visited Chicago last week, were much impressed with what they saw at the flower show in that city.

Arthur Ellison left Tuesday for Kansas City to stage their entries made for the show there this week.

On Friday during the flower show, the REVIEW, bringing the news of the Chicago show, was eagerly looked over by Adolph Poehlmann, Joe Hill and Alex Wilson to see how they came out at the big Chicago show. Each one was supplied with a copy of the big issue.

The florist bowlers lost three games November 7 to the Hyde Parks. The last two were lost by six pins. Bad splits in each game lost the match to the florists. Meinhardt and Kuehn were high, with 547 each. Ellison came next, 522; Beneke, 467, and Lohrenz 453. November 14 they met the Kerns. J. J. B.

PITTSBURG.

The Market.

The past week was quite strenuous with most of the retailers, Randolph & McClements, Mrs. E. A. Williams and A. W. Smith having all they could possibly do and the other retailers coming in a close second, debutantes claiming most of the attention. The wholesale houses have been handling large quantities of chrysanthemums and such other good stock as they have been able to get. On the whole it has been a very satisfactory week. The Pittsburg Cut Flower Co. says it handled more chrysanthemums last week than any week since it has been in business, although prices have not been what they should have been.

Various Notes.

E. C. Ludwig has been rushing things in the Allegheny market. His daily show of mums is worth a trip to the market any time and some of the stock is finer than the average show stock.

Last Tuesday evening was club night and, although it was state election night, the meeting was the best and the attendance the largest for a long time. Chrysanthemums were the topic and a beautiful display of blooms was made. Nathan Smith & Son, Adrian, Mich., showed a very handsome lot and several varieties, such as Brighthurst, Mayor Weaver, a pink of the Maud Dean type; Launona, white, and a new yellow without a label, promise to be important additions. Chal Peterson, of East Liverpool, was at the meeting with his new Yellow Queen. It is the exact Queen type, only yellow in color and is a sport from Queen. Mr. Peterson gave a practical demonstration of his method of making cuttings, which was interesting. A handsome collection of pompons was shown by Thos. Meehan & Sons, of Philadelphia, which Mr. Falconer recommended to the growers, and especially the private gardeners, as good things to have, as they make a bright spot in the garden when all other flowers are gone. He does not grow them himself for the reason that out where he is they have so much smoke that by the time they come into bloom they are all one color in Pittsburg.

Fred Burki displayed Eaton, white and yellow; Maud Dean, Chadwick, Bonaffon, Ivory and several others which on the authority of Mr. Randolph were the best commercial varieties and sizes shown. C. Goodwin & Sons, of Bridgeville, showed a vase of smaller stock, including their Pearl, which is much like Ivory and a splendid thing.

Mr. Jenkinson had a collection of blooms from pot plants which were grand. His vase of carnations, with stems eighteen inches long, was as fine as we expect to see this season. Mr. Hatch, gardener for D. McClemons, showed mums which were fine, also a collection of orchid blooms which were especially fine and interested everyone and caused some discussion as to whether Pittsburg could support an orchid grower, which was taken up by W. A. Clarke, who declared without hesitation that there is a market here for the right varieties.

John Jones, of Schenley park, was there with the goods fine as silk, the finest varieties and blooms, but even that is only part of it; you need to see John handle them, and if you are observing and notice the love touches and the coy way he peeps into his flowers you will

Vegetable Forcing.

VEGETABLE MARKETS.

BOSTON, November 14.—Cucumbers, No. 1, $5 to $7 box; No. 2, $1.50 to $3 box; tomatoes, 15 to 20c lb.; radishes, 75c to $1 box; lettuce, 25 to 50c doz. heads.

NEW YORK, November 13.—Cucumbers, 50c to $1 doz.; head lettuce, 25 to 75c doz.; mushrooms, 10 to 60c lb.; tomatoes, 5 to 15c lb.

CHICAGO, November 15.—Cucumbers, 50c to $1 doz.; leaf lettuce, 10 to 20c case; head lettuce, 50c to $1 box.

USE OF ELECTRIC LIGHT.

In response to a question as to the value and efficacy of electric light in promoting the growth of vegetables, W. W. Rawson stated, at a recent meeting of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society, that he has made use of it for seven or eight years and has found that it improved the quality and increased the production of vegetables grown under glass. He used it mostly on days in which there is a lack of sunshine and in the winter season when the nights are long. He estimates that it increases the growth fifteen per cent and appears to be of greater benefit to a crop of cucumbers than to lettuce.

VEGETABLE PLANTS.

I should be glad to have you tell me something about the use and management of hotbeds for raising early vegetable plants. O. C.

The best time to prepare hotbeds is the month of February. The exact date will depend on location and weather to a certain extent. Should the weather be severely cold, it is better to wait until it moderates a little, so as not to waste too much of the heat given off by the heating medium. The best material is litter from the horse stable. This should be piled up and turned over two or three times before making up the hotbed, so as to have the whole well mixed to insure an even heat. If dry, it should be moderately moistened.

A pit sunk to a depth of about four feet is the best place for the bed. Here it will retain the heat better than if made above ground, or it may be partly sunk and partly over ground, if desired.

The material should be put in in layers and each layer well firmed. The firmer the whole is made, the better it will retain the heat. The frame should be put over the bed a few days after making up and a thermometer inserted in the material to indicate the temperature. When this falls to about 80 degrees, cover over with about three inches of soil. Let it remain so for a few days, until the temperature has fallen to about 70 degrees; then the seeds may safely be sown.

We prefer to sow in flats, as when the seedlings are large enough the flats can be carried to some place convenient for pricking out with less danger of injury to the plants than would be the case if they have to be lifted from the bed. Prick the seedlings into flats again and set back in the frame as soon as possible. All that is necessary after this is to keep them well watered and the air regulated, so as to maintain a temperature of 80 degrees by day, with sun heat, and 60 degrees at night. As the plants attain size and the weather becomes warmer, they should be gradually exposed to the weather, until they are hard enough to be left uncovered both night and day. W. S. CROYDON.

PACIFIC COAST.

ORNAMENTAL STOCK WANTED.

It is a peculiar fact that the acreage devoted by nurseries in California to the cultivation of ornamental trees and shrubs is not increasing in the ratio shown by our population or by the steadily growing demand for such stock. Within the past twenty years, a great many places of considerable size have gone entirely out of this branch of the business and there do not seem to be many volunteers to enter it. Before the era of growing cut flowers under glass every nurseryman, unless he made a specialty of fruit trees, devoted a portion of his ground to the cultivation of strictly ornamental trees and shrubbery. With the passing away of many of the pioneers in this line, and the constant growth of our towns, in many cases making the land too valuable to devote to such purposes, a great change has been brought about. With the younger generation everything has been invested in glass, either for roses, carnations or house plants, and the slower growing material has been overlooked.

The fact that much quicker returns can be had from glass than from a field of ornamental stock is the entire reason without a doubt, for it certainly cannot be claimed that there is any lessening in the demand for well grown, hardy shrubbery. It takes several years before they become marketable, but prices are good and from my observations they will not be any cheaper for many years to come. The remarkable growth of many of our towns and the interest shown by people of wealth in the planting of gardens and parks has created a demand that the California nurserymen cannot handle. Much stock is imported from the eastern states and Europe, but the risk involved and the expensive transportation charges, together with the fact that a great deal of our most desirable stock is of such a nature that it is not grown to any extent in other climates, makes it a difficult thing for the landscape gardener to have his wants supplied on short notice.

We have had many large nurseries on this coast that have been and are at present engaged in the growing of fruit trees, and also several devoted exclusively to the growing of roses, but these firms specialize and their output does not figure very extensively when some wealthy citizen wishes to plant an acre or two of garden, or a landscape gardener desires to lay out a public park.

There is no special scarcity of greenhouse plants, owing to the fact that in almost all our towns of any size, small growers have located and catered to this branch of the trade. It is entirely of the ornamental side of the question, and I am inclined to think that there will be a great scarcity of hardy shrubbery in a very few years, the signs of which are now visible everywhere. For it is a fact that we are making but little provision for the demand which is bound to become greater with each succeeding year and to supply it necessitates being in the business for several years at least, to have anything of sufficient size to be desirable for immediate effect.

PORTLAND, ORE.

State of Business.

The predictions of calamity howlers, which preceded the closing of the fair, that business would take a sharp downward trend, have not yet materialized. It is true that we miss the honored guests of the summer season and the festivities calling for much decorative work, but there is an every-day, healthy tone which is preferable to spasmodic leaps and bounds. October was good and November promises to be better. There is an abundance of all seasonable stock, par excellence in quality, with very little imported. Home talent has made great progress in the past two years and is playing to crowded houses. The chrysanthemum shows greater perfection than ever before and is the star attraction. It holds a season ticket good until the new year. We seem to have an ideal climate for this production and there is no limit to them. A foot-ball contest every few days is needed to relieve the surplus. Some truly magnificent blooms are displayed at the stores. The advance of the chrysanthemums is always given a warm welcome by the Portland public and are now creating as much comment and more admiration than the head officials of a life insurance company. In other lines of stock there is enough for all demands.

Various Notes.

Although L. G. Pfunder realized a handsome sum from his Washington street property, he is still active in harness and has opened another up-to-date store, at 145 Sixth street, with the Misses Pfunder in charge. It is also understood that a fine residence is to be built in Portland Heights, where our pioneer florist will reside among the smart set.

Tonseth Bros., of Mt. Tabor, heretofore wholesalers only, will open a retail store next week, one block below Mr. Pfunder, in the center of the business district. The fever of competition is spreading.

That W. S. Sibson has found rose culture a paying venture, and believes in the growing prosperity of the northwest, is evident by the fact that he is building three new houses 34x200 feet. Mr. Sibson is also a large grower of hardy roses and makes the rose a specialty.

SAN FRANCISCO.

The Market.

The weather continues warm and dry and we are badly in need of a few showers. There has been no frost thus far and outdoor stock of all kinds holds out well. Yellow mums, which are all the rage at this time, seem to have improved in quality during the past week and there is now no trouble for the florists to fill orders for them. Roses are not plentiful and carnations are in about the same supply as at the last writing. There is no rush of business, but all the stock offered is being used up without trouble. Violets are in fair supply and sell well. Valley and lilies are only offered in small quantities. The dealers all expect a big harvest on Friday and Saturday for the inter-collegiate football game.

RHODE ISLAND FEDERATION.

A new movement has been inaugurated in the state of Rhode Island that bids fair to be of the greatest value to the horticultural and kindred interests, not only of the state, but also of New England and the whole United States. On October 24, at Kingston, a gathering of representatives of each of the horticultural and agricultural societies of the state organized a body known as the Agricultural Federation of Rhode Island. George N. Bliss, of East Providence, was elected chairman, and Prof. H. J. Wheeler, of Kingston, chosen secretary. It will be the duty of this organization to represent the state as a whole in matters horticultural and agricultural that are of general interest, such as recommending the appropriations for the various societies, framing laws to control insects, and any other needs of the state, as a whole. The following societies, through their delegates, also named below, compose the charter members of the federation: Rhode Island Horticultural Society, Judge George N. Bliss, East Providence; Providence Florists' and Gardeners' Club, William E. Chappell; Providence; Rhode Island Poultry Association, R. G. Davis, Providence; Washington County Agricultural Society, Rowland G. Hazard, Peace Dale; Rhode Island State Grange, Frank W. Marchant, West Kingston; Rhode Island Agricultural College, Thomas G. Mathewson, East Greenwich; Newport Horticultural Society, Col. Andrew K. McMahon, Newport; Rhode Island State Board of Agriculture, Phillip A. Money, Slocum; Newport County Agricultural Society, Isaac L. Sherman, Melville Station.

ZERO.

STONE WALLS.

We have written to some of the builders of greenhouses asking for information in regard to using stone walls for greenhouses, but they are too anxious to sell posts, etc., to be favorable and we thought we would ask you if you could ask some of your correspondents to discuss their desirability and also how heavy they should be and how best to attach the roof to them. If you can help us and perhaps others, in the matter, we shall be very grateful.

Z. K. J.

This question of stone walls for greenhouses has been frequently discussed in these columns and I may say that the general opinion among growers seems to be in favor of the ordinary wooden wall, placed on a foundation of concrete. My own experience with stone, brick or cement for walls has not been satisfactory, as I have found that frost will penetrate and stay in the material, and, of course, this has a cooling effect on the house. Builders are compelled to offer in their catalogues just what the majority of growers demand, and what the majority demand is usually determined after many years of trial.

During the fall, when passing through Williamsport, Pa., I called on D. E. Gorman and found him just completing a nice block of houses, the walls of which were concrete, but instead of using gravel with his cement he was using coal ashes, which, he assured me, were preferable, making a lighter, tougher and less absorbent wall. Doubtless he would be able to give you some useful information along these lines.

Having no building material to sell, I hope Z. K. J. will keep me out of that category when I still advise him from an economic and utilitarian point of view, to build his walls of wood, as recommended by most of the construction firms, and he will be surely satisfied.

Galax wreaths, which in some places were a short time since all the go, have now given way to wreaths of the common box. Box is so largely grown and cheap and cut flower workers everywhere might do worse than give this material a trial.

THE WM H. MOON CO., MORRISVILLE, PA.

A COIL HEATER.

In southern California I wish to heat with a coil boiler having a double loop, that is, eight pipes in the lower coil and seven pipes in the coils between the plates, which make the fire travel twice the length of the upper section above the fire box. I can use 1½-inch pipe for the coils or 1¼-inch if they will do. The coils will be three feet long and eight runs of pipe to two and seven to the other two, making ninety lineal feet of pipe. Of course the coil used for the grate will not heat much. My house is 45x105. I shall have to run the riser or risers under the gutters, which are six feet from the ground. The east, or highest, end is four feet higher than the west. How many runs of 1¼-inch or 1½-inch pipe will I need to heat it to 50 or 55 degrees with the temperature outside at 25 degrees above zero? It has never been colder here than that, but the usual temperature is for two or three hours 32 to 36 degrees. Will the heater do the work, or will it need an extra set of coils? How far below the surface should the heater be placed to insure good circulation? I shall have a straight drop of about three feet at the heater and a gradual drop of six feet, making a drop of nine feet.

A. L. H.

I fear the plan of the heater you propose exposes too great a length of pipe to the action of the fire. As planned, the water must travel twelve feet through looped pipes the full length of which is exposed to the action of heated gases. I believe it would be better to make the furnace, say, four feet in length and use a single loop above the fire. This would give eight feet instead of twelve in contact with the heated gases. If it is desirable to use the partitioned fire-box, carry the returns and riser from one side of the house to the coil just over the fire and the flow and returns from the other side of the house to the coil above the partition in the furnace. The heater planned is capable of supplying heat for about 350 square feet of radiation, while even in your climate the house, 45x105 feet, should have at least 700 feet of radiation in it. To supply this with 1½-inch pipe would require thirteen lines of pipe the length of the house. If you were to build two furnaces such as you propose and connect one with each of the two coils, using six lines of pipe in one and seven in the other, about the right amount of piping and heat would be provided, in reality two furnaces, each carrying ninety lineal feet of 1½-inch pipe.

L. C. C.

TAR ON PIPES.

Will you please tell me how to check the odor of tar? I have some heating pipes painted with it. I have scraped the pipes but the odor remains. With what would you paint?

W. T.

I know of no way to check the odor of tar in the houses as long as tar remains upon the pipes. If the pipes are carefully scraped and painted with asphaltum varnish it may check the trouble.

A Visit to Smith.

T. Magee, R. Wechtel and the writer took a trip to Adrian, Mich., recently to inspect the mums at Nathan Smith & Son's place. We were very sorry not to find Elmer Smith at home, he being in Philadelphia. His wife was in charge of their exhibit in Chicago. But under the leadership of Mr. Smith's foreman we saw many things worth looking at. All the best old varieties, lots of new ones and then the seedlings. To go into a detailed description of the varieties would be a Herculean task, except to the catalogue man. The show is immense and all this fine stuff produced in three and three and one-half inches of soil without any mulch, with nothing but care, attention and chemicals! Lots of the earlier stock had been cut but there were still many sorts in prime shape. A couple of benches of Chadwick coming on looked immense.

Various Notes.

Business is beginning to pick up.

Our next club meeting, to be held November 15, is bound to be a corker. George Rackham, of Detroit, and C. Winterich, of Defiance, and some others are going to show cyclamens. As there will also be a lot of mums we expect this meeting to beat the previous ones. Invitations have been sent to the florists in neighboring towns to attend and we hope some of them will join the club.

GIVE THE DETAILS.

I enclose rough pencil draft of green-houses with proposed additions, which owing to the unevenness of the ground I am at a loss to know just how to run heater pipes. I will install a new water heater. Will have to run the house across the other two on account of the slope of the ground and can hardly see how to pipe it and get the pipes out of the way. I will have to cross paths and beds and go under doors, etc. Would it be best to put 2-inch flows overhead and use some 4-inch returns under the bench? The present piping has never been satisfactory. Does it need more piping?

W. W. N.

I am sorry to say I can not even so much as guess at the amount of or the way to arrange the pipes in these houses from the data given. Neither the sketch nor the letter give dimensions of the houses already built or those proposed to be built. I think that with a good ground plan, giving dimensions of the houses, with a general description of their uses and the slope of the ground, a plan for heating can be worked out. Send the figures we have so often said were essential—length, width, slope of roof and height of side walls, together with desired location of heating plant, and state whether steam or hot water is to be used.

L. C. C.

RADIATION AND BOILER.

Will you please tell me what size boiler and how many and what size pipe I need to heat three greenhouses 22x75 with steam to 55 degrees when the outside temperature is 10 degrees above zero? Also tell me the heating capacity of a four horse-power tubular boiler.

A. W.

The boiler to heat the three houses in question with steam should have a rated capacity for about 2,000 feet of radiation. A twenty horse-power boiler will be sufficient to do the work. Each house should have a 2½-inch flow pipe under the ridge, divided at the end of the house most distant from the boiler to return through fourteen 1¼-inch pipes distributed under the benches of the house. Five or six of the returns in each house should be provided with valves so that during mild weather they can be put out of commission. A four horse-power boiler will provide heat for about 400 feet of radiation.

L. C. C.

ABUNDANCE (White)

The phenomenal yielder, the freest, earliest bloomer in existence, the most profitable carnation ever offered to the trade, easily gives four times as many flowers as the freest bloomer already introduced; a bench planted Aug. 31 is now in full bloom to which there will be no let up until thrown out next summer; come and see it, it will pay you if you are in the market for a carnation that will give you plenty of flowers at all times and not only at certain times. A good size, long stemmed flower. You can make no mistake by stocking up with it. Price for well-rooted cuttings, $10.00 per 100; $75.00 per 1000; 500 at 1000 rate; cuttings delivered as soon as rooted; send in your order early as orders are filled in strict rotation. Unrooted cuttings at same rates with 25 extra on each 100. Cash before delivery.

NATURAL GAS.

We have a small greenhouse, a lean-to 11x28, with continuous ventilators at the ridge and connected by 6x8 double doors with our dwelling. We heat the greenhouse with a coal stove. Could we safely use natural gas in this stove by taking extra precautions to ventilate well, such as introducing fresh air through the house in very bad weather?

A. E. Z.

The introduction of natural gas to your greenhouse is likely to lead to poor results, no matter how freely you ventilate. There would be no trouble could you secure such good piping that there would be no leakage, and perfect combustion, but these are practically out of the question.

KNOXVILLE, TENN.

Prof. Charles E. Keffer, of the University, whose skill in stimulating interest in beautifying gardens, attention of flowers and many other good things, is widely known, on November 10 and 11 furnished an interesting lesson along the line of floral decoration, etc.

The annex of Barbara Blount hall, on the university grounds, was arranged to afford an attractive lesson on the use of chrysanthemums, especially for home decoration. The exhibition did not aim at size, illustrating high culture or great variety of the popular flowers, but rather such results as may be secured by the amateur, or indeed any lover of things beautiful, even with very limited ground or opportunity for much culture.

Illustrations of decorations with ordinary chrysanthemums were given. Prof. Keffer had in view the results within reach of almost any visitor and did much to encourage the efforts of modest students of things that make home beautiful and living more cheerful.

Within a few years, relatively, Knoxville has learned many things and the efforts of our florists have given good instruction.

WASHINGTON.

November 7 was chrysanthemum night at the Washington Florists' Club. An exhibition of these flowers was prepared, chiefly through the efforts of F. H. Kramer, at Schmidt's Hall, and was viewed with great interest by nearly all the members of the organization. Many new chrysanthemums were shown.

Mr. Kramer also exhibited for the first time the new pink rose, which he has named Queen Beatrice. It is a soft pink in color, and Mr. Kramer makes the claim that it is better in every respect for commercial purposes than Bridesmaid. He says it will produce twice as many blooms as Bridesmaid. Mr. Kramer was awarded the first-class certificate for the rose. He will not place it on the market until the beginning of 1907, and in the meantime will exhibit it throughout the country. A new pink carnation, named F. H. Kramer, was exhibited as well as two new ferns.

SPARTA, WIS.—The Sparta Greenhouses were illuminated on the evenings of November 9 to 11 and a very successful fall opening was held.

BATAVIA, N. Y.—Paul Liebsch has had many visitors at his greenhouses on West Main street this season, because of the exceptionally fine showing of chrysanthemums this season.

The preliminary schedule for the exhibition at Boston, March 22 to 26, has been issued. The usual classes are maintained, with an unusually long list of special premiums. The complete schedule will be issued shortly in connection with the regular schedule of the Massachusetts Horticultural Society. Copies may be had by addressing Wm. J. Stewart or W. P. Rich, secretaries of the societies.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SOCIETY.

The second and third prizes to be consolation for the worthy competitors who fail to win. This offer is made by H. C. THE S. A. F. MEDAL.

The presentation of the S. A. F. bronze medal for school gardens to the Dennison school at Washington is of more than passing interest to the florists throughout the United States. I want to say, personally, that I did not feel that I could spare the time to present this medal, but the school committee finally put it in such a way, stating that I should designate my own time; therefore I felt it was a public duty, and finally agreed to present it on the date mentioned in the REVIEW last week.

I want to say further that I am particularly pleased that I should have been the medium by which this medal was transmitted from the Society of American Florists to the Dennison school; it was one of the most pleasant incidents of my whole life. You can imagine better than I can tell you a scene of 450 little children, girls and boys from the various grades, come marching in through two entrances in the lecture hall, each holding up in his right hand an American Beauty rose. It was really a picture that I am sorry every member of the Society of American Florists and every florist in the United States, for that matter, could not witness. All the daily papers here spoke of it.

Personally, I feel this little bronze medal has done the encouragement of floral culture more good than the S. A. F. has ever done to my knowledge.

At the conclusion of the presentation there was another magnificent scene, viz., the Chautauqua salute. The 450 children rose to their feet, waving snowy white handkerchiefs.

The Market.

Business the past week was somewhat one-sided, some being busy while others looked on. There seems to be plenty of funeral work and, as the market is stocked with short roses and other flowers for work, no one is kicking. Cupid seems to have taken a vacation, as weddings are not as plentiful as in some former years.

Mums are finding a ready sale at the wholesalers', bringing from $4 to $15 per hundred. Pinks are quite scarce. Roses, at least good ones, are also at a premium. A number of Canadian-grown roses find their way into this market.

Carnations are about as scarce as coal was two years ago, poor stock selling as high as $3 per hundred. Violets are also quite scarce. One grower is getting $1 per hundred for some extra-fine flowers. The small shipments from Mt. Clemens account for this shortage. There is just about enough smilax and other green to go around. Wild smilax and leucothoe sprays have again put in their appearance.

Various Notes.

There is talk of a bowling match in the near future, between the growers and retailers, for a bonus and something to eat.

Alexander Common reports his trade as having increased materially since moving out Woodward avenue.

The deepest sympathy is felt for J. F. Sullivan and Thomas and George Browne, losing their fathers the past week. Mr. Sullivan, who was attending the Chicago show, was called east suddenly.

Strassburg hall was decorated very prettily for the Haleyon Club's ball by Walter Taepke.

He was well known in all parts of Canada and by many in the United States, where he lived for some years. He was the pioneer of the business in Ottawa, and has built up a very fine business in plants and cut flowers, one of the finest in Canada. He was respected by all and loved by many for his conspicuous good qualities. He leaves a widow, one daughter and two sons.

WHY BUILD BIG?

We believe thoroughly in the large even span house for cut flower growers. Believe in them so strong that we have made this little diagram just to show you our reasons. To start with, the single house (A) has the same amount of glass surface as houses B-B, yet heated with less fuel. (A) has 26% additional air space—more uniform degree of temperature and moisture—increased circulation of air, better ventilation. The greater mass of heat is a protection against sudden outside changes—gutter, ridges, sash, header, roof of one B shades other B greater part of the day (see diagram C). Last, but the one on which the entire matter really hinges, a saving of from 15 to 20% in fuel, some even claim 25%. Of course We build any form of house you prefer. If you intend building this spring take the matter up with us NOW so you will be ready THEN. Send for Catalog J-G.
